Selectmen Out To Remove Police From Civil Service

On a vote of 2-1, with Selectman Rocco Laugelle voting no, selectmen said last week they would submit to annual town meeting an article asking that police officers be taken out of Civil Service.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said the proposed article would not attempt to remove fire department personnel from Civil Service as thus far selectmen had no problem with any individual from the department.

At the 1979 annual town meeting selectmen came within less than 10 votes of achieving their 1980 objective.

In a similar article at the 1979 annual meeting, the police chief's position was voted out of Civil Service.

While it has been rumored that it would be difficult to fill the chief's position which now falls out of the protection of Civil Service at a reduced salary, apparently the police chief selection committee has had no lack of applicants for Police Chief Randolph Feola's job which he will retire from July, 1980.

At last week's meeting Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark cited various problems with Civil Service over the past year, including trady police officer appointment lists, appeals to Civil Service which cost the town "thousands of dollars," and in general the selectmen's inability to deal with the cumbersom organization of Civil Service which he said costs the town extra overtime dollars by its lax ways.

"We can't (under Civil Service) get rid of the guy who sits on his backside and does nothing," Clark told his board last week.

In an interview following last week's meeting, Clark said if the town should vote to rid itself of Civil Service this Spring, selectmen would offer in its place a town mental and physical exam, and would invite the personnel board to participate more fully in hiring and suspension matters. "But all that would have to be worked out," Clark said.

In an attempt to dramatize the situation which Civil Service has put the state into, Clark said:

"Only one other state has a system like ours — New Jersey."

While Clark admitted that over the past year selectmen

A Special Kind Of Visitor

By Peter Barnicle

This is a sort of "George Washington-slept-here" piece in that the subject's only connection with Cohasset is that he visited here several times over the past twenty years for no other reason than to spend a quiet weekend.

However, in looking back I have to consider Sean MacBride the most dynamic personality I have ever encountered. And he came to mind again during the past week when newscasts and wire service stories out of Teheran mentioned that he was in Iran seeking to negotiate release of the 50 Americans being held hostage.

Although who he represents has not been made clear, MacBride is a veteran member of the United Nations secretariat and chances are he is the representative of UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

MacBride's background as an international troubleshooter is impressive. A former Foreign Minister of Ireland, he became a member of the Secretariat in the late 1950's. He was named Executive Secretary of the International Commission of Jurists at Geneva and later served as chairman of Amnesty International. In both posts his major objective was the protection of human rights.

His work with these organizations was considered outstanding and in 1974 he received the Nobel Peace Prize. Three years later he was awarded the Lenin Peace Prize. He has more recently been UN Commissioner in South West Africa, seeking a solution for that racially troubled area.

Working with revolutionaries is nothing new to MacBride. During his younger days in Ireland he was active in the Irish Republican Army — long before that organization went Marxist and embarked on its campaign of terror. As a lawyer he acted as defense counsel for several members back in the 1940's.

In 1947 he founded Clann n Poblachta, a political party with the objective of ending the partition of Ireland. He became foreign minister in the coalition government which toppled DeValera from power in 1948.

MacBride comes by his understanding of revolutionaries naturally. His father, Major John MacBride, was one of the leaders of the 1916 Easter Uprising who was shot by the British. The elder MacBride had fought against the British in the Boer War and returned to Ireland to take up the cause of his own country.

Sean MacBride's mother was Madame Maud Gonne MacBride, a legend even while still alive. She was known as "the most beautiful woman in Europe" and was the inspiration for most of the love poems of William Butler Yeats.

The daughter of a British army officer stationed in Dublin, she gave up her social position with 'the Castle crowd' to work among the poor in the West of Ireland and later became active in politics. Her activities took her to France where she became involved in the Boulangist movement, to England and to the United States where she toured — not the drawing rooms of Boston, New York and Philadelphia, but the mining camps of Montana and Colorado.

Ringing For - The Hostages

If Noel Ripley, a former member of the U.S. Foreign Service, has anything to say about it, Iran's 50 American hostages will not be forgotten in Cohasset.

Since Dec. 18 Ripley and Rev. John Benbow have been ringing the bells of the First Parish and Congregational Churches mainly by themselves, with occasional assistance from Nickey Ripley, Paul Burke, Bill Becker and Ray Kasperowicz.

Ripley and Benbow intend to ring the bells of the two Cohasset churches every day at noontime for as long as the hostages are held by the Iranians. Hopefully, they will be assisted in their duties by additional volunteers. Although Ripley said he doesn't mind doing it alone. "It only takes a couple of minutes."

Ripley said the idea isn't original. "I only decided to do it when I heard the president request that towns and cities across the nation ring their bells for the prisoners."

As a former member of the U.S. Foreign Services for 10 years, Ripley is probably a little closer to the plight of the Americans in Iran than most of Cohasset. For many years he lived out of a suitcase, traveling throughout the world as a courier for the State Department.

Based in Frankfort, Germany for a large part of his State Department career, Ripley has travelled through Europe, the Middle East, Africa, Communist countries, Manilla, Australia, New Zealand, Saudi Arabia, Viet Nam, Panama and Central and South America and Canada.

Asked what he thought might happen to the Iranian hostages, Ripley said:

"I think the Iranians will hold a mock trial, and eventually free all hostages not directly connected with the CIA. Those connected will probably be held for a short time then released."

However, he said Americans should not rule out the possibility of the Iranians staging mob violence against the hostages.

But right now his faith is bigger than that.

Being A Police Officer Is The Most Difficult Job

Ptl. Brian Noonan, president of the Cohasset Police Association, reacted strongly but with some resignation to the fact that two members of the board of selectmen said they would resubmit an article to annual town meeting asking for police officers to be taken out of Civil Service.

"Let's face it. It's (being a police officer) is the most difficult job in this town. When I first came on the force I was told, 'The day you start you lose half of your friends. You start loosing the other half immediately.'"

Noonan said he questioned why selectmen are proposing to deal only with the police department and not the fire department in the manner. "If they're going to get rid of Civil Service, my feelings are that if it's really a problem to the town — get it out of town, entirely."

Noonan and other officers expressed that Civil Service, if it is cumbersome and imperfect, is at least not political.

"You can't let the town get involved in police matters — politics is too big a factor in a small town. Right now there is no problem, but who knows what will happen in the future?" Noonan said.

Should the town vote to remove police officers from Civil Service, Noonan pointed out, "Three fourths of the members of this department are in their early thirties. Most intend to stay here. Over the next 20-30 years only a handful of the men won't have Civil Service."

This he said would cause problems in hiring, firing procedures, promotional proceedings and the like.

He added that he knew why selectmen are singling out police officers in the article and not firemen. "You ask 100 people how they like the firmen and the police and 90 percent will respond that they like the firemen, while only 48 percent will say they like cops."

He stressed that the nature of a policeman's job exposes him to the politics of the town in various ways a fireman's doesn't.

Regarding the selectmen's discussion of testing police candidates through the town, Noonan said, "A lot of legal responsibilities go along with testing. The town is already paying out tax dollars for Civil Service to provide the same tests. Selectmen know nothing about the cost factor of testing. How can they expect people to buy it? But I think they (town meeting) will.

"I'm not asking for permanent, lifetime protection for these men. I'd even go along with a revolving board of police chiefs in the area to monitor something like this. But removing Civil Service from policemen?...all I can say is not within this little town."

'Physician East' Publishes Local Man

Early last Fall a local man wrote both a poetic and medical tribute to his father which appeared in the October 1979 issue of Physician East.

Robert Williams, Jr. of North Main Street, traced his father's exposure to asbestos in the early 1960's at the Hingham Shipyard through his death from pulmonary embolus on April 20, 1978. Many asbestosis victims die of a disease other than asbestosis when body reserves are broken down over a long period of time.

Williams' commentary was in response to an article entitled "Early Treatment of Asbestosis" by Robert Clubb, M.D. in the June 1979 issue of Physician East. Clubb is medical director and founder of the National Asbestos Foundation in Boston. Williams has since joined the foundation.

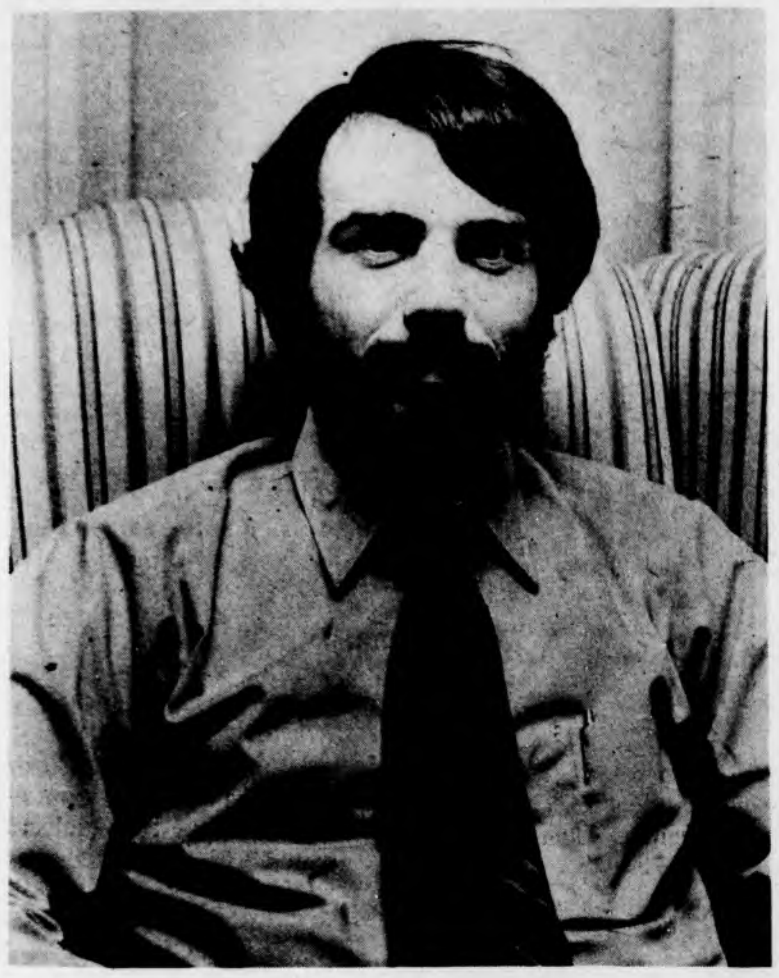
The Mariner talked with Williams last week, but found it difficult to add to his already published commentary — deciding, with the permission of Physician East, to publish excerpts here.

"The specific case of my father's death, and the agony of his suffering may only have meaning if such occurances can alter both the way disability itself is viewed, and the peculiar relationship between disability and the law, which plays no small role in how human misery is perceived and compensated.

"This moves closer to the realization so vividly brought home through the loss of my father...although the eventual outcome may be death, disability is a long-term proposition with many potential options for the time between onset and eventual outcome."

Williams noted how his father had over a period of time had to curtail social activities. "He stopped working in his yard as much. At home, dinner invitations were accepted less often because he was tired."

One month prior to his father's death, "There had been a 5-10 pound weight loss. A clotting disorder, often secondary to many tumors, began." By the time X-rays revealed suspicious areas in the lungs, it was "Too late. All we could do was reaffirm our love for each other and cry together. His cat would wait on the step each evening for a long while.



Robert Williams, Jr.

"Medically, as in the case of asbestosis, adequate criteria are lacking for identifying and diagnosising many disabilities.

"This is especially true of slowly progressive conditions tied closely to one's life style. Nothing seems to be done until the illness is catastrophic — a clearly identifiable syndrome.

"Currently, funds are often targeted to specific disabilities at the national and state level.

"Until something is found wrong 'in' the victim, we do not examine the world. Yet, disability is also in-the-world."

Until recently, "The world has excluded curb cuts, braille elevator floor numbers, planned architectural accessability, wide rest room doors.

"Legally, the most important piece of landmark legislation affecting the disabled, and hopefully our perspective on disability, was the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 which defined disability as any condition which substantially limits one or more of life's major activities.

"Disability by its nature is a catastrophic event which shocks not only the victim but also the rest of us who are potentially disabled as part of our existential fate. Because we often deny the fringes of human existence and the uncomfortable questions which flow from this region, we will not hear them if we do not listen carefully."

Mr. Donald Bates, executive vice president and treasurer of the Cohasset Savings Bank and Attorney Michael Savage have announced the formation of the South Shore Community Economic Development Corporation (SSCEDC) for economic development in the South Shore area.

SSCEDC has filed its charter papers with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and received the approval of the Small Business Administration to function as a local development company.

The first meeting of SSCEDC will be held on Jan. 8, 1980 for the 25 charter members. The officers for the development corporation will be Mr. Donald Bates, President and Dr. Michael Equi, Treasurer.

Directors will be Herbert Jason, David Hegarty, Michael Equi, Clifton Jones, Michael Wilson, Bernard Salvador, and Dennis Zucker.

SSCEDC was organized to assist local business in purchasing land, building factories, acquiring machinery and equipment and to expand or convert existing plant facilities. The corporation is nonprofit and can assist local business up to $500,000.

SSCEDC has qualified for the federal government's 502 Program and is eligible to apply directly to the government for fundings of its programs. The development corporation will be open to all segments of the business community and will actively seek to promote the growth and development of the South Shore.

Special emphasis will be placed on expanding the local communities tax basis and creating new job opportunities.

Civil Service

had their problems with Civil Service, he said before the last two police suspensions only one highway department individual had been a problem.

Under Civil Service, Clark said it has been hard to fill needed positions in the police department because of a lack of training schools held by Civil Service, "At least in Cohasset's experience there has not been one for at least a year."

Clark added if police associates were removed from Civil Service it would not affect their salaries, which they bargain for, or give them any less union protection.

However, he said, removal from Civil Service would give selectmen a freer hand to deal with police officers who are not performing their duties.

In anticipation of their not being another Civil Service listing of police officers available for some time, selectmen voted to ask for an extension of the current listing to January 9 and will request that the list be expanded in order that the board may include two more appointments.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said: "This list is going to be our police department for a long time."

Of the 10 applicants interviewed for intermittent police officer recently, two individuals declined appointment. Presently there are two legitimate vacancies in the police department, with "two possibilities of vacancies." In addition, selectmen have heard rumors of two possible requests for transfer out of the department.

Laugelle voted along with the board to request that the current Civil Service list be expanded to six individuals.

McBride

She was the first person I ever interviewed. A tall, gaunt woman whose beauty had faded but whose mind was as alert as it had ever been, her knowledge of the economics of Ireland, with facts and figures left my pencil far behind. At that time she was living in retirement at Roebuck House, Clonkea, outside Dublin.

I had no idea then that a decade later I would be a First Secretary of Embassy in the Foreign Ministry headed by her son.

MacBride, himself, is now at an age when most men are in retirement but he has no thought of leaving the work in which he has achieved such success.

Perhaps, however, he will find time for another weekend in Cohasset. There are always a couple of bottles of Calvados awaiting him.

'Toning It Down'

Last week Selectman Rocco Laugelle told selectmen they should treat the South Shore Music Circus like they would any teenage party.

"When kids are having a disturbing party the police are able to close it down," Laugelle said.

He added that he felt selectmen may just have to handle certain noisy Music Circus shows on an individual basis, as an attempt to monitor decibel levels for every performance could prove frustrating at the least. And then what town official would be in charge of that little chore, etc.

Laugelle's perfectly good suggestion conjured up in our minds the New England picture of Arthur Clark, let's say, confronting the Osmunds, Tom Jones, Maynard Fergueson smack in the middle of their purest notes.

Out of the blue this typically New England, lanky Jimmy Steward-type father of the town clears his throat and announces his message: "you'll have to tone it down a bit, the neighbors are complaining."

It's so perfect we wonder why no one ever thought of it before.

In the police log it happens all the time. Neighbors complain of a next-door party and policemen don't bother to measure the decibel level or give the partygoers a fair trial. Respective attorneys are not called. Why, indeed, as Laugelle suggested, should the Circus be different?

We can't wait for next summer.

Editorial Notes

Town officials who find themselves confronting a personal matter or a matter involving a close relative should not only abstain from voting, but should abstain from making any comments and should in fact remove themselves from the physical premises during debate.

Posting of meetings have been sloppy in the case of at least one town government board.

Individuals testifying at dog hearings or any hearing should be sworn in by the officiating body.

Ironic, how on Valentine's Day, we will all meet again to discuss the town's most unloved issue — sewerage.

Warrant Closes Friday

Last week selectmen voted to open the February 14 special town meeting warrant Wednesday, Jan. 2 and close it Friday, 4.

Selectmen opted for a short opening and closing because they wished that the warrant would pertain to sewerage articles exclusively, in lieu of the state's suit against the town over its effluent situation.

Skimmer Could Be Fireboat

Letters

To the Editor:

I have always been a supporter of dependable water commuter services for residents of both the North and South Shore. To that end, I have contacted many of the Mass. Congressional Delegates for federal financing of an appropriate water commuter program.

There are many factual reasons why I never supported the "Yankee Skimmer" trial. These facts are consistently ignored by members of the local daily press and the original supporters of the hovercraft project.

I am characterized as lacking imagination and having a negative attitude when in fact I am attempting to save the taxpayer's money. The taxpayers, whom I have been elected to represent, expect me to scrutinize all projects, especailly those which are doomed to fail from Day 1.

No amount of innuendo, character attacks, or editorial nonsense can change that fact.

It is said that Hovercraft Corporation has won a contract for a fleet of fireboats in Seattle — our "Yankee Skimmer" may prove to be an excellent fireboat where it would operate only a few hours each year. It has obviously not succeeded as a full-time dependable commuter craft.

Personally, I am more interested in the well being of our people from a public safety point of view than I am in an obviously dangerous and costly experiment to satisfy the whims of a few individuals.

To throw good money after bad (white elephant) has always been against my better judgment. For a local daily newspaper to run editorials condoning just such a practice is irresponsible, to say the least. If the newspaper or the individuals involved had taken the time to compile and study the facts on this vessel before rendering unsupported opinions, this controversy would not have occurred.

You now have the facts on my position on this vessel. This concept, I believe in, for fast dependable commuter boat service; but for the present, I'll stick with the three commuter boats now operating out of Hingham and Hull. It is your responsibility to judge the facts and then render a decision on the subject — not the other way around.

For verification of my remarks see reports of the United States Coast Guard and the State Department of Public Works on subject vessel.

Very truly yours,
Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative
3rd Plymouth District

P.S. I have informed the present administration on this matter and have asked that the present agreement be cancelled and the $330,000 being held in escrow be returned to the Commonwealth.

From Arabia

To the Editor:

Having been residents of Cohasset for over the past five years and still consider ourselves so, we very much enjoy our weekly copy of the Mariner to keep us informed of "our" town's happenings.

Moving to Saudi Arabia has been quite an experience for us and I thought your readers might enjoy some of the incidents that have happen to us in the past five months so I have sat down and written the enclosed article.

I have not had the opportunity to take many pictures but if you wish, I shall start and enclose some for the future if this works out.

Ras AlMisha'b is a very small town approximately one hour from the Kuwait border of the Arabian Sea side of Saudi Arabia. Our main mission is the transportation of all the cargo for the $85 billion King Khalid Military City that will be located at Al Batin.

If you look at the Life magazine for the end of the year which recaps all the events of the 70's, you will see a large picture of the King looking at the model. The project is expected to take over 10 years to complete.

We can't tell you how much we enjoy receiving the Mariner each week; though a few weeks old. It really brings back memories of "our town."

(ED'S. NOTE: See article, page 5).

Best regards for the New Year

I've Seen The Future And It Doesn't Work

By Chet Ellis

Not everyone gets a chance to read about the future. Around this time of year most newspapers are looking to the past.

"Great Sport Stories of the Seventies" or "Disasters of the Decade" are headlines frequently used to entice the potential reader to part with his (or her) quarter.

Not so with the Mariner. After consulting with our soulful sage, we are willing to put it on the line and take shot at predicting the really important events of the next decade. I mean after all, the future is where most of us will spend the rest of our lives. Ponder these pompous prognostications:

Prediction: In 1980, Cohasset will get a new police Chief. He will be short, carry only a whistle for protection, and have been a champion debater in high school. He will resign for personal reasons in 1981.

Prediction: In 1981, the Music Circus will put on a quiet, intellectually stimulating three-act play, using top quality actors, and designed for a discerning audience. No one will show up.

Prediction: In 1982, the Town will be sued to allow a 180 ft. inflatable, combination purse seiner/lobster boat to be moored in the harbor. The harbormaster will resign and move to Arizona. The Town will lose.

Prediction: In 1983, the new town hall renovation will be finished. In addition to the regular offices, if will have a flag room, a padded cell, and a special soundproof "executive session" room for the selectmen.

Prediction: In 1984, the school committee will come under civil service and members will serve for life. The superintendent of schools will resign and join the harbormaster in Arizona. The committee will appoint a new superintendent. He will be short, carry only a whistle for protection and will have been a champion debater in high school. He will resign for personal reasons in 1985.

Prediction: In 1985, to combat declining enrollments, Cohasset High School will increase METCO participation to 50 per cent of the student body. That year CHS will win all of its football, basketball, and baseball games.

Prediction: In 1986, Bates Lincoln Pratt, the Hermit of Beechwood, will emerge from Whitney Woods and be elected moderator by forming a coalition between the Library Trustees and the American Legion. He will be impeached in 1987 after an attempt to get the Town to install a bar in the library's magazine reading room.

Prediction: In 1987, the new combination raquetball court and sewage treatment plant on Brush Island will be dedicated. Unfortunately, the dedication will coincide with a Tom Jones matinee at the Music Circus and no one will show up.

Prediction: In 1988, it will cost more to be a member of the Sailing Club than the Yacht Club.

Prediction: in 1989, Bean and Wimbleton will sell Whitehead to Muhammed el Affendi, an oil billionaire from Georges Bank. He will be short, carry only a whistle for protection and . . . . . .

Johnstons Enter Year 1400 In Saudi Arabia

It has been over five months since we left the comforts of Cohasset for a little town called Ras Al Misha'b, Saudi Arabia. The preparations and last goodbyes of all our friends certainly seem like only yesterday, but time does march on...

As Cohasset enters the new year, in Saudi it will be the year 1400.

Our initial impression of Saudi Arabia upon arrival in Dhahran was, "it really can't be this hot all the time." The time was 2300 and the temperature was over 100 degrees. How wrong we were...after a 12 hour flight from New York (we got the feeling that we would never see ground under our feet again after the first six hours).

We were not prepared for the cultural change between Cohasset and here. Everything in Saudi Arabia is under constant construction: streets, houses, airports, etc. after being cleared through customs and immigration, we travelled through the city to the home we were staying at for the night. No one said too much...

After a sleepless night (our bodies refused to believe that we were eight hours ahead of Cohasset time), we started our journey to Ras Al Misha'b. I had not told Marie or the twins how long a drive it was from Dhahran as I was afraid they would probably get back on the plane.

As you proceed along the countryside, there are two objects you notice immediately. The first are wrecked cars. They are used as landmarks here. The red four door sedan that now looks like a motorcycle is the turning point for Mr. Aziz's tent that is 40 clicks (our nomenclature for kilometers) straight out in the desert.

Wrecks are not removed from where the accident happens. They are dragged off the main road but that is as far as it goes. We now have a game we play as we proceed to our nearest shopping mall, two hours away, in that we try to identify the make of the car.

Dead Camels

The second thing you notice is dead camels. They are everywhere. Camels are the property of the king and are allowed to roam where they wish, which is usually sitting or standing in the middle of the road over the next rise. As we travel at high speeds, normal being over 110 mph, there is always a good chance that you can end up with an 800 pound camel in your front lap if you hit it. It can really ruin your whole day when this happens.

Speaking of speed, there is virtually no speed limit in Saudi. You travel as fast as you want. If they want you to slow down in a certain area, they put big humps across the road (like the ones in the Sandy Beach parking lot). The only problem being is that the warming signs are in Arabic. Many a time, I have pealed my head off the roof of the car because of this. It is sort of a status symbol to be the first away from the traffic light. Haven't quite gotten used to that one yet. Also, you can change lanes without looking; at least it appears that way to us.

I have acquired numerous grey hairs from driving down a four lane highway and having the person in the right hand lane decide he wants to make a left turn. Driving here makes the Southeast Expressway look like Surrey Drive.

Women are not allowed to drive at any time in the country. I will leave all additional comments to the male readers of this article. In most of the small pick-ups that it appears each Saudi has, the husband drives with the male children sitting beside him in front while the wife (yes) and daughters sit in the back cargo area. Enough said or I probably won't be allowed back into Cohasset by the numerous women's clubs.

The social life takes time to adjust to; most functions are attended by male members only with women serving and then going to other rooms. After the males have finished their dinner, the women are allowed to eat what remains. (Sorry ladies, here I go again).

The most popular meal is

what we call a "lamb grab", though it can be a camle, goat, or mutton "grab". Your host has the animal killed (you don't have to be present for that...) and prepared for the dinner. The whole animal is stuffed with wild rice, herbs, etc., and then roasted. It is served on a large platter which is usually placed on beautiful oriental rugs in the middle of the floor.

Everyone sits around the platter and proceeds to tear off a piece of the meat, wrapping some of the rice into the meat and feasts. No utensils are used. We experienced one a few weeks ago and it was really delicious. (I am going to recommend it to the Log & Line when I get back). You continue eating until the host is finished or you turn your plate over.

One of the highest compliments the host can give an invited guest is to either offer the animals eye or brain as a special treat. Thank goodness, I was sitting far enough away so these little goodies didn't reach me. That was a close one. You can not, of course, refuse these if they are offered.

Prices of food, clothing are about 40 percent higher than in old USA. Prior to our leaving, we were told by many friends that we should bring certain items that were completely unavailable here. Needless to say, all the things we packed in the trucks are readily available. We could ship back one-half of the things we brought. Can you imagine me bringing a winter overcoat with the temperature here never dropping below 80 degrees?

Gas Prices

I won't rub sand in the wound but gasoline is still only .07 cents per liter, though water costs, yes costs $1.00 per liter. No, please, I do not want to start an exchange program with any of you.

Social life is fairly limited to visiting your neighbors and going shopping in the local souks (small stalls located in the village down the road). Moslem religion forbids movie theatres, bars, etc. Liquor is strictly forbidden and if you are caught with some, it is most certain that you will be expelled from the country. It is really strange to go to a very nice restaurant in Al Khobar and order apple juice as your pre-dinner drink. They do have a nice combination if you want to live dangerously: have apple juice mixed with perrier water...Wow..

Camel Soup?

The main food staple here is lamb, though goat and camel come in a close second. It is said, camel hump is a delicacy but at this point, I have only taken other peoples' word for it. You can only expect us to go so far with the sampling of these things. I promise I will bring back the recipe for camel hump soup for anyone who wants to try it. (You supply your own camel, though).

School

Being in such a small community, a private school has been established for the twins. Just like the old red school house so many of you may remember; a lot different from Deer Hill. We have an excellent teacher who has her M.A. in education. The kids aren't too wild about being the only ones in the school. They can't get away with anything, much to their parents' delight. Their spare time is spent at the beach and the recreation facility, which shows movies each night in addition to have a betamax machine.

Saudi Movies

Movies are slow in coming to Saudi. When was the last time you saw or heard about "Ma and Pa Kettle Down on the Farm"? Seriously though, we do get fairly recent films, though they are closely censored. No holding hands, kissing, or?...Some of our movies are very, very, very, very short.

We old timers get our enjoyment by walking the miles and miles of the Arabian sea coastline. It is truly beautiful with nothing or no one around except for those damn camels. You know the old saying: one camel looks like the next camel. It is a great way to relax plus it keeps the waist line down; at least we try to convince ourselves of that each day.

We hope that our short narrative has been interesting to you. We have many more tales to tell but we felt our first report to the community we miss so much should be short.

One of the highlights of our week is to receive our three weeks old copy of the Cohasset Mariner. It is the hit of our small community. They love it.

Our best regards,
The Johnston's

Around Town

TUES., JAN. 8

The space committee for town officers will meet Tuesday, Jan. 8 at 8 p.m. at the municipal building.

NOTED

Selectmen noted last week that former police officer David Moir has appealed his suspension from the police force to Superior Court. In past months both municipal court and Civil Service have upheld his suspension by selectmen. Moir maintains in this new action that both municipal court action and Civil Service action were erroneous as a matter of law and were unsupported by substantial evidence.

SOLID WASTE

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has promised to continue to fight for a bill which would establish a comprehensive county program for the disposal of solid waste.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said the county's proposal has been in the legislative for the past six years. "It doesn't commit the town to anything. If the system becomes available county-wide it allows the town to tie into it."

According to Ainslie, the county has already utilized $110,000 of its funds for a solid waste disposal study.

It has $90,000 remaining.

He added the state has been against regionalization of solid waste because it has its own solid waste disposal program. "But the state hasn't gotten anywhere for 20 years."

SPLIT BID

Golden Press was awarded a bid for the annual town meeting report at $6,991, while Dennison Press was awarded the bid for the town meeting warrant at $24.27 per page with no extra charge for alternatives.

In past years, selectmen have traditionally split the bid for the printing of the report and the warrant when it proved fiscally advantageous.

NO RIGHT ON RED

Don't worry about it. As of last Tuesday, there was no right on red allowed in Cohasset. When the stop light's on red anywhere in town, stay put until it shows green.

Pre-School Nature Series

In January, the South Shore Natural Science Center will hold three nature series for pre-schoolers to discover winter wonders through indoor and outdoor activities.

Beginning Jan. 9-10 through April 16-17 on Wednesdays or Thursdays, from 1-2:30 p.m. there will be a Beginner Nature Series for 3-year-olds for 14 sessions.

On Tuesdays, Jan. 8-April 5, a nature nursery series for 4 and 5-year-olds will be held 1-2:45 p.m.

Fee for both 14-session programs will be $38 for members, $43 for non-members.

On Thursdays, beginning Jan.-April 17, there will be an 11-session series from 9:30-11 a.m. for 4-5-year-old children. Fee is $30 for members, $34 for non-members.

Call 659-2559 for registration and further information.

Mother Knows Best

By Lois Martin

Dear Employing Companies:

I understand you've been interviewing my son. That's nice of you. And should you decide you'd like him to work for you, I am able to recommend him without hesitation in any endeavor except housework.

They tell me that job hunting in today's world is sophisticated. People submit resumes, references, portfolios and what not for you to review prior to selection of employes.

With all due respect I feel you've overlooked an efficient, reliable resource, the Mother. You see, we mothers have known these applicants since the day they were born. We knew they were magnificent then. It's taken you 21 years to recognize their potential. We could save you time and money by providing information to which only a mother is privy.

PATCHES

You should know about the general health of our children, for example, so you'd be aware of how much sick leave they'd use. Personally, I know how the applicant reacted to mumps in the fifth grade and his courage in the doctor's office during repeated series of shots to prevent polio, diptheria, measles, small pox.

For the record he's quite well. Mothers could tell you about eating and sleeping habits, as well as little quirks that might affect the company. We could expedite the negotiations on company benefits as well as retirement plans. It's amazing you haven't sought our aid before.

Each mother is positive she's contributed a vital person to society when she returns from the delivery room. Some think they've given birth to a future president, a scientist who'll cure all diseases, the perfect Queen of England.

And yet you, with all your finite knowledge of marketing, gross and unions, have somehow overlooked the person who could sit down with you and in a half hour tell you about the right person for your company.

Some say we'd have a problem with prejudice. They charge our belief in the natural superiority of our children as infringing on objectivity you'd require. Not so. We're the first to say we had our doubts in the first 21 years about whether or not they'd amount to anything. Yes, we've worried about whether or not they'd ever go anywhere without the refrigerator, or learn to close the kitchen door in December.

But children change. This Christmas the boy came home with clean clothes instead of dirty ones. That must indicate a readiness to tackle the corporate world of management.

And we've had our disappointments along the way. Some young people have steadfastly refused to show an interest in ballet, prefering to break garage windows with well-hit baseballs. But for the most part we ready them for your perusal very carefully.

Now it's your turn. Our children arrive on the other side of your desks prepared to be asked about anything you need to know. Their application clearly represents a new person in the world. But behind that applicant is 21 years of a mother's unflagging interest and effort.

What you need is a mother's resume for each interviewee. I fear my son forgot to list my name among the references. I would, again respectfully, suggest you contact me at your convenience to arrange a time I might help you review this candidate for work within your company.

Better still, you might like me to accompany him to your headquarters in whatever section of the country you are located. You have only to ask. What's a mother for after all if not to be right there when a son needs her.

At any rate, I hope you've found these suggestions useful. A mother's resume could clearly expedite your selection process. Nothing is more heartwarming than a group of mothers meeting together on interview day to retell the stories of their children.

The only stopgap to our aid in screening could be my son. I prefer this correspondence be marked "confidential" until such time as our children regain their senses of humor and perspective about mother's aid.

Sincerely

Youth Home Repair & Maintenance Program

A home repair/maintenance project is a training program for vocationally handicapped youth, offered through a collaborative effort by Project Friend and Plymouth Youth Organization funded by Plymouth CETA, to elderly homeowners in the greater Plymouth area. All potential elderly participants must meet federal economically disadvantaged or some guidelines. Home Repair for the Elderly will accept referrals from Old Colony Elderly Services, or local Councils for Aging. Project Friend will determine eligibility, notify applicants in writing regarding the determination, and refer for service all accepted participants to the Plymouth Youth Organization.

Areas served by this project are Marshfield, Hanover, Pembroke, Kingston, Duxbury, Carver, Plympton, Hanson, Halifax and Plymouth. Applications may be obtained at Old Colony Elderly Services, 23 Samoset Street, Plymouth or local Councils for Aging in your area, Project Friend, 1900 Ocean St., Marshfield.

Let's Talk Real Estate

with John Covell

Buying a home and obtaining a loan to finance it involved the execution of a series of documents to formalize and complete the purchase. When a family has selected the home it wants to buy, the seller usually requires the buyer to sign a sales contract. Between the execution of the contract and the closing, the property will often have to be appraised, evidence of title obtained and a survey made if establishment of property lines is necessary. At the time the closing takes place, the note and mortgage will need to be signed and the deed conveying title to the buyer will be executed and then recorded.

Formalizing the purchase of a new home often requires procedures which may be confusing to the new homeowner, but when you're working with COVELL REALTY, Marshfield Ave. (834-4444), we take complete responsibility for keeping things straight. We're professionally trained and prepared to help you with every aspect of a move. We give you all the advice, assistance, and exposure you need when buying or selling a home. At COVELL, everything we touch turns to sold! Hours: 9-5 Mon.-Sat., 12-5 Sun. & by appointment.

DID YOU KNOW?

If the sale of a home is on the basis of long-term sales contract, the seller may retain title to the property until a specified amount of the debt has been paid.

☐Congratulations to Debbie and Tom Cook on the arrival of their second child, a daughter named Whitney Todd, born on December 26 at South Shore Hospital. Whitney weighed in at a healthy10 lbs., 3 ozs. and joins a brother, Trevor, almost 3, at home on King Street. Grandmother, Mrs. Charles Standard, is helping the "boys" out; her husband, Mr. Charles Standard, and Great Grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Drake, are at home in Greenwich, Connecticut. Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Cook of Springfield, Vermont, are also grandparents and Mrs. Dorothy Cook of California is great grandmother.

☐Happy Wedding Anniversary to Marie and Gene Price! They were married 21 years ago on December 27 in Belle Harbor, New York. Not long after their wedding, Gene and Marie, who are both only children in their respective families, began double-dating with Gene's Mom, Mae, and Marie's Dad, John Holm. Their parents were married 19 years ago this coming June!

The Prices celebrated their anniversary by "getting away and exploring" for the day. This was the first year in the last nine that they have been alone, and for that matter, the first they've stayed in Cohasset for the holidays. They are usually in Palm Beach, Florida with their mother, mother-in-law, father, and father-in-law, all in the persons of two!

☐Santa Claus wasn't good enough (or perhaps strict enough) with some young folks in town because they seem to have nothing better to do than ride around knocking down people's fences and breaking windows. A suggestion: why don't you go down to Sandy Beach and have a rock throwing contest into the WATER and knock each other down in the sand?

☐The only thing Santa didn't bring me was a set of ear plugs which I could use to blot out the 342nd playing of the theme song from Annie.

☐Miss Julianna Dean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Dean of Cohasset and Palm Beach Shores, Florida, and David Allen Hassan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hassan of Cohasset are engaged to be married this summer, it was announced by Miss Dean's parents.

A graduate of Thayer Academy and member of the Vincent Club of Boston, Miss Dean is also the granddaughter of Mrs. Richard MacHale.

Mr. Hassan is a Cohasset High School graduate and is an owner of Cohasset Woodcarvers.

☐Miss Christy Ann Hall of Resceda, California, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Hall, and R. Jonathan Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hill of Cohasset, were married recently in the Chapel of the Canyons, Los Angeles, California.

The bride is a graduate of Resceda High School and Pierce College, San Fernando Valley, California. The bridegroom graduated from Cohasset High School and Allegheny College, Cumberland, Maryland. The couple are making their home in Lafayette, Colorado.

☐Mike Ellis has promised to be at the Greenhouse on New Year's Eve to provide music for a private party of 50 couples (a slightly smaller version of last year's bash) which is being organized by Bruce Cameron and Tom Myers. The $50/couple affair will probably be attended by a glamorous group, sporting the "never-out-of-style" Cohasset fashions and more exotic, trendier looks too. Past partygoers suggest that the women who didn't have such a good time last year, get up and ask other men to dance instead of sticking to a barstool (women's lib at the Greenhouse).

☐Celebrations of the New Year's Eve-type will also be held at Hugo's Restaurant, for the public, and for a large, private party of diners, dancers, and all-nighters who are registered with Kimball's-by-the-Sea for the night. The Red Lion Inn will be open — as usual — for good eats and good conversation (even if it may be at the next table). With Richard will only accept those with reservations after 8 p.m. The Log & Line, unfortunately, will be closed at their usual 4 p.m.

Countless others of us will find our own mode of celebration — at local parties, big and small — and some prefer to sit cozy by their own fire and sleep in the New Year.

However you celebrate the coming of a new decade — there will be no prophesying or reminiscing here — I hope you have fun! Best wishes for 1980!

Pucksters Drop Two, Wrestlers Now At .500

By Rob Tis

Off to a frustrating start Saturday in their league opener against the Hull Pirates, the Skippers never really recovered from their deadlock at 2 at the end of the second period. It was a hard-fought game all the way.

Doug Dillon put in both Cohasset tallies in the first two periods and Cohasset scored quickly in the third period to put the Skippers one up on a sizzling Joe McCullough wrist shot.

But the Pirates quickly returned the favor. Soon after, they slammed home another to take the lead. Then, on a questionable move, Coach Ed McDermott pulled goalie Bill Hollis with 50 seconds left in the game. Cohasset pushed the puck into Hull's end but the Pirates took advantage of the situation and lifted one into the open Skipper net from well within their own blue line.

With Hollis back in goal and the Skippers down by 2, sophomore Dom Campacelli took charge and whistled a slapper home from the red line. The Skippers were now within one goal. Hollis was pulled again and the Skippers put good pressure on for the final 20 seconds...for a 5-4 loss to the Hull Pirates.

On the following Friday the Skippers faced off against Catholic Memorial in a non-league game. They were outclassed all the way in a 10-2 loss. The game looked like a big upset for awhile as Rich Young put the Skippers ahead 1-0 with only 11 seconds gone in the first period.

But within the first minute the Skippers were down 2-1. From here it was a downhill struggle. Richie Evans scored the other goal.

WRESTLING

After a powerful demonstration against Cape Cod Tech the wrestling team fought its way to its present 2-2 record. The team's main problem is the absence of a heavyweight. Because of this they automatically forfeit valuable points, but make up for that absence with strong wrestlers in the lower weight classes.

Six Skippers at present are undefeated. They are Craig and Todd Langford, Torin Sweeney, Jack Hernan, David Duncombe and Jack MacLean.

This is an amazing feat because the mat men wrestle teams from tougher leagues than Cohasset is accustomed to as the South Shore League does not have many wrestling schools.

The mat men are on their way to a good season. Their two losses (Whitman-Hanson and Middleboro) were both squeakers against the toughest teams they'll face this year. With a great deal of individual talent they will undoubtedly do well in the division tournaments.

Women Realtors Get $1M Sales Award

Elsa Palmiter, Julie Guild and Ruth Keefe have all received the 1979 MLS Million Dollar Sales and Listing Award from the Mass. Association of Realtors.

All Cohasset residents, Ms. Palmiter of Richardson and Collins Gallery of the South Shore of Hingham, and Ms. Keefe and Ms. Guild of Dean and Hamilton Gallery of Homes of the South Shore of Cohasset, were among more than 400 persons honored with the annual award at the 23rd annual multiple listings service seminar held at the Chateau De Ville, Framington.

Langford A Soccer All Star. . .Twice

By Rob Tis

Recently Senior Craig Langford was named to the Patriot Ledger and Herald American All State Soccer Team. As the Skipper's star striker, he had 51 career goals including 19 this season alone.

Craig has been on the varsity soccer team since he was a freshman and has been captain for the past two seasons. As Skipper Coach Charles Muncelhenk put it, "Craig has a devastating shot, tackles well and passes intelligently."

To a spectator, Craig makes the game look easy. He seems to always be in the right place at the right time and to always be in control of the situation.

Not only is Craig a soccer player, he is among the ranks of the undefeated on this year's wrestling team. Craig has been on the varsity wrestling squad for three years and is captain this season.

He also has two letters in varsity track. He is an honor roll student and hopes to attend the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

Many students are deserving of an honorable mention for this award. Last winter's championship varsity basketball team had quite a few candidates including Paul Farren, Richard Tibbetts, John Howley, Tom Higgins, Mark Goff, Bill Kurtz and others.

Rick Hobson and Chris McKenzie sparked the wrestling team to a good season. Joe Durkin dominated the ice for the hockey team. Diane Maloney dominated the girls' softball scene. The super seven of the boys' varsity tennis team had yet another awesome season, as did the girls.

Bob Gunville, Bill Duffy, Jay Machiel, Matt Brown and many others gave their all for the football team.

But Craig Langford was an all-around sportsman and this writer feels the statewide award was well placed.

So Santa forgot to leave you a new cookbook under the tree? Not to worry. With a little bit of luck you may yet be able to find a copy of a delightful new collection of recipes called 'Delectable Collectibles.' Nine months in the making, the plastic, loose-leaf book consists of 225 pages of recipes young women of the Marshfield Newcomers Club have been exchanging over the years. The book is charmingly illustrated by Devon McKian. Brenda York and Judy Porsavage chaired the project which resulted in an appealing offering ranging from gourmet to simple, easy "goodies." The chapter on "Appetizers" offers Cathy Brennan's

CHICKEN WINGS

4 lbs. chicken wings [split]
1 tsp. ginger
1 T lemon juice
4 cloves of garlic [chopped]
1 tsp. Ac'cent

Marinate chicken wings in rest of ingredients for three hours — turning occasionally. Bake covered at 350 degrees for 30 min., then uncovered at 450 degrees for 15 min. more, or until brown.

Now the tree is down, Christmas gifts out from underfoot and New Years a thing of the past, the long winter looms. Think of it as a time to be a little more creative in your cooking and as a first step treat yourself to a copy of this spatter-proof cookbook complete with calorie chart. In Marshfield you will find them for sale at local stores such as Pleasures and Pasttime, Once Upon a Time and Marion's Beauty Salon. They're available in Duxbury at the Standish Card and Gift Shop and Crafty Ladies.

Any questions will gladly be answered by Brenda York, 837-2748, or Carole Ellis, 837-2325. As always, when faced with a new book to review, I have problems choosing a few recipes to tell you about. Shall it be Autumn Soup, Greggs' Salad, Finnish Vegetables, Veal Stew, Rocky Road Fudge, or Kahlua? Neither. Here is Ann Jones'

CHICKEN CAN CAN

1 small can evaporated milk
1 onion, chopped and cooked
1 can each chicken with rice soup and
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can chow mein noodles
1 can water chestnuts [sliced]
1 can pimiento
2 c. diced cooked chicken
Topping:
1/2 c. crushed cornflakes
1/2 c. grated cheese

Combine above ingredients and pour into greased casserole. Add topping of 1/2 c. crushed cornflakes and 1/2 c. cheese. Cook 350 degrees for 15 min.

Monies from the sale of these books will go to local charities, such as the elderly and ambulance fund. Recipes from restaurants in the Boston and local areas include that for the original Toll House Cookies. In the gourmet section, foreign meals enjoyed by the Gourmet Group are included, as well as recipes contributed by the Ladies Gourmet Luncheon Group. In the latter section you'll find such delectables as Sandy Cabral's

PEPPERONI SIZZLES

1/2 lb. pepperoni [sliced lengthwise very thin]
12 oz. provolone cheese [sliced]
1 pkg. frozen dough

Thaw dough and let rise. Flour pastry board and roll out dough until very, very thin. Cover dough with pepperoni slices, then add cheese on top of pepperoni. Roll up the dough like a jelly roll (will look like a large loaf of French bread). Cut in half and bake at 350 degrees until crust is a golden brown (approx. 20 min.)

And so another year starts. At least for those of us who enjoy cooking, we have no problems keeping warm as we bustle around the kitchen. All in all, it's a pretty nice place to be and we look forward to a year of sharing more recipes, ideas and suggestions from your kitchen. Happy New Year!

Minimum Cost For Cesspool Cleaning Now $50

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Did you plant a garden last year? Good for you.

Did you knit a sweater — install a coal stove — insulate your attic or eat a goat? If you did you certainly get extra points for all of that.

Buy here's the big question. Have you pumped your cesspool recently? If you did you will certainly have noticed the large increase in the cost for doing so. You paid at least $50 minimum plus extra charges for "cleaning the line" and an additional amount for hose. Right?

The year 1980 is going to be a thoughtful year for Cohasset. Forget about hoping it will be a good year.

Four years ago the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) voted to no longer accept "illegal" sewerage within its system as of Dec. 1979. Cohasset, not a member of the MDC group, has been an illegal customer since that time.

As a result of the MDC mandate, cesspool cleaning companies (who are associated) voted at a recent meeting to charge towns not on the MDC line $50 minimum costs for cesspool pumping.

If you live in Hingham, an MDC town, you get charged $10. If you live in Cohasset, you get charged $50 plus. That's because theoretically cleaners have to dump Cohasset wastes in the Brockton grit, which charges cleaners 2.5 cents a gallon. But several cleaners have told the Mariner, off the record, they are still dumping in the Weymouth MDC grit. No matter, you still pay.

The MDC doesn't just wish to stop accepting illegal septage, it wants out of the septage business altogether. It is currently accepting contracted customers, only. But in the near future even customers with contracts will have to make plans to deal with their own septage — in-town.

Can we contract with the MDC? No. We've been refused a contract several times, according to Manny

Pratt To Leave Sewer Post

After town elections, when a brand new group of three sewer commissioners are elected, Edwin Pratt, who has been a part-time superintendent of the sewer department since 1968 will resign from that position.

Pratt, who also holds a full-time job as the town's water superintendent, told sewer commissioners Monday he feels there should be a "clean break down the line" when the new sewer commissioners take over.

"So many part-time jobs require full-time committment. My job as water superintendent is a 24-hour a day job." The part-time position in the sewer department pays $1,572.

Pratt said a larger stipend, and he did not recommend a larger stipend in his budget presentation to the commissioners this week, would not induce him to stay on the job. "Salary means nothing. It's time."

School Comm. Reaffirms Land Vote

By Jennifer Grisdale

At selectmen's request, the school committee reconsidered its 3-3 (no action) vote to not release nine acres of school land abutting the Music Circus for a wastewater treatment plant — but this time the vote was 4-2 to not release the land.

School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid was the change-over vote, saying he supported the committee's decision to keep the land for educational purposes because "It's the only piece of land available for school construction within the town."

"We need a clear majority vote for the committee to retain this land," he said before the vote.

Langmaid told the committee he had been in touch with the Massachusetts Association of School Committees (MASC) who told him there was a 90 per cent chance the legislature would honor a request from the town to take the nine acres from school committee if a majority of townspeople voted in favor of such a move at town meeting.

Langmaid noted if the committee should release the land to the selectmen before town meeting, it would take a two-thirds vote at town meeting before the land could be used for a wastewater plant.

However, he stressed, if the committee released the land to the town at this point it would have no further control over the land unless selectmen returned it to them at a future date.

Frank England, who voted to release the land, said he felt the town, "not six people" should decide the future of the land. "I don't think we should tell the town what to do."

Martha Gjesteby, who voted against releasing the land, said she thought the proposed sewer plant would be too close to the Osgood School.

Warrant Shaping Up

In spite of the numerous commentaries and letters which have been written over the proposed wastewater treatment facility, not one citizen's petition was received for the Feb. 14 special town meeting warrant.

At Monday's session sewer commissioners said they would opt to keep wastewater plant site articles to a minimum of two, although Commissioner Lot Bates disagreed, saying he would like to see many sites on the warrant.

Commissioners, who will further discuss the legal aspects of the warrant with Town Counsel Blake Thaxter Jr. this week, said sewerage articles would consist of the following:

—A consent agreement (in lieu of trial) which would instruct selectmen to pay $10,000 to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) for sewage dumping violations since June.

It would also commit town meeting to a sewerage plan, resulting in an operational plant by March 1, 1984. (Majority vote required).

—Whale Meadow as a wastewater treatment plant site. (Two-thirds vote required).

—An article requesting the legislature to transfer the Paul Jones conservation land to sewerage purposes. (Two-thirds vote required).

—An article petitioning the legislature to amend its home rule act and free the school

Citizen Group Nears Decision On Plant Site

The citizens' advisory committee on the sewerage treatment plant site will make its final recommendation to the sewer commissioners within the next several days.

So far "It's a toss-up" member Jan Dagget said Monday, refusing to speculate for sewer commissioners in what direction the citizens' group might be headed.

Sewer Commissioner Lot Bates said he was willing to "go with" any site the advisory committee might recommend. But commissioners John Hobbs and William Montuori, chairman, said they wouldn't be that generous with their recommendation.

Business Variance Asked

Chester Magee of Magee Sales & Services, located on Beechwood Street, said recently he will ask the community-at-large and especially tradesmen to vote in favor of a business variance zoning article which he will submit on petition to annual town meeting.

Presently, Magee said, "One can't get rezoning for a business in a residential area. The way the town by-law is written, the board of appeals can't make an exception. Only if you abut a business zone can you apply for a variance."

Although Magee said business variances are one of the "most feared" by-laws in zoning today, "They shouldn't be. A business variance granted in any zoned area can be controlled by neighbors within 500 feet.

"It can be controlled by the

various sections of other written by-laws. It is controlled by the planning board, board of health, board of appeals, police and fire departments, conservation committee."

While the Cohasset zoning by-laws have eliminated the business variance from its by-laws, "The absence of this option has been challenged in court by residents in other towns and in many instances it was reestablished in their zoning codes, because it was found to be unconstitutional to not offer a business variance," Magee said.

Recently, the town took Magee to court over violations of the town's zoning by-laws permitting a home occupation. The town charged that Magee displayed goods outside the shop premises and had visible advertising to the detriment of the neighborhood.

Magee, who is one of four or five tradesmen practicing in the Beechwood area, said his business is out of the business-zoned circle in Beechwood by 250-feet. However, he abuts what he refers to as "neutral" (non-taxable) land — a fire station and a playground.

Magee said not one Beechwood neighbor has complained about his business, which he has been operating from that address for a 13-year period. Nevertheless, he said the town will not permit him to park his trailer and truck on his property — next to the fire station.

Although he at one time looked into buying other property, he said as a small business he can't afford to move. "This is the kind of business if you over-extend yourself or have too high an overhead, you can be gone overnight."

Sewer Commission Briefs

SEWER BUDGET

Sewer commissioners voted this week to accept a 1981 budget of $76,118 recommended by Sewer Superintendent Edwin Pratt which is an 8 per cent increase over a 1980 appropriation of $58,066.

Of the $18,052 increase, approximately $15,802 is recommended for the salary account for double plant operators.

In order to meet Water Pollution Control regulations, the town must budget as assistant operator at 40 hours a week in 1981 as opposed to 20 hours in 1980.

FINALIST

SEA Consultants informed sewer commissioners this week that the Cohasset Water Treatment Plant is one of five finalists competing for an excellency award (for engineering design) in a competition being sponsored by the American Society of Engineers. An awards ceremony will be held February 4.

CUSHING RINK

The Town Recreation Commission came under some fire by the sewer commissioners this week for having not prepared the Cushing Road ice skating rink for the season this year. According to Edwin Pratt, Sewer Superintendent, sewer commissioners gave the rink to the recreation commission some time ago. "They drained it in the summer for baseball, but they never had baseball up there. They forgot to cut the grass before cold weather set in, and they never put the retainer boards back," Pratt said.

As a result, Pratt said the rink is frozen, but impossible to skate on because of the weeds. (The Mariner had some complaints about the situation too).

LILLY POND

Don't skate on Lilly Pond! Edwin Pratt, Sewer Superintendent, told water and sewer commissioners this week that man-made currents puts a draw on the water in the pond, not allowing it to properly freeze. And in addition, as a self-supporting organization, the commission can not take any responsibility for skaters.

COMMON POND

Sewer commissioners voted to ask selectmen to repair the clay bottom on the village common duck pond, which presently can't hold water. Because the pond is located within the historic district of town, letters will also be sent to the historical commissions.

lands abutting the Music Circus for town use. (Majority vote required).

—A site to be recommended sometime in the next few days by the citizens' advisory committee on the wastewater treatment plant. (Two-thirds vote required).

—A financing article to fund any site voted. As the school land and the conservation land are not site articles on the warrant, either of those lands, if voted, would have to be financed at annual town meeting. (Two-thirds vote needed).

Commissioner John Hobbs said a financing article would not lock the town into either a half million or a million gallon size plant at this time.

Police Comment Further On Civil Service

During an impromptu interview last week, Police Officers Gerald Doyle and Brian Noonan, President of the Cohasset Police Association, further commented on selectmen's recent proposal to remove the police association from Civil Service through annual town meeting this year.

Both men said they wished to further point out some of the "fallacies" which were reported in selectmen's statements regarding Civil Service last week.

Doyle said Civil Service does allow for leeway in appointments. "Selectmen can ask for a residents preference list," among other listings, Doyle noted. He added while selectmen are obligated to choose from among the highest marks, provisions are made for appointing from among the entire listing presented.

"It takes two years to get on the Civil Service list. I took an exam in 1972, got a physical a year later and was appointed a permanent intermittent in 1974," Doyle said. He said Civil Service tests perhaps as many as 15,000 men at one sitting, but noted that the list is always available. "There are always men on it."

While selectmen said police schools were scheduled infrequently, Noonan said Civil Service is not responsible for police schooling. "Police Schools are run by the Mass. Criminal Justice Training Council."

He added: "Civil Service was designed for the police officer. A police department without Civil Service leaves a patrolman without protectection."

"Civil Service isn't cumbersome for the guy next door (the fire chief). That's because he works within the system and it works for him," Doyle said.

Noonan and Doyle both feel that Civil Service can work, and will, if methods are documented correctly. Although selectmen have claimed that Civil Service costs them overtime money with its cumbersome ways, Doyle said even without Civil Service a police officer has the right to appeal a suspension to the courts.

Noonan feels the reason the fire department has been a model one under Civil Service is because "The fire chief under Civil Service is the professional appointing authority, whereas we have three politically-motivated selectmen making appointments. The problems in our department can't help but reflect back on these people."

If Civil Service should be voted out at annual town meeting, both men noted that the present members of the department would still remain on Civil Service, regardless, with only new men being affected which would further cause problems with promotions, etc.

They also pointed out that the Cohasset Police Association is its own, in-house bargaining agent. "We like to keep away from professional unions," Noonan said, stressing that statement was not a threat to townspeople that the association might seek larger unions to fight for them.

Volunteers Needed For Health Comm.

By Jennifer Grisdale

Members of the communication council and other citizens voiced their concern on the formation of a health education program in the school system, at Monday's school committee meeting.

Carol Sandblom of the communication council said such a program was needed for the "well being of the children of the town."

Jack Langmaid, school committee chairman, said the committee wanted to include the community in developing the curriculum of the program. Josephine (Mahoney) Digirolamo pointed out that some citizens may not be qualified to set up curriculum in this area. But Frank England said he felt there are professional people here who can help make up the curriculum. He added parents should also be allowed to participate in the committee, and would be especially valuable in the formation of the social and religious aspects of the curriculum.

Pat Walsh introduced a motion to form a curriculum first for grades one through three, before working on a curriculum for the other grades. She felt a committee of teachers could be chaired by John Creamer.

Her motion was defeated on a 5-1 vote.

The committee decided to seek eight to 10 volunteers who would work on a committee to form a health education curriculum. Anyone interested should call either Jack Langmaid at 383-6433 or the superintendent's office at 6111.

School Briefs

NO ACTION

A motion by Frank England to change Business Manager John Raftery's responsibilities received a 3-3 (no action) vote. Under the motion Raftery would have been required to handle all housekeeping functions, would keep a record of all business contracts and would act as a fiscal watchdog for all transactions.

READING TEACHER

On a vote of 5-1 the school committee voted to appoint Priscilla Giovanni as reading teacher for the junior/senior high school.

LIBRARIAN

A vote of 4-2 secured the appointment of Marjorie Murphy as replacement librarian for the balance of the 1979-80 school year. Ms. Murphy will replace Virginia Petitti.

BUDGET

The committee will begin discussion on proposed 1980-81 school budget at its Jan. 14 meeting. From thereon, budget discussions will be held every other week.

Posting

It was recently brought to our attention that a committee comprised of the moderator, the chairman of the board of selectmen and the chairman of the advisory committee has not been posting its meetings.

This committee was created by annual town meeting some years ago, with its specific purpose being to appoint members of:

— The advisory committee.
— The personnel committee.
— The capital budget committee.
— The design review board.
— The committee to survey structure and functions of town government.
— The drainage committee.

In its most simplistic terms, the state Open Meeting Law mandates that public decisions be made in public. It also provides some, but not complete, public access to the decision-making process.

The Open Meeting Law applies to all boards, commissions, committees or subcommittees of a district, city, region or town, whether elected or appointed.

We view the committee of three as a formalized committee established under the bylaws of the town. And we feel that like any other committee established by the bylaws of the town, it should abide by the Open Meeting Law.

And, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark agrees! So why don't they post!

Letters

Criticism Should Be Constructive

To the Editor:

. . . and speaking of resolutions . . . as a community, the people in Cohasset are so bright! so talented in various ways! and with sufficient education and ability to address and resolve whatever the issues before us.

(Perhaps as a result) we tend to have great confidence in our own individual opinions. Our community leaders, officials and persons in authority do their considerable homework and research, and stake their reputations, often their very health on the outcome of these efforts and the stands they must ultimately take.

It should not be an intimidating experience for those qualified who wish to serve by assuming a role of leadership to come forth, and for a truly representative community effort, put their "weight in the boat."

Potential leaders should be able to feel they will not be publicly crucified and hassled if they must take a well-considered but unpopular stand. (It may be found too, that several solutions could be equally valid).

After seeking first the larger areas of agreement, any equally well-considered counter-proposal or criticism should be kindly and constructively presented keeping in mind it is ideas that are under consideration, not personalities of the proponents.

As a forthcoming resolution for the '80's, with much affection for Cohasset and the people, I would propose that we actively encourage good leaders in all our endeavors, listen to them, show them our appreciation and faith in them, and support them.

As a people in community, we have the wisdom to realize that this is the way we move forward.

Again, with much affection,
Betty Reddie

Keep Police In Civil Service

To the Editor:

I was appalled at the headlines of last weeks Mariner pertaining to the selectmen's vote (2-1) to ask the town meeting members to take away Civil Service from the police department.

Working for the public in any job is a can't win situation, but being a policeman in a small town like Cohasset certainly creates some very unusual situations.

I strongly believe the police of Cohasset are professional and have a lot of pride, but receive a lot of undue criticism. It is always easy to find fault with somebody, and it seems that the selectmen like to use the police department as their whipping boy.

There is no question that the department had had problems in the past, but instead of looking to the past, the town leaders should be looking to the future, thinking in a positive mind. A positive frame of mind is not taking Civil Service from the department. Politics and pettiness would create havoc within the department.

The Cohasset policeman is never recognized until you need his help. In certain instances, to protect you, they are arresting or booking another resident, creating an antagonistic attitude from the condemned.

A policeman wears many hats while on duty. At times he is a doctor, nurse, EMT, lawyer, psychiatrist, teacher and detective, all rolled into one. A perfect example of the Cohasset policeman's everyday duties is printed each week in the Mariner under the police log.

Each call to the station has an awful lot of meaning to the person calling. And with each call made to the station, there is somebody ready to assist you, no matter how insignificant or difficult the problem, and no matter who is doing the calling.

I am proud that I have the Doyle's, Noonan's, Kealey's, Cogill's, Stockbridge, Abbadessa's, etc. working for the town of Cohasset and I hope that the citizens of Cohasset appreciate them when they consider taking Civil Service from these professional and underated men.

Wondering If It's All There

To the Editor:

I subscribe to the Cohasset Mariner and like it very much and would like to know if the last two issues were only 12 pages. I dislike receiving the paper and wondering if it's all there or if I'm missing any news or pages.

Could you possibly put an elastic or a tape around the paper so that it will get to Maine all together?

I would appreciate your interest in this matter.

Sincerely,
Lois T. Child
Tenants Harbor, Maine

[ED.'S NOTE: Traditionally, the weeks following Christmas are slow ones, advertising-wise, and the Cohasset Mariner was indeed, much smaller. As we recently incorporated the ROP section into the main part of the paper, there will no longer be a second, separate section].

Defending The School Committee Vote

To the Editor:

Subsequent to the special town meeting in October of last year, there have been several newspaper articles relative to the proposed waste water (sewage) treatment plant for Cohasset.

In every article the school committee has been, in essence, blamed for the town's dilemma because it refused to release the school facilities land for a plant site.

These statements were written in such a manner as to unfairly suggest that the school committee was grossly unaware of the town's priorities and even inferred the school committee acted irresponsibly.

Contrary to those inferences the school committee, or at least those members who voted to defeat the proposal to relinquish the school land, do not stand alone. For various reasons, there is wide support and agreement with the school committee's decision.

If for no other reason, the school land should be retained for future school use because once a waste water treatment plant becomes operational in Cohasset, significant land development and population increases will definitely occur.

In view of the conclusions in an extensive professional engineering study that Great Brewster and Whale Meadow are the most suitable sites for a waste water treatment plant and that all other sites including the school facilities land (Music Circus) are consistently found to be inferior sites, it seems unfair, even unreasonable, to make the school committee the ogre in this matter.

Naturally, there are strong emotional feelings and selfish reasons for or against facilities such as a prison or incinerator, for example, and now, for Cohasset's citizens, the selection of a site for a controversial waste water treatment plant.

As the town's honorary engineer has advised, a waste water treatment plant is normally located as close as possible to the ocean outflow for practical engineering and economical reasons.

Furthermore, of all the coastal site locations, the Whitehead site is deserving of very serious consideration for a plant site. Certainly intrinsic and environmental factors, as well as other considerations, are very important but they should not be paramount to the best interests of the taxpayers of Cohasset.

In proposing the school facilities land, and now the Jones property which is conservation land in close proximity to the school complex, the sewer commission has stated that it is the best site from the standpoint of public acceptance.

However, there are those townspeople and town officials who take exception to this wisdom, evidenced by the outcome of past town meetings. It is profoundly ironic that the sewer commission, by its own actions, which recognizes the dire necessity (most of all) for a waste water treatment plant has contributed to the current undesirable climate in the community.

It is even more distressing considering the coercion or, if you prefer, the unusual pressure brought to bear by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the State Attorney General's Office because of the pollution evolving about both the existing and proposed waste water (sewage) treatment plants.

Hopefully, the recently appointed citizens advisory committee will prudently consider all aspects of this complex issue and, most importantly, clearly define the reasons for their ultimate recommenda-

Whitehead Rd. Ideal For Treatment Site

By Gilbert S. Tower

Commentary

The best site in Cohasset for the treatment plant will not be determined by hunting all over towns, to select one out of several suggested sites. That has been the mistake made in the past. That is not the right way to go about it.

The best or most correct site for the treatment plant will depend to a considerable degree upon the location of the outflow pipe and outlet into the ocean. The sites for the treatment plant and outflow pipe are interrelated.

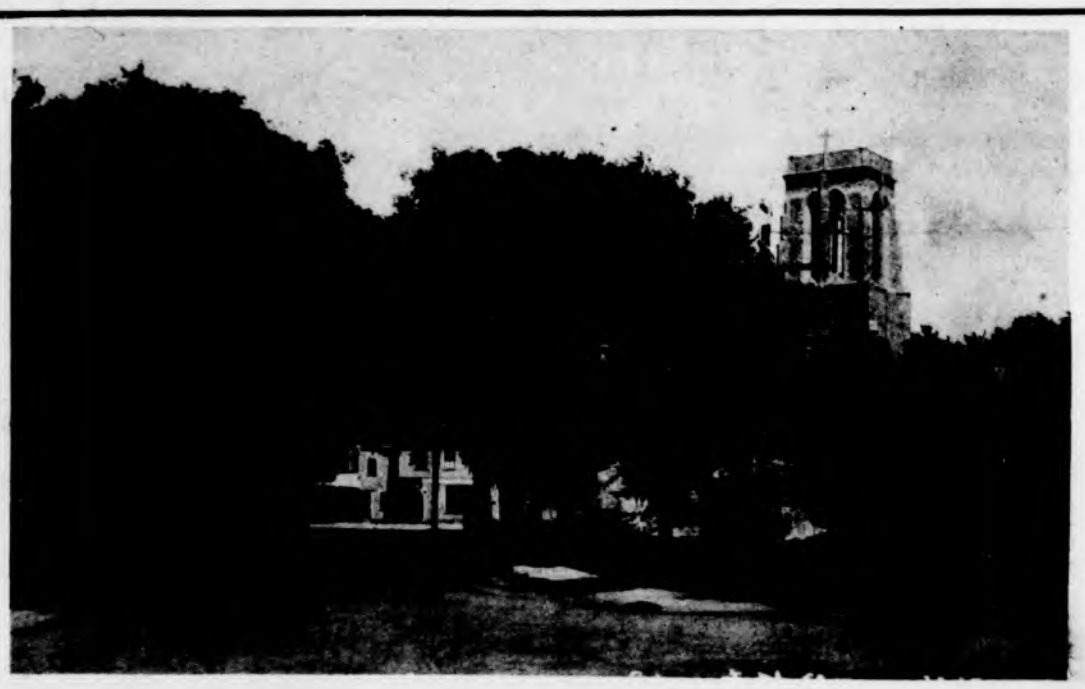
At the library and the town hall there are some large volumes containing the Metcalf and Eddy Report. These have been searched hoping to find some other recommended locations for the outflow pipe. But the only one found was sketch #9-10. That sketch shows an outflow pipe from Jacob's Meadow to run along Margin and Stockbridge Streets and Howard Gleason Rd.

At that point opposite the Yacht Club it turns left and proceeds through the filled-in meadow now grown up with trees and comes out at the open space between Big Whitehead and Little Whitehead. That route has been well-chosen by the engineers. It will be soft digging almost all the way. It will point straight out towards Sutton Rock. What better place is there for an outlet into the ocean. That sketch #9-10 shows a treatment plant opposite the Yacht Club. That site was rejected by the voters and should now be crossed out.

If they have not already done so, sewer commissioners and members of the new committee should drive down Whitehead Rd. and see for themselves that there is space for a treatment plant at the further end. The space is now grown up with tall six foot high marsh grasses. There will be space alongside Whitehead Rd. It may not be necessary for the town to take by eminent domain one of the two residential buildings between Whitehead Rd. and Whale Meadow.

That site will be almost ideal for the treatment plant. It will be at an extremity of the town at almost the greatest distance possible from everywhere in town. It will be on the line of the outflow pipe. No long pipe will have to be laid to conduct wastewater from Jacob's Meadow to the treatment plant. Another long pipe will not be needed to conduct the treated wastewater back to Jacob's Meadow for the treatment plant. The cost of electric power for pumping will be minimum.

There is the writer's recommendation which is offered hoping to obtain a general agreement quickly so that the town will not have to pay a penalty for delaying further, the deadlock must be broken.



DEPOT COURT looking towards Main Street has changed a lot since the turn of the century. Joseph St. John's General Store can be seen in the background, the building was razed many years ago and World War I and II honor rolls now stand on the site. To The right is the tower of St. Stephen'S Church. The building now housing the bank, a real estate office and the drug store had not yet been built. In the right foreground is the site of Bill Poland's service station. This photo was lent to us by Edward E. Tower.

There are eight or 10 residences in the general area on both sides of Whitehead Rd. but they should have no valid objections. There will be no noticeable odor. The treatment plant will not be conspicuous in appearance.

If desired it could be enclosed within a building as at Plymouth and it will be noiseless in operation. The treatment plant will have to be sited somewhere. Where would it be more out of the way?

The fact that Scituate chose a site close to the ocean should be significant to Cohasset. Marshfield also chose a site as close as possible to the ocean. The Plymouth plant is on the shore of Plymouth Bay and the Hull plant is close to the ocean. It would not make sense for Cohasset to choose a site a long distance back from the ocean.

Hopefully the Music Circus and the Wiggle location will be ruled out in favor of Whitehead Rd. as a site for the treatment plant. They would be too far from the ocean and would require the laying of long pipes through the center of the town where there is much ledge.

The site at the further end of Whitehead Rd. will be the best of all the sites suggested. So let's all pull together and obtain a town vote to choose it and avoid that hateful penalty.

You're Wrong About Me Richard Hayes

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Two weeks ago I received an overdue book notice from Paul Pratt Library about my 12 overdue books. On the bottom of the notice was a copy of the general laws warning that I could be prosecuted by the courts for not having returned my books.

A week ago Richard Hayes, library director, was quoted in a newspaper as saying, "The people who violate library rules are the same ones who break speed limits and don't pay their taxes."

By the time I read Hayes' statement I had spent untold hours tracking down my 12 books to the homes of friends and had already paid a large sum for the seven books in my possession. (Three of those books hadn't been taken out by anyone in over five years).

In spite of the fact that I was legally responsible, I felt Hayes' statement was a bit harsh. A check with the Cohasset Police Department proved there are no available statistics between library abusers and speeders. And I bet Assessor Warren Pratt would be hard put to find a connection between library abusers and tax evaders.

I was embarrassed. The library had always been my friend. The Philadelphia Public Library helped me through two lonely TV-less years. Every Sunday afternoon I walked 24 blocks to get my new supply. Never was there a book overdue or lost, not on my card.

As it turned out, one of my overdue books, UNESCO, had been lent to and lost by a Scituate resident. Another of the missing books was taken out on my card by Mariner Photographer Gregg Derr, a Marshfield resident. And three additional books had been taken out on my card by Mariner Publisher David Cutler, also a Marshfield resident.

Although all these good friends mentioned something about "paying the fine FOR ME" none of them produced any money. Cutler had to be threatened into returning the books. While it took three calls to my Scituate friends to discover that UNESCO had been lost.

I paid the fines on all 12 books. The library was not interested that the friend who lost UNESCO did obtain financial aid and returned to undergraduate work. It didn't care that I had broken off my engagement to a cool prep-school type 16-years ago because he threw my library copy of Atlas Shrugged out a moving car window.

...didn't care that in 1956 my Uncle Jay married the Selinsgrove High School librarian...didn't care to know that I hadn't always been an offender.

The past weeks have taught me one thing: don't let anyone take out books on your library card — not even Richard Hayes.

Skippers Ruin Pirates 49-46

By Rob Tis

The Sullivan Gym was filled with enthusiastic supporters Friday night to watch the boys varsity basketball team meet their arch rivals, the Hull Pirates.

In the first half the Skippers were ice cold from the floor. But sparked by the faithful Skipper fans, they kept the score close all the way, edging into a 49-46 win.

With a rather dim looking 39 seconds left in the game, the unyielding Skippers were down by three. But as they say, "when the going get tough, the tough get going."

This is exactly what the Skippers did as Jim McCarthy hit a picture perfect jumper to bring the Skippers within one.

The Skippers defense held tight and forced a bad in bounds pass. The Skippers, down by one, brought the ball down court and looked for the final shot. With five seconds remaining, the call went to sharpshooting senior captain Mark Goff, who put in another clutch jumper.

This put the Skippers in the lead, but the Pirates had not given up. The Pirates opted for a long, full court pass which barely eluded the grasp of Pirate Captain Brian Donahue.

The Skippers, in control once again, sent the inbounds pass to Goff, who was immediately fouled. Mark, in my opinion the best clutch shooter on the world sank both ends of a 1 and 1 to put the game in the record books for the Skippers, 49-46.

Leading the scoring for the Skippers was junior playmaker Bill Kurtz with 18. Mark Goff had 12, and dominated the boards with 11 rebounds. Another main advantage for the Skippers was the enthusiasm of the Skipper fans. If you enjoy hard played hustling basketball or like to have a good time come on out and root for the Skippers.

HOCKEY

Skipper Icemen made out well last week with a win and a tie — stabilizing their league record at 1-1-1.

Wednesday the Skippers faced-off against the Green Wave at Abington. Joe Becker put in both Skipper tallies in the 2-2 tie. The Skipper defense deserves the largest piece of pie creditwise as they controlled both blue lines with quickness and force.

Saturday the bladesters traveled to Plymouth to meet the Duxbury Green Dragons. From the beginning the Skippers were in control. Skippers sailed to a 7-4 victory on two goals by Don O'Neil.

Other goals were scored by Dom Campadelli, Doug Dillon, Doug Yeager, Joe McCullough and Danny Bowen.

READY TO ROLL — Rollerskating is making a big comeback and getting ready to hit the 'road' on their wheels are Katie Horn, left, and Elizabeth Hurley on Town Hall steps.

□HAPPY NEW YEAR BABY! We don't have any statistics — but Jarrod Robert Buckley may well be the first baby of the New Year in Cohasset! At noon on Jan. 1 he weighed in at 6 lbs., 14 oz. His mother, Lynne, is on the town board of health. His father's name is Gerard, and his 2-year old sister, Candice, couldn't be more proud.

Even luckier — both sets of grandparents are from Cohasset: Robert and Eileen Pape and Raymond and Patricia Buckley.

□CONGRATULATIONS to J. Stevens Pool who was elected a vice president of Rockland Trust Company recently. Pool entered the employment of Rockland Trust as a part-time teller in 1963 and aside from military service, has been with the bank since that time.

He has served in a wide range of positions, including branch manager, and is currently a commercial loan officer.

□While most of us either enjoyed the mild temperatures on Christmas Day or wished for colder and snowier breezes, the Hamilton family was basking on a beach on the island of Oahu. Jim, Laurie, and their daughters, Jill, 7, and Sarah, 9, spent the Christmas holidays visiting Laurie's brother, Technical Sargeant Russell Goodwin and his family at Hickam Air Force Base, Honolulu, Oahu. The base is located between Pearl Harbor and Waikiki Beach.

The Hamilton's swam and soaked up the Christmas sun on Bellows Beach, a three-mile stretch of Hawaiian sand owned and maintained by the U.S. government for military personnel. All beaches in the many-islanded 49th state are state-owned and beautifully maintained and provisioned.

Jim and Laurie traveled to the island of Maui for a weekend and also spent a fascinating few days on Hawaii at a military rest camp which sits on the rim of one of the most visited, and still active volcanoes — Kilauea. Located 4,000 feet above sea level, Kilauea has been active as recently at November 1979. Jim describes the view into the volcanoe (which has another crater inside, called Halemaumau) "like the end of the world. Hardened molten lava with steam and sulfur seeping out reminds you that the volcanoe is still very much alive."

□Navy Ensign David Vivian, son of John and Dawn Vivian of 41 Rustic Drive, was commissioned in his present rank upon completion of Aviation Officer Candidate School. A 1975 graduate of Cohasset High School, and a 1979 graduate of Colby College, Waterville, Maine, with a Bachelor of Arts degree, he joined the Navy in June 1979.

Century 21, local franchise, Wayne Sawchuk announced this week that effective Tuesday Jan. 8th, the Century 21 office in Cohasset will be moved to 215 Chief Justice Cushing Way, Route 3A from its former location and will officially be named Century 21 Minot Realty, Inc.

The present Minot Realty staff will join forces with the Century 21 staff to provide professional real estate service to the entire South Shore.

□The deLima family, Richard, Sarah, and their children, Janie, 9, Jonathan, 7, Kate,4, and Carolyn, 17 mos., spent the Sunday before Christmas in East Longmeadow for a special party.

Dick's grandmother, Mrs. Harriet Ford, celebrated her 100th birthday on December 22. Her friends at the nursing home where she lives gave her a party on Saturday, but the real surprise came on Sunday when members of her family traveled from Cohasset and from as far away as Seattle, Washington, Florida, Chicago and Washington, D.C. to honor her.

Mrs. Ford received a letter of congratulations from President Carter on the achievement of her hundredth birthday. She was especially proud of the check she received for a recently published article she wrote on the Blizzard of '88.

Great granddaughters, Janie and Kate, played their violins for her which she greatly enjoyed along with the rest of the party.

□BEAR ENVY: It started on New Year's Day. I didn't get out of bed. It was more than the partying, and a cold; it was the beginning of — Hibernation.

All day my mind was confused. Concentration was impossible on anything other than food or warmth. It was the transition. The changeover from frenzied activity to lethargy and calm. The demarkation was New Year's Eve on the stroke of midnight. (Strangely enough, fireworks went off!)

These are the symptoms. Slumber sessions are longer and more difficult to break away from. Clothing becomes more a practicality with uncoordinated layers replacing more stylish combinations. If the holiday feasting hasn't build up enough layers of insulation, greater quantities of hearty food are consumed. Meals go back to all-day simmers on the stove for extra heat.

Reading, thinking and contemplating are all activities that replace shopping, wrapping, talking, phoning and scurrying. Social life and community contact comes to a halt.

There are, however, two children, one adult and three four-legged animals who depend on me for numerous things which get in the way of the scheme of my hibernation. I work around them the best I can. Unlike some mammals who sign-off for the winter, I still function in my normal capacities, but its a 'bear' schedule.

Some mornings when I have to summon all my strength to emerge from my toasty covers into a gray, cold day, I envy the hibernating bear. No phones or doorbells in his cave; no modern entrapments to clutter his slumber.

Would the bear envy me if he knew the people pleasures of my life? Probably.

The biggest concern of my quasi-hibernation is that there may be thousands more like me Around Town. The prospects of filling this column with winter news are bleak if we're all in the same cocoon!

Do-It-Yourself Items Bigger Than Ever!!

By Larry Fone

1980 — a year of challenge for the consumers and retailers in Cohasset. Getting the most and best quality for the dollar spent will be reflected in new and exciting items in Cohasset shops.

Do-it-yourself items will be bigger than ever — from baking bread to painting and papering your livingroom. Many shops will have fine savings in January. Mark downs and specific merchandise for birthdays, anniversaries still do go on!

Every merchant in Cohasset is trying to bring their customers the best . . . at the best buy! Take advantage of the Winter savings in your town.

This last Christmas season, we all owe Cohasset Hardware and Creation Interiors a special thanks for their Christmas decorations. Also the Historic Houses on Elm Street a special thanks for their effort to make Cohasset attractive for Christmas.

However, generally most shops did not try too hard, so the usual award from the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association was cancelled. Those who did put their best foot forward will be commended.

For those folks who do "first of the year, thinning out at home" remember to save the saleable items for the many flea market sales around town, for fund raiser groups.

The Cohasset Historic Society has had their mini-barn raised for storage of flea-market saleable items. Put your "charity items" aside. If you want an immediate pickup call Connie Parker at 383-0773 or me at 383-1906. The annual flea market will be held May 24.

News in town for the Sunday brunch crowd . . . the Greenhouse Restaurant is doing a super brunch 11-2:30 p.m. Sundays — elegant egg dishes and fresh fruit, hearty Yankee steak and eggs. All reasonable!

Salvador, sewerage treatment engineer at the Cohasset plant. Nut Island can't handle what is has. Nobody wants us. We're going to have to deal with our own wastes soon.

According to William Montuori, sewer commission chairman, a new sewerage treatment plant could handle septage waste for the whole town, although only a portion would be sewered at the onset.

There is a difference of opinion on that. Manny Salvador said a new plant could relieve some of the problem, but added that septage dumping causes problems in a treatment system.

Wayne Grandin, assistant to the Assistant Sanitary Engineer at the MDC agrees with Salvador that septage dumping causes problems in a plant. "Towns are discovering what we discovered long ago."

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said the town has been aware of the situation for some time. Plans for solving the problem have been in the works for some time. The possibility of a town septage lagoon had been discussed, and even approved by the Lakeville Dept. of Public Health.

Kevin O'Brien, health inspector for the town, said the late Rocco Rosanno had been looking into a lagoon situation which was approved by the Lakeville Dept. "But now we're in the Woburn Dept. of Public Health." He was unsure what the Woburn bureau would recommend regarding a lagoon. "Lakeville did approve the conception, but we're no longer in that area."

According to O'Brien, Janice Rosano, who has taken over her late husband's cesspool cleaning business, has not given up plans for a septage lagoon on the Rosano property. Mrs. Rosano could not be reached before deadline this week.

In the meantime, Wayne Grandin, assistant to the Assistant Sanitary Engineer of the MDC (Noel Baratta), said the MDC has for some time been attempting to make known to other state agencies that they should put pressure on towns to enforce local disposal of septage.

"In 1975 the MDC conceded there would be a health problem if the MDC stopped accepting illegal septage. We eliminated the problem by accepting some of the wastes," Grandin said.

At present, the MDC is not cutting off contracted customers, but it is firm in its decision to not accept illegal wastes. Local cesspool cleaners are complying.

According to Grandin, the state Division of Water Pollution Control has jurisdiction over the solution to the problems which the mandate will create for many South Shore communities. Industrial wastes have also been being disposed through the MDC system, which has caused additional problems for the MDC.

The New Dress

By Lois Martin

No letter more poignant, more provocative has come to me than that which arrived anonymously last Thursday.

It wasn't really a letter. Rather it was a short story about a grandmother who attended the wedding of a final granddaughter without benefit of a new dress.

Typewritten, the missive started, "Dear Lois, write this up." Indeed I shall. But behind the saga is a veil of mystery which I share with you for your own interpretation.

My friend, and I believe the person who sent it to me is a friend, a kindred spirit whom I may or may not know well, called the story, "The emperor's new clothes; or a new dress for the wedding." Here it is in its entirety:

"Grandma always liked new clothes.
But she had worn
many a hand-me-down in her long life.
Now the last granddaughter was getting married.
She wanted a new dress to shine for the occasion.
Also she had not had a new dress for a long, long time.
Psychologically speaking, a new dress would give her a great lift.
But no dress — a suitable one would cost maybe one hundred dollars.
Now the family had the money, but if one gave the bride money,
And considering the heating bill,
That was a lot of money for a new dress to be worn once or twice.
Grandma decided against it
She aged from 80 to 85 in a few short hours.
Never no more a new dress
What was the country coming to.
Grandma went to the wedding in a five or 10 year old ensemble had a good time, but the nagging thought...
Why haven't I been better at making money so that I could have been proud of my looks at the child's wedding.
Oh, the high price of pride.
The corsage helped. No one seemed to notice the stain on the coat.
But Grandma got what was come to her...the self pity in secret
The only new dress she will have is the flimsey at the undertaker's chapel."

Not everyone would agree it was the grandmother who wrote this near poetic letter. But I believe that was the case. And I earnestly wish, as others must, that she could remember herself at that wedding as the handsome grandmother in the gorgeous dress.

There are times when practicality works against us. Or indeed there are occasions when it is more practical to spend on one's pride than to save it for the bride. The grandmother wanted to look magnificent for the bride, her granddaughter. She wanted to get herself to the church, sit up front, on the bride's side, looking the best she could for the "child."

For your sake, Grandma, I, like you, wish that had been the case. Instead the heating bill gets paid and the bride and groom have a bit more money for...a piece of furniture, a special dinner, whatever.

But, as a granddaughter, albeit one who's been married more than 22 years, I must tell you what it meant to have your sort, a Grandmother, at my wedding.

My Grandmother is no longer living. But she was an important part of my wedding celebration. And I don't know what she wore. It mattered only that she was there. She brought the best of herself forward merely by being there. Because she was, and is, an infinite influence on me.

And in addition to not knowing what she wore to my wedding, I don't remember what gifts she gave me in her lifetime. Yet she gave me everything. I don't recall any lecture or lesson at her knee. Yet from her I learned of kindness, acceptance, love.

I mention this to you, not because it will displace the dress, but because in your granddaughter's mind, if hers is like mine, you are forever cloaked as an irreplaceable 'empress' with special traits only grandmothers have.

And what's more, I'd say it's high time you went shopping. The winter sales are on. There isn't any good reason death deserves a new dress. Life does.

Take the money set aside for the "flimsey" to be used at the "undertaker's chapel," and get yourself the grandest dress going. Wear it to your granddaughter's house for dinner. Wear it to the baptism of a grandchild. Wear it on a Sunday, or on a Monday when it suits you.

You'll look wonderful in it. And if you choose, it can still serve as your final gown. I would hope that by the time it does, however, that dress will be an "old ensemble," which has brought out your best appearance at many occasions.

And if you want someone to shop with, I'm your girl. I feel certain no one would be happier to see you in your finery than your granddaughter, the bride.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Try as I may, I can't find too many favorable things to say about winter, it not being my favorite time of the year. By dint of much soul-searching, however, I've managed to come up with a few Pollyanna-ish thoughts such as, "It's a good time to catch up on one's reading." So, settling down by the fire over the holiday weekend, I valiantly sought to improve my mind with the New York Times and now I know that McDonalds has sold 24 billion hamburgers in the last 10 years . . . 'In' vegetables are spinach, carrots, broccoli, cauliflower and bean sprouts of all sorts. Vegetarians prefer them blanched to near raw crispness . . . Certain to catch on would be a cookbook titled 'Salt free, fat free, quick, easy, natural, economical, traditional, gourmet, diet cookbook.' . . . Cuisinarts are the leading food processors, selling at the rate of two million a year, as opposed to the old multi-speed blenders which sold at the rate of five million a year and our country has the dubious pleasure of being the only country in the world where people die early because of over-eating. Everywhere else, premature death is caused by a shortage of food . . . I also learned what to do with the left-over roast that has been gracing our refrigerator since the holidays.

BEEF STROGANOFF

2 T. flour
½ tsp. salt, dash pepper
2 c. cooked roast beef pieces
¼ c. margarine
¼ pd. mushrooms, sliced
½ c. chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 c. plain yogurt
½ c. mayonnaise
2 T dry white wine
Cooked noodles

Mix together flour, salt and pepper. Dredge meat in flour mixture. Melt margarine in skillet. Brown meat on both sides, turning as needed. Add mushrooms, onion and garlic. Saute, stirring frequently, about 5 min. Mix together yogurt, mayonnaise and wine. Stir into beef and vegetables. Heat over low heat, stirring, 10 to 15 min. Serve over noodles. Serves 4.

There's a nice glow that comes when everything is restored to its rightful place after the holidays and long-lost items are unearthed when cleaning out closets. Under the box where the tree ornaments are stored I found a little book about the taverns that dotted the highways when stage coaches traveled between Boston and Plymouth. Travelers were welcomed by landlords with rather curious rules. Tabacco was considered to be more sinful and harmfulthan liquor and it was forbidden on the premises. Even in Boston streets, smoking was forbidden. In some cases travelers were permitted to smoke only once every ten miles while journeying by coach. Coffee was once prohibited and one tavern keeper was punished for selling a drink that "annoyed his neighbors by evil smells." Wonder if they ever served piping hot

1 c. flour
½ tsp. salt
2 eggs
1 c. milk
1 T butter of margarine, melted

Sift flour with salt twice. Beat eggs until light and thick. Add flour and ⅔ of milk, beating slowly until all flour is moistened — about 10 seconds. Add remaining milk and melted butter gradually, beating until mixture is free from lumps. Pour, filling greased baking cups a little less than half full. Bake in 425 degree oven for 40 min. Makes 8 popovers. Heat oven while mixing with rotary beater.

Fishermen Hold Annual Election

The Cohasset Fishermen's Association met at the American Legion on Monday evening for its first meeting of 1980. The Association which consists of 45 sport and commercial fishermen and yachtsmen experienced a 50 per cent member turnout.

The annual election of officers was held, and the new officers for 1980-81 are: George Adams, president; Herb Jason, vice president; Clifford Dickson, secretary-treasurer.

Elected to the board of directors were: Michael Hevy, Robert Baggs, Edward Young and Daniel Graham.

President Adams stated, "Many people think the Cohasset Fishermen's Association is for fishermen only, but this is not true. Our by-laws state our purpose to be the establishment of better harbor facilities for the benefit of both the commercial and pleasure craft owners, and under this charter we are going to continue to press for better facilities for all.

"I am hoping that we can reach a majority of the 300 some odd mooring holders to join us as members or associate members so we can realize this goal."

Adams said anyone interested in the improvement of the harbor should contact him at 383-6749 for more details and membership information.

It's Their One And Only Site... ...3 Sites To Be Placed On Warrant

Jones 1st With Citizens—1st On Warrant

By Tanna Kasperowicz

After 13 hours of tapes and untold hours spent in homework, the five-member citizens' advisory committee on the wastewater treatment plant site came up with the Paul Jones conservation land as its "No. 1 and only" selection.

Chairman Edwin Young said the committee would appreciate support from town meeting for the Jones site, which had as plusses for the committee the following: no land-taking costs (the land was given to the town for conservation purposes), environmental plusses, no impact of easements and accessibility.

Young noted the committee had been confronted with three sites which came within 1-3 numbers of one another on worksheets. The gravel pit, across the railroad bed from the Jones land, was originally the second ranking site. But Young said, "You can't hide the site and it's 30 feet below street grade." The committee chose to delete that site by throwing out two weights: public acceptance and intrinsic suitability.

Because the committee deliberated in code throughout last week's Thursday night meeting, it was difficult for the press to decipher much of the committee's discussion.

To the Mariner's knowledge, the following sites were ranked accordingly: 2-Music Circus; 3-Dean's Meadow; 4-Great Brewster; 5-James Brook; 6-Whale Meadow; 7-

COMPARING COATS — Elizabeth Good (she's 16 months old) compares her cold weather garb with the natural fur coat of a friendly Golden Retriever along Sandy Beach.

The Paul Jones land-transfer article will take second place on the Feb. 14 special town meeting warrant in the sewerage division.

First place is being reserved for the selectmen's consent agreement (in lieu of trial) which the Attorney General's office has offered in place of what it contends could be a stiffer fine for sewerage dumping violations since June 1979.

As of this writing, Whale Meadow and the school lands abutting the Music Circus were vying for third place on the warrant — with sewer commissioners unconcerned about which article would ultimately be awarded the position.

The preceding was decided during a one-hour emergency session of sewer commissioners Monday, with commissioners saying they would confer with Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. the following night to go over the legal issues of the warrant.

Commissioner Lot Bates urged commissioners to change their recommendation to the Jones conservation land — saying the town had already defeated Whale Meadow and the school land at previous meetings.

"What if that site (Jones) doesn't carry?" Commissioner John Hobbs said.

Chairman William Montuori said commissioners couldn't legally vote to recommend any article prior to the confusion of the Feb. 11 public hearing on the Jones land. Bates disagreed:

School Budget Under Tight Scrutiny

Few observers of past or present meetings of the school committee could deny that committee or the school department haven't been thinking E-N-E-R-G-Y savings since last September.

But savings realized thus far will make only a small dent in the projected $85,000 school energy bill the committee will have to present to a special town meeting before annual this year.

Budget sessions have just begun and school committee watchers are in for a long trek this year, as committee members scrutinize every inch of School Supt.'s recommended $3.67M 1980-81 school budget.

The budget shows a 3.98 percent increase over this year's budget ($3.53M) but does not include energy money — which Supt. Maloney recommends coming from a community-supported tax cap override.

Perhaps that's why certain members of the school committee took issue Monday with the number of identical magazine subscriptions circulating in the school department; out-of-state travel budget; overtime for custodians and budget format.

Also grants and their ultimate cost to the town when they are no longer funded; and the lack of inventory on various items including musical instruments.

Supt. Maloney said he had been instructed to prepare the budget in two different ways — "Depending upon the whims of the committee," when confronted by members Frank England and Patricia Walsh for having included in the budget a basic 5 per cent increase for all categories of personnel whose contracts had not been negotiated before the new budget year.

They said that estimates should have been included in another manner.

In addition, England said several "Boston gentlemen" were surprised that no back-up sheets had been provided with the budget.

The budget presented by Supt. Maloney for 1980-81 is proposed for a school population of 1,155 children: 286 at Osgood, 370 at Deer Hill and 902 at CHS.

Additional money has been budgeted for a library program at Osgood School, a gifted and talented program at Deer Hill including Grades 4, 5 and 6 which are presently in the program (to begin January 1981).

Only the Osgood School budget proposal was discussed Monday, with Jack Creamer, principal, present for discussion. Total Osgood population projected for next year is 286, down 47 from this year's 333.

In Grade K, two sections with one teacher and one instructional aide is recommended. Presently there are 52 children attending kinder-

Be On Alert For Dog Virus

Margaret Perrone of the Cohasset Harbor Grooming Shoppe, Elm Street, alerted the Mariner this week to Parvo-Vrisu, a disease of dogs which is treatable, but which happens so quickly that owner s don't get their dogs to the veterinarian in time.

Although there have been no known outbreaks of the virus in Cohasset at this time, the South Shore Veterinary Associates have had four cases with only one survivor.

Veterinarian Ken Knacck said symptons are as follows: vomiting, diarrhea, blood show, no appetite, may not drink water, lethargic.

"The virus affects the intestinal lining. The prognosis is very poor, depending on the dog's capacity to fight." While the incubation period is 1-14 days, Dr. Knacck said if an owner overlooks the symptoms the dog can experience rapid collapse and expire before the owner notices anything serious.

Dr. William Henry of Cohasset, also a veterinarian with the South Shore group, said the disease is a new virus which is known nation-wide.

While there is no known vaccine for the virus, Dr. Henry said his group is utilizing cat distemper vaccine which will protect dogs to some degree.

Kimball's Asks Public Permit

Kimball's By-The-Sea Motor Inn will appeal for the second time a decision of the building inspector who denied the applicant's request for a permit to allow the use of the restaurant/lounge by the general public.

The board of appeals will hold a public hearing on the issue Tuesday, Jan. 22 at 8 p.m. at town hall.

Kimball's contends that 83 parking spaces are necessary to open the restaurant/lounge to the public, further maintaining that changing the lines in the parking space around the motel will increase parking capacity to 45 cars.

Zoning Decisions Released By Board

The Cohasset Board of Appeals recently released its record of findings and decisions in connection with the following matters:

CROWN INVESTMENT

By a unanimous vote, the board has allowed the Crown Investment Group, Cushing Plaza, to withdraw without prejudice an application to construct a directory sign which would list all tenants of Cushing Plaza.

SWAIN DECISION

Norman E. and Joyce A. Swain were granted a special permit under the zoning by-law for the construction of a deck at 373 North Main Street, subject to conditions.

The board noted that the Swains erred in having not secured a building permit, but allowed that the construction of the deck did not derogate substantially from the purposes of the Flood Plain and Watershed Protection District.

There were no opponents to the building of the deck. A concrete pad had been present before the deck was constructed. The building inspector had ordered the deck torn down.

PAPA GINOS

By a unanimous decision the appeals board denied Papa Gino's of America, Inc., located at Cushing Plaza, a variance to allow two accessory signs for a total of 38 square feet. The signs would have been illuminated from within.

The board noted that one of the two requested signs had already been constructed and is illuminated with a reddish light in violation of the zoning by-law, and said the sign must be changed to conform with the same.

It was also mentioned that the applicant made use of sheet banner type signs in violation of the by-law. There was no public opposition to the application.

WOOD DECISION

F.H. and S.P. Wood were denied a special permit to convert a dwelling at 68 Pleasant Street to a three-family dwelling.

The board found plans and sketches to be inexact. Recently, the planning board voted in favor of permitting three apartments at the address in view of the high population density in the area.

In a letter dated Sept. 12, 1979 the board of health said the Wood's plans had been taken under advisement, and that when provisions of Title V had been met the board of health would give its approval for a special permit.

White's Farm.

When member Ralph Dormitzer said it seemed to him Sutton Rocks was the best outfall site, Young, Metcalf & Eddy Engineers said influent and effluent pipes would be placed in one trench throughout the town. He added that pipes go either through the town or duck around the town.

In spite of the fact that the school land site was the second ranking site after the committee deleted the gravel pit, Dormitzer said, "I feel very uncomfortable about the school lands — I feel it's too close to peoples' homes."

Young agreed that in spite of the fact the school lands came up so high, it was in a middle situation according to the numbers.

"It's my conservative opinion that sewerage is needed at this time. We could be locked out in the future. The Environmental Protection Agency is up to 1983 with its budget. If budget troubles happen, we could be running buckets out to Minot Lighthouse ourselves," Young said.

Commissioners

"The only reason for putting the Whale Meadow site on the warrant is to get people to come to town meeting and vote for the Jones site," Bates said.

Regarding the school facilities site, Montuori said it was still the commissioner's recommended site until commissioners voted to change their recommendation.

There was some discussion among commissioners regarding the possibility of withdrawing one of the three "land" articles on the floor of special town meeting.

"I do feel the Jones and the school land articles are substantially the same," Hobbs said, adding that he felt putting more than two choices before voters might be "reaching the point of diminishing returns."

Edwin Young, chairman of the citizen's advisory committee on the sewerage site, was asked by Montuori if the committee had a no. 2 site:

"We considered nine sites. We voted unaminous for one site," Young said.

Goats For Fun & Profit

By Tanna Kasperowicz

GOAT FACTS

—Most people don't have just one goat. Goats get lonely. So do horses. Many people buy goat companions for their horses. — Sandra Messina.

—"They don't eat tin cans, they only like glue on the cans." — Marlisa Clapp.

—"They're easy to keep, clean, intelligent, controllable, great 4-H projects for kids." — Cindy Clark, mother of Seth and Stephanie Clark.

—"They feed on hay, grain and water." — Stephanie Clark.

—"Occasionally they can have carrot peelings, apples, but no brownies." — Kim Messina.

—"I imagine they told you they raise goats for fun and profit — well, there's no profit." — Sandra Messina's husband.

Over a month ago a little release, unsigned, came into the Mariner announcing the election of Ginny Gatley from Norwell as the newly-installed president of the Capra-Kids Goat Club. It peaked our interest. It took a while for us to track the goats and the kids down, but here we are.

Exactly 21 kids and over 100 goats belong to the 4-H goat club whose members live in Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield and Hingham.

Sandra Messina, group leader from Hingham, said the club is anywhere from 5-10 years old and growing. All types of goats belong to the club, as do all types of kids. The goats in the picture are Swiss Toggenberg goats owned by the Messinas. Other types of goats in the club are Egyptian Nubian goats, French Alpine goats, and Saanen goats, which are all white.

One female goat eats approximately half a pound of food a day unless she is an exceptional milker or is in the family way. Sandra said if one owns milking goats, it is possible to raise a pig or a veal calf on the surplus milk . . . some members sell the milk to the mothers of babies who need the high protein nonallergenic substance, which is the only milk which one can drink "raw," without pastuerizing because the goat has its own peculiar way of pasteurizing its own milk.

Cheese, soap, yogurt, butter (difficult, but possible) can be made from goat's milk . . . and goat's meat is good. But no Capra-Kid would ever eat a goat.

Seth Clark said the milk is white in color. "You can tell if it's good if it's foamy. It tastes like regular milk."

All winter long the Capra-Kids groom and train and curry their goats and then when spring comes they reap their good stewardship awards at 4-H fairs across the state.

Goats, most of them, are very sensitive, clean creatures. "One of my goats refused to eat an apple offered to her after I had taken a bite. And it's been proven that goats are smarter than dogs," Sandra said.

Only "does" are shown at the fairs, as the bucks are more difficult and foul smelling.Breeding fees are approximately $30 — does go into heat every 17-21 days in the fall can continue on that cycle until March or April. A castrated buck is called a "weather."

Luckily, there aren't many laws against goats in South Shore towns. Almost anyone can own one and keep it on their property. All goats have registered papers and proper shots. A registered goat costs approximately $100.

"The saying — You get my goat — was first mouthed by racetrack horse breeders who used to keep goats as companions for their horses. If someone wanted a horse to lose they'd steal the race horse's goat. Hence, the saying." Sandra said.

Every goat has a tattoo on each ear, one which identified the year of its birth, the other that it belongs to its owner. Each year each goat bred in the United States has the same letter of the alphabet tattooed on its ear. In 1980 the tattoo will be a P. This is required for showing.

Individuals interested in 4-H should contact the Cooperative Extension Office in Hanson which is under the auspices of the University of Mass.

Dial-A-Feeling...

Last Sunday Rev. Ed. Atkinson at the First Parish told his parishoners about "Consensor," a new, not-yet-on-the-market instrument made by IBM.

According to Ed the item can, with the aid of individual boxes and a projection screen, project a group's feelings about any issue under discussion to the group itself (yes, Ed's been reading Futurist Magazine again)

Eye witnesses said Ed had them rolling in the aisles with some of his off-the-cuff comments. But in a brief phone interview early this week he said he's quite serious about wishing to utilize the equipment at parish meetings.

And if it were found to be helpful, he said he would further recommend it to the school committee . . . the sewer commissioners . . . town meeting.

Since Puritan times the church has formed a pattern for town government and he feels in this electronic age the church should look towards electronics to help mankind for good purposes.

He feels "Consensor" would force all groups to run a better meeting by demanding that questions be put to citizens in a frame which can be answered.

The Mariner, as the church, attempts to get readings, too. We do this by printing commentaries, writing news, interviewing people regarding their reactions to the news. And, we actively seek letters.

We know, because we talked to them, how the police department feels about the possibility of its being taken out of Civil Service. We know why the school committee doesn't want to give up its land for a wastewater treatment plant.

But we can't report what we are helpless to observe.

If a committee chooses to discuss items in code . . . referring to nameless issues by numbers . . . then that committee is denying the public the right to observe the meeting.

Under the public documents law, unless material is confidential, the public must have knowledge of the materials or documents being discussed. Conducting a meeting in code so that neither the public or press can observe discussion is illegal.

And all of the "concensors" in the world aren't going to alleviate the irony of that situation.

Her Secret For 26 Years

Letters

To the Editor:

I especially enjoyed the Patches column about "The New Dress," and remembered my own dear grandmother preparing to attend my wedding.

Since my mother, her only child, had died years before and she was also a widow, the wedding of her only granddaughter was a very important occasion. Despite failing strength (she was almost eighty) and limited means, she had managed to buy herself a becoming dress without trying it on in the store. It was with great reluctance that she tried it on for me and necessary alterations were made.

At that time no lady would have attended a big church wedding without appropriate hat and gloves, and these were sadly lacking. What she wanted would be well beyond her means. For years she had provided a home for me and Sunday dresses galore. I was determined she have all that was necessary to look nice and enjoy herself.

So off we went one afternoon to a fine store in the next town, where I made arrangements with the saleslady to quote ridiculously low prices for a small hat covered with tiny flowers and a pair of long rose colored gloves. The hat was "just what I always wanted," and expensive.

Despite the fact that I was marrying someone other than the local boy she had picked out for me, and her feet hurt, the lady had a happy time on the rainy Sunday afternoon of my wedding and looked radiant.

For months afterward she bragged about her purchases, "such reasonable prices," and sent many friends looking for elusive bargains at the exclusive shop.

Since this has been my secret for twenty-six years and dear grandma was laid to rest a few years after the wedding, I too would be anonymous.

Tis Has A Nerve

To the Editor:

The nerve! This time Rob Tis has gone too far. Suggesting that the Cohasset High School Marching Band show at halftime should be replaced by a trained dog act borders on cloven-hoofed demonism. Better his column should be replaced by the Ambulance dog!

Continued Effort

To the Editor:

I wish to take this time to thank the Mariner for its continued efforts to make the people in the Town of Cohasset aware of the many problems the town has and will have in the future.

"Our Little Town is GROWING." This statement was by my paper boy a short time ago and it really hit home. Here a young boy in his early teens knows our town is growing, but many elders are not aware.

Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
Chet Magee

'Unfortunately Not' Is Unfair Answer

To the Editor:

Last week, Mr. Rob Tis, in his "sports quiz" feature, asked the question, "is the Cohasset Band going to be replaced at halftime by a trained dog act?" He then proceeded to answer his own question (upside down, I might add) "unfortunately not."

Now, my concern here is not whether the CHS Band should or should not actually be replaced, but rather that the question seemed to be asking for an opinion from the reader, which, to be offered after some thought, might refer to which type of replacement act would be most suitable.

To have to accept "unfortunately not" as the answer is unfair. I think the proper answer should have been "no, by a snake charmer," or possibly, "no, by a one legged juggler."

As a result of my misinterpreting the question, I only got nine correct, thereby falling into the "sports dummy" category. If Mr. Tis would concur with my interpretation I would have ten correct, and could proudly call myself a "sporty booster."

Hoping to hear from you soon, I am

Yours truly,
Bates Lincoln Pratt

Relativity Explained

By Chet Ellis

Life in Cohasset has become too easy. Other than an occasional zoning battle, we rock dwellers rarely get our feathers ruffled more than once or twice a year. Cohasset moves along at 30 mph, if you know what I mean.

What has happened is that our coefficient of primal aggravation has dropped below 7.6, which, if you have studied the instructions on the backs of aspirin bottles as I have, you will understand that anything less than 9.1 can lead to acute suburban complacency. Or worse, a severe case of communal unconciousness.

One consequence of such a state is over-reaction to basically simple, straightforward, community problems. To mention a current glaring example, look at all the fuss that's been stirred up over locating one little sewage treatment plant. I'd hate to think how we'd react if we had a real problem to deal with. I mean, suppose the new dam in Beechwood broke, where would we all be then?

But not to worry, I think I have a solution. What needs to be done is to raise Cohasset's coefficient of aggravation to a much higher level.

The answer? Simple: install parking meters! Imagine, the entire downtown section including the common, the harbor, the beach, and Government Island lined with brand new, twenty-five cent, double action parking meters. A glorious sight! What a source of aggravation!

Is there anything in this world more miserable than dealing with a stuck parking meter on a cold day in February when you are in a hurry? Of course not. To heighten the effect, 40 cent meters should be used. They require a quarter, a dime, and a nickel to be inserted (in the correct order) before the timer will register.

The possibilities for irritational enhancement are limited only by the imagination. For instance, another idea would be to install the meters so close that the cars overlap them, thereby provoking inter-citizen accusations of space usurpance!

A "close to the last straw" action would be to issue a dozen or so "free parking" number plate medallions to a select few town officials (but none to the police officers), thereby causing not only extreme aggravation but indignance bordering on apoplexy for the Police Department and the balance of the citizenry.

The ultimate aggravation would come when the Denver Boot is affixed to the left front tire and your name appears in the Mariner as one of thirty-eight scoflaws who has ignored 25 cent parking tickets.

As a consequence of all this, the problem of locating and paying for a treatment plant would pale next to the hassle generated by a couple of hundred parking meters. A true diversion.

As an additional benefit, the income to the town from parking fees and fines would probably fail to offset the cost of installation and maintenance. This would cause those who live fiscally responsible lives to become unglued.

A committee would be appointed, a superintendent hired, and part-time employment as meter maids would be provided for the wives of at least six or eight more town citizens.

During holidays, the meters in the downtown shopping area could be decorated to match the season (can you imagine Halloween?).

To sum it all up, what is needed is more aggravated disorder, not less. Everything is relative they say, and the diversion created by the installation of parking meters would more than offset the effects of outrageous bureacracy for years to come. An epiphany of a world gone mad.

Now, another idea that might work would be to lay tracks the entire length of Main Street and . . . . . .

Ideally, Elms Meadow Multi-Purpose

To the Editor:

Recently, in at least one local newspaper (see Cohasset Mariner, 1/10/79, Sewer Commission Briefs, page 2; a couple of detrimental and mis-represented comments were projected by a town official in regard to Elms Meadow.

The remarks were made with little regard to, or knowledge of, all the facts, and while we seek no apology, we would like to, for the record and our own reputation, clarify a couple of the comments in particular.

The statement: "They drained it for summer baseball, but never had baseball up there," is not why we tried, unsuccessfully for the first time, to drain the meadow. Our intent was, as we have done for the past few years, to drain it so that we could complete the grading and seeding of the base of the meadow during this past summer.

Ideally, the area will be one of multi-purpose, whereby residents will have a grassed, open space area, to do whatever they wish during non-skating months. Also, the grass would offer a more ascetic picture for residents, a better surface to play on, and cut down the dust, which, up until this past summer, has been a problem.

During this past spring, we received a letter from the Water Department Superintendent asking that we leave the boards in the dam all summer (on a year round basis, actually) in order to retain water in the meadow throughout the summer months.

We did not comply with this request for a number of reasons the least of which was so that we would be able to complete our landscaping. Also, standing water, particularly during spring and summer months, has a tendency to breed mosquitos. Again, the intent is to make Elms Meadow a multi-purpose recreational area, and to keep water in it during the summer months would preclude other uses of the land.

Another statement, entirely incorrect, "They forgot to cut the grass." We could not cut the growth (not grass by any means) due to the water which, for unknown reasons to the Recreation Commission at least, did not drain, evaporate or percolate as it has previous years.

The embankments which displayed grass by early summer were cut to perfection, on a regular basis, by the Tree and Park Department. The implication: "we forgot" is absured. The statement: "they never put the retainer boards back" is true as we wanted to keep the water level as low as practical, freezing the ice, thus creating a surface where the growth could be cut off at ice level, and still have enough free-board to flood over the original surface.

Unfortunately, the statements were made based on an opinion by observation — not facts. This article is not an attempt to discredit or seek revenge, not is it an attempt to conjure up excuses for problems; it is, however, an effort to inform residents of the problems we have encountered and what we are trying to do to rectify the problems.

We wish to thank residents for their patience regarding the use of the skating area. We feel that, with some cold weather, hence, ice, the area will be functional. No one is more upset in regard to the unique problem than we are.

John M. Worley, Director
Cohasset Recreation Department

It's Time To Melt Down Christmas Calories

By Karin Bartow

After the fruit cakes, cookies, stuffed turkey or ham and rounds of punch and glogg, what do our thoughts turn to? Well, for some, hibernation sets in and we begin our comatose existence by fueling ourselves generously and fortifying the soul-side with quiet activities.

Many others begin to worry, plan and finally implement an exercise program for the removal of all those Christmas calories. Many of us worry about the excess cargo we carry around, but the extent of our exercise is worry. Others work at being fit all year, but there is a definite trend after the big eating days to melt down the fatty tissue.

No need to look beyond the borders of Cohasset for physical fitness programs and sports. It's all right here, if you want it. Here is a sampling of what's available and what your neighbors are doing about exercise.

DiGirolamo

Many women are returning to their old ways of exercise and are liking it less since New Life Women's Health Spa closed down just before Christmas. Josephine DiGirolamo, who owned and managed the Spa (affectionately known as the Fat Farm), says that she's continuing her eight year exercise program at home, 25 minutes a day and shooting for one hour a day soon. She walks daily and she and husband, Gino, try to walk together after dinner every night. Some of us are not that disciplined!

Carol Martin

Carol Martin misses the sociability of the exercise program at New Life. She's returned to running (after two years) and recommends to other returnees to stay off their toes! She also plans to get back into lap swimming, either at the Quincy "Y" or at MacMullen's pool in Norwell.

PAVEMENT POUNDER jogging along town is Greg Yacobian.

Others in limbo since the closing of New Life include: Lois Butman, who says she does more walking now; Elizabeth O'Connell, who's undecided at the moment about what she'll do next, and waiting anxiously for snow to fall; Joan Graham is jogging and dragging her friend, Tisha Bryant along with her (you're a good neighbor, Tisha!); Pat Mullaney, who went to New Life almost every day for two years, says she's "staying down on the floor as much as I can." She bought some equipment (two weights and a pole) which she uses in her own exercise routine at home (on the floor, I presume!); Pat is also learning how to drive so she can get to another exercise farm soon!

The idea of an exercise cooperative was offered for any takers.

Charles Wheelwright is a year-round swimmer who narrowly misses our polar bear award because we learned that his outdoor pool has heated water inside. He still deserves alot of credit for quasi-winter lapping.

Aerobic dancing is a popular addiction and 10 teachers from the Osgood School have just begun their renaissance in one of these programs in Scituate. Good exercise through tricky dance routines.

The Community Center is one of several places in the area that offers classical ballet for masochists and, optimists, I suppose, for who knows where a budding middle-aged ballerina lurks?

Walkers, joggers and runners by the score abound on our streets all year along, but the winter narrows them down to the real serious types. It is said that between 6 and 7 a.m. the Common is an area where many of them can be sighted.

The Crafts

Jill and Roger Crafts take running seriously and religiously; Dick Hurley carries a stick to ward off four-legged beasties; Rev. Muir and Tom Hamilton are running too; Dennis Rossi has had a jogging program in the works for awhile, but he's reluctant to put it into action for fear that he may ruin his legs for skiing — better implement the jogging program, Dennis, no flakes.

If you are awake at an early hour and lie very still with a window open (as I sometimes do), you can hear them splat, splat, splat as they run by, while you do a few isometrics under the covers.

There are many serious tennis players in town who take it even more seriously in the winter. You guilt-ridden chair-sitters will be distressed to know that many of the women team tennis players, who play twice a week, and more, are also runners! Sue Killilea keeps in further shape five times a week and tells me, cheerfully, that running helps "get rid of the little black clouds." (I believe you Sue, but whenever I try it, I bring the thunderclouds along with me!) Joan Bell is another avid tennis player who adds to our shame by running regularly too.

Killilea

Tom Killilea has made good on his New Year's resolution to visit FitCorp. on Federal Street in Boston, an exercise station among the skyscrapers for desk-bound office workers.

The Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club offers team tennis for the ladies and many imaginative programs for the men, who get their games in during evenings and weekends. There are also lots of things for the kids — round robins, clinics, and for all, open times for just "fun" tennis games and mixed doubles.

A little easier, but more robust, racket game is paddle tennis and there is the Cohasset Paddle and Tennis Club which maintains and operates two platform tennis courts on 3-A.

Cohasset Winter Gardens offers year-round skating with Disco skating on the weekends, ice skate dancing, lessons and recreational public skating.

There is bowling at the Community Center and disco dancing, weight training, fitness and yoga through the Recreational Department. There are horse riders, bike riders and untold numbers of in-house exercise buffs, one, two, three-ing every day.

Me...

As for myself, I'll start feeling guilty when I fail the last of my own three-part physical fitness test. Although I can't converse for 10 minutes after landing on the third floor and need to rest my arms inbetween two shampoos and a cream rinse, I can still sleep soundlessly after a day of no exercise. When sleep finally eludes me, I'll begin worrying, and long about spring, I'll take some action.

garten.

One teacher and one Metco teacher are budgeted for Grade 1 — which shows a current population of 89. While four teachers have been budgeted for Grade 2, showing a current population of 78; and four teachers have been budgeted for Grade 3, showing a current population of 114 students.

When England asked Creamer about the possibility of reducing administrative aides, along with teacher cutbacks, Creamer said:

"At the lowest level (elementary) there is a need for someone to be on hand to meet a variety of needs. We need an Erma Bombeck kind of person to decipher notes to go nowhere, notes to go somewhere."

Creamer said he also felt this person could run the projected library at Osgood School.

Mrs. Walsh said only "eight bodies" had been cut since 1971 when Osgood School serviced 600 children. But Chairman Jack Langmaid said since 1971 there had been a substantial reduction of both teachers and activity aides.

Supt. Maloney said in 1975 various sophisticated programs had been required by the state, making further drastic reductions difficult.

At 10:25 the committee entered into an executive discussion to discuss custodial and administrative negotiations.

Citizens' Comm. Writes On Sewage Site

To the Editor:

At a meeting held on Thursday, Jan. 10, 1980, the citizens advisory committee to the board of sewer commissioners voted unanimously to recommend the Jones (conservation) Land as the site for the proposed sewer treatment plant.

The Jones site was one of eight formally reviewed by the committee in a process that compared each of the sites on a scale of one to eight in 14 different criteria including operating and construction costs, impact on quality of life, environmental impact, access, visibility, extraordinary costs, and general suitability.

The resulting total of the scores in each criterion for each of the sites was used as the basis for the final decision.

The committee also placed a numerical ranking on intrinsic suitability and public acceptance, comparing total scores for each of the sites with and without these two additional, subjective criteria.

In each of the two scorings, the Jones site scored most favorable. Other numerical tests were performed on the score sheet to distinguish the sites, with substantially the same end result. Specifically, the Jones site scored favorably, either first or second among the other choices, in eight of the criteria: low site visibility, least impact on quality of life, least impact on tax rate, least extraordinary costs, least land taking costs, best access to site, public acceptance, and intrinsic suitability. It scored seventh or eighth in just one.

The committee drew from the information published in the Metcalf and Eddy Report of May 31, 1979 in evaluating the sites but used many other sources including other published studies, reports of public hearings on this issue, information from citizens, surveyors maps of Cohasset, Coast and Geodetic Survey Maps, figures on assessed land values, and the expertise and careful consideration of its members.

The committee also recommended that a west outfall, located northerly of the junction of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue, near Pleasant Beach be considered the prime choice for the location of the effluent discharge pipe.

This location for the pipe was considered more favorable for the outfall both because it is closer to the Jones site than the East outfall (near Sutton Rocks) and because the outfall could be placed in deeper and more open water with a shorter pipe than at the East outfall.

The committee is aware, however, that this recommendation is subject to a rigorous testing of the two sites for suitability by the engineers during the design stage of the facility.

In conclusion, the committee is unanimous in its conviction that the Jones site is the best of the available sites in Cohasset for the location of the sewer treatment plant.

Buy Local Attitude Liked By Merchants

By Larry Fone

The Village Merchants want to express thanks to all for helping make Christmas 1979 a good season. Everybody in the Village and Route 3-A were appreciative of the "buy local" attitude this year.

I think shop owners made shopping pleasant and easy with many pre-holiday specials and items that were geared to our pocketbooks.

That statement can be supported by the few returns at the shops in January.

Thursday morning last, the Cohasset Village & Harbor Association had its' monthly meeting. Margaret Dillon was invited to disclose the wonderful plans underway for July's "Art Festival" for Cohasset and the entire South Shore Art Community.

The Cohasset Village & Harbor group totally endorsed her plan and all of us in Cohasset should be proud of the stimulation and aestetics brought to use by this active group. Let's get behind them and support them with dollars or volunteer activity. Persons wishing to support this important cultural activity should call Margaret Dillon at the Art Center, 383-9548.

Offer your support early and help make the 25th Anniversary of the Arts Festival the best ever!

The Village & Harbor Association is now planning some special promotions in the Village area for winter and early spring. Special events and special sales will be featured and will be announced in the next month.

The Village Association board has voted in a new member — Tanna Kasperowicz. "Tanna K" will bring another new spirit to the group, with experience in writing, editing and public relations we look forward to her enthusiasm and contribution to our town.

We all must thank Steve Wigmore and the men of the Cohasset Highway Dept. for trimming the tree at St. Stephen's this year. Without their help this would not have been possible.

Big 5 Near First Place With Norwell Win

By Rob Tis

The mighty Skipper basketball team took its 4-2 league record to Norwell last week — with a unique poise and playmaking ability they rolled over their opponents to a 63-61 win. The game, however, was not quite as close as the score might indicate.

The lead see-sawed back and forth throughout the first half, but a rejuvenated Skipper team charged out and ascertained leads of 8 and 10 as the third quarter ended. Into the fourth quarter the Skippers kept this lead and with about two minutes left they began to run out the clock — using their ball-handling guards Bill Kurtz, Keith Ross and Greg Raffa.

This strategy worked well for awhile, but Norwell climbed gradually, taking the game within 2 points with a lucky last-second shot.

Leading the Skipper attack was Bill Taylor, who had an awesome 23 points and ripped down 15 rebounds. Bill Kurtz had 14 points, Mark Goff had 12, Patrick Duffy had 7 and Jim McCarthy added 5.

Hopefully the Skippers will show the kind of good fundamental play against Duxbury on the 16th in a game which could put the Skippers into first place!!

WRESTLING

Skipper Matmen faced three tough matches over the weekend. Although there were some great individual performances along the way, the Matmen took hard losses in all three competitions.

Friday night Skippers bowed to Norwell 40-21. Mike Buckley, Torin Sweeny and "lightening quick" Jack Hernan all achieved pins for their team, but it wasn't enough to offset Norwell's overall good performance.

Saturday afternoon Matmen lost once again to a powerful Walpole squad 40-27. Mike Buckley and Jack McClean both won their contests. Gordon Ricketts wrestled way beyond his weight class to avoid a Skipper forfeit, bravely keeping his shoulders off the mat — in a losing effort.

Jack Hernan once again dominated his opponent scoring yet another pin, this one within the first 25 seconds of the contest, keeping his unbeaten streak alive.

"The Stickman" (Mike Ellis) had a gallant comeback pin in what Coach John Leone called "The battle of the day."

Monday Skippers faced the Duxbury Green Dragons and were totally outclassed. Senoir Jack MaClean was the only winner of the day – pinning his opponent in a remarkable effort. MaClean is presently the only undefeated member on the team.

Skipper Gymnasts Dominate Sachems

By Rob Tis

One question in last week's sports quiz was "Does Cohasset have a gymnastics team?" The answer is obviously yes, and a good one at that.

Last Wednesday a large, but completely silent, group of parents and friends gathered in the upstairs gym at CHS to watch the powerful Skipper gymnasts take on the Middleboro Sachems.

The Skippers dominated the match — tallying 100.25 points to the Sachem's 63 and the crowd was elated.

The gymnasts compete in four different events: the vault, the balance beam, the uneven bars and floor exercises. It is similar to the Olympic gymnastic meets which were one of the highlights of 1972 and 1976. The scoring is done by two judges on a 1-10 scale with an outstanding performance being in the 7 range.

Last week a few Skipper Tumblers landed in the 7 range.

Janet England and Laura Durkin are co-captains of the team. Against the Sachems, Janet scored an 8.0 on her vault and in the sevens on the uneven bars. Laura dominated the balance beam.

Karen Eckberg scored a meet high 8.35 on her vault as well as giving outstanding performances on the unevens and floor exercises.

Helping Skippers on their way to an unprecedented victory last week were: Anne Marie Lagroterria, Kim Whittick, Carolyne Bonner, Jeanie Baccari, Maura Corkery and Katie Duffy.

Also, Richelle Sargent, Janny Carlson, Marcy Brown and 7th grade sensation" Julia Sachen.

This win makes the Skippers' record 1-0. As Marcy Brown said: "Our goal for this meet was to score 100 points. Hopefully, we can do it again."

This was the first time I had ever attended a gymnastics meet and I was surprised at the great skill of the team. One important thing for meetgoers to remember is to leave your Nacho potato chips at home because while someone is performing the least bit of noise is not tolerated.

Sandy Hayes coaches this team — and it's a gifted one.

GIRLS'S BASKETBALL

This team's 1-5 record doesn't represent its talent — as it crushed the Norwell Clippers 42-35 last week. Jodi Sandblom just couldn't miss the basket — accounting for 24 Skipper points . . . a season high for the Skipper co-captain.

Adding six points a piece for the Skippers were Ellen McCarthy and Hannah Clinton.

The Skippers — who are now putting things together — will negotiate for their third victory this week against Duxbury.

Harbor Workshop

The Cohasset Harbor Study Committee has announced plans for a public workshop to be held 8 pm. on Wednesday, Jan. 23, at the Town Hall.

Charles G. Fink, chairman of the committee, said this is the second of four scheduled workshops. The workshops are designed to involve Town residents and interested persons in the recently-initiated harbor master plan program.

Fink noted that the second workshop has two purposes. The first is to refine growth opportunities and development constraints for the harbor. The second is to focus on proposed short- and long-term goals and objectives which will be a guide for the development of the harbor master plan.

The Doldrums

By Lois Martin

You can't beat a good doldrum. In fact I don't know what I'd do without one, placed just where it is, right after Christmas.

The doldrums have been blamed too long for human ills they've not caused. In and of itself, a doldrum isn't boring, though people find themselves bored with doldrums by late February or March.

That's as it should be. For every thing, there is a season. And for the doldrum, it's now. This is our human hibernation period. This particular season is not so much of a downer as it is a slow-downer. That is, people voluntarily bring themselves, their goals, to a screeching halt after the holidays. I talked with a woman last week who was on her last after-Christmas wheeze. She said she couldn't wait to get into the doldrums. She looked forward to them as one would to a good book, which is, by the by, one of the activities inherent in the span of one's particular doldrum.

PATCHES

The annual spell is more self-inspired than contagious, though we tend to catch the mood of someone cast in doldrums and are inspired to match it.

But there are definite guidelines and activities, or lack thereof, in the doldrum season. To begin with one must be at home, ideally in a bathrobe, to benefit from it. Many of us have met the recent weekends not with a long list of chores but with the TV movie guide.

Herein are some allowed and forbidden exertions within the doldrum time frame of the next two months:

You don't just light a fireplace fire; you light it and sit to watch it, adding wood as you need the extra heat (two to four hours).

You continue writing Christmas cards, well aware though you may be that you're either a little late or very early.

You do not take the dog to the vet for his annual shot; that can be postponed for at least a week.

You watch three consecutive movies on the UFH channels: I recommend Randolph Scott in "Tall in the Saddle," Natalie Wood in "Marjorie Morningstar," and "War and Peace," until you're sleepy.

Mate socks. They've been piling up at random since Thanksgiving and need attention. But a doldrumer wouldn't tax herself by deciding which odd ones should be discarded. She knows the odd ones are clinging to the inside of her summer nightie in the attic. She'll get to that later.

You can clean out a desk drawer but not a closet. A drawer can be rearranged while seated on the couch, a closet cannot.

Start knitting washcloths. Clever afghans or needlepoint demand attention to detail. Besides most of us like to get proficient at knitting so we look professional in our town meeting seats in April.

Paste stamps in the S & H book. It doesn't matter they're not using those much anymore.

You can crack walnuts but only if you want to eat them on the spot. They can't be readied for baking because baking isn't a doldrum activity.

Stews are allowed so long as they simmer, same with soups. But there aren't to be any dishes prepared for which a cookbook would be needed. Popcorn is fine so long as two people work on it — one to get it going; another to melt the butter.

If you hang out the sheets, and that can be a doldrum event, leave them out there long after they're dry. Snow never hurt a sheet.

Eliminate errands. You still need milk but send someone else out for it.

Talk about going skating. It'll make you feel slimmer, more athletic and talk doesn't make you break a leg.

Get to the couch before any other family members can, including the dog. Put your pillow on it; stack a few magazines on the end of it. Let it be known that's your place.

Above all, pretend your mother said you can't go out of the house. What most adults miss now and then is the commanding voice of authority that won't allow activity.

To insure the doldrums have full effect, lend your car, your coat and your cash to anyone who looks reliable.

And remember, you are fully entitled to take it easy. You are the same person who wrapped gifts at 6 a.m. a month ago, kept the oven on high after 10 p.m. and shopped your heart out for other people. A good doldrum is your own post holiday gift. Enjoy it. Next month at this time, you'll start to resurge and you and your VISA card will be allowed out of the house again.

When time is short, we can help

If you're behind; can't always plan ahead; have to wait for last minute information; just plain forgot, etc., etc., we can help.

We can usually give 24 hour service on camera-ready copy, anywhere from 25 to 2,500 copies of your original.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Winter on the South Shore can a thing of beauty, but more often seems a study in grey, with the sea a cold, cruel hue and skies the color of old pewter. Not nearly as monotonous when viewed from the warmth of home, the cold, penetrating dampness can best be alleviated by hearty, nourishing fare such as our Yankee forefathers knew best. Dumplings are sort of old-fashioned, but delicious when cooked in a hot soup or stew. Maple syrup on dumplings is traditional in Vermont and apple dumplings go well anywhere. These are for your stew.

2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt

Stir in slowly

Approx. 1 c. milk until the batter is thin enough to take up by rounded spoonfuls with a wet tablespoon. Bring the finished stew to the boiling point. The gravy should be shallow enough that the dumplings rest on meat or vegetables. Put spoonfuls of batter on the stew. Cook, uncovered, for approx. 10 min. Cover and cook 10 min. more. A glass cover will let you watch the dumplings without removing. Makes 6 to 8.

It hardly brightened up my day to hear of an incredible mistake in a recent column. Writing of the delights to be found in the new book "Delectable Collectibles" I chose three recipes as an example of the variety the Marshfield Newcomers included in their new book. As luck would have it, one of them was Cathy Brennan's Chicken Wings on pg. 15, the only recipe in the entire book that escaped the eye of their proof reader. You'll want to add two ingredients omitted from the original: 1 to 1½ c. oil and 1/2 to 1 c. soy sauce. There's nothing wrong with this recipe from Devon Mckean, also found in this new book, called

GONE ALL AFTERNOON STEW

2 lbs. stewing beef, cubed
3 med. carrots, sliced
2 onions, chopped
3 potatoes, quartered and peeled any cooked or frozen vegetables
10½ oz. can condensed tomato soup
1/2 can water
1 tsp. salt, dash pepper
1 bay leaf
1/4 c. sweet or sour pickle juice, or cooking wine

Preheat oven to 275 degrees. Put all ingredients in large casserole with lid to fit. There is no need to brown meat first. Mix ingredients. Cover and bake in preheated oven for five hours. Serves six.

Barren trees, creaking and swaying in gale winds were easily ignored last week while putting together a batch of Sandy Hawes' Chocolate Squares. Not so easy to forget are the calories, but it's a long time till our beaches entice us to reveal our winter's added poundage.

2 rolls refrigerated chocolate chip cookies
2 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. sugar

Slice one roll of cookies and place on bottom of 9 x 13 pan. Blend remaining ingredients and pour over slices. Top with second sliced roll. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 40 to 45 min. Test for doneness before removing from oven.

Developing a new interest helps to while away the winter doldrums. In Norwell, Beth Maroni has everyone cooking up a storm, learning the basic techniques in a series of six week courses she's offering in her Mt. Blue St. home. "Kitchen Works" began the first of the series last week, but call Beth if you want to join in the fun.

Franny Charles Looking For Olympic Bert..

By Karin Bartow

He's a hometown guy who's after the Olympic Gold medal and he stands a good chance of winning it.

Franny Charles, Jr. started sailing when he was five years old. He crewed for his father on a 210 and frostbit with him during many winters.

Over the years he became competent on a 210 and 110 class boat and did well in many local, regional and national races, and he's been a top-ranked member of the Tufts University sailing team for the last four years.

He's the epitome of a good sportsman.

Franny decided to pursue the 470 Class berth for the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow with his longtime friend Skip Whyte. Their combined efforts and successes culminated last summer when they qualified for the U.S. Olympic Team.

The two expert sailing partners met on the Charles River where Skip coaches the U.S. Sailing Team and Franny, as a member of the Tufts team, has competed against B.U. Tufts has one of the strongest sailing teams in the country. Tufts 100 team members include many world and national champions.

Franny arrived at Tufts as an outstanding sailor and has maintained that rank while working on Tufts' team. Skip didn't miss noticing that, and invited Franny to crew with him on a 470.

The 470 is approximately 16 feet long and very light — only 290 pounds. It's known as a high performance trapeze sailboat. Before teaming up. Skip won regional, national and North American titles and finished second at the 1976 U.S. Olympic trials by 2/10th of a point.

The combined efforts o. these two young men have been devastating to their American competition.

Qualifying for the U.S. Olympic team is a long, difficult task involving skill, hard work, fortitude and money. Percentage points are awa.d-ed based on performance in regionals, national regattas and internationals that ultimately prove the capability of the sailor, but also his willingness to make the sacrifice to get to the Olympics.

After qualifying for the team in May, the pair went on to win a silver medal at the Pan American Games in Puerto Rico during July.

Afterward, they went to Medemblink, Holland for the 470 Class World Championship. Their racing craft was delayed in reaching them because the freighter that was carrying it broke down. The boat finally arrived the night before the Championship, but it had been crushed.

They bought a spare Canadian boat, with which they were totally unfamiliar and finished overall in 6th place in a race against 80 boats from 29 countries. The kind of stuff that makes gold medal winners!

They followed that Championship with a trip to Russia for the Pre-Olympic regatta where they ended up 7th overall. They returned home to win the Northeast District Championship and the Atlantic Coast Competition.

Their time is now consumed with preparation of their new 470 sailboat, which was built to their specifications, and in a week they will begin traveling to final races and shakedowns for them and the boat. All the work and committment will, hopefully, pay off for them in May at the Pre-Olympic Trials in Newport, Rhode Island.

There is only one slot for the Olympic Games from the U.S. in this class — there is no second place

OLYMPIC BOUND [depending on President Carter] will be Fran Charles and Skip Whyte, here in action on 470 Class World Championship this summer in Holland. They finished first among U.S. Boats but sixth overall. Winner was J-1045, Japanese boat to stern.

CHS Cheerleaders T-E-R-R-O-R-I-Z-E-D

By Sgt. John J. Rhodes, III
As told to T. Kasperowicz

The call came in at 5:34 p.m. last Friday. It was from Kevin Dooley, on the basketball team. He said someone locked himself in the storage room adjourning the girls' locker room and had been watching the cheerleaders get dressed.

When I arrived at the school everybody was in an uproar. The freshmen's basketball game had been delayed and there must have been 50 people standing around the locker room.

I met the cheerleaders in the dressing room. I checked the storage room door. It was locked. The girls said the physical education coach had a key, but she had left.

Something had to be done fast. One of the girls put a piece of paper under the door. As the paper was pulled under the door the girls screamed. It was definite someone or something was hiding in the closet.

The doorknob on the storage room door moved!

I asked the janitor to get a key. He called Maloney (School Supt.) but Maloney was out of town. He called Richard Streeter (CHS principal) who has a master key. I figured we had a weirdo in there — and he wouldn't open the door for us, we couldn't wait.

(Officer Jerry Doyle was on the edge of his seat back at the station. Later, he said he was tempted to call the State Police Attack Team, canine bureau. Officer Richard Abbadessa was Horse Population 45 And Growing!

By Jennifer Grisdale

Horses are a tradition in Cohasset.

Back in 1925, there were nearly 100 horses in this town. According to "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset," Volume II, by Burtram J. Pratt, horse owners and other interested parties worked together each year for 15 years to present the annual Cohasset Horse Show.

This three-day event, which was first held in 1925 at the site of the present Music Circus tent, earned national fame, becoming part of a circuit of shows which included Toronto, Springfield, Boston and New York. The Cohasset Horse Show attracted some of the finest horses in the country.

It was a rich man's sport. Says Burtram Pratt in his book, "Wealthy persons from all parts of the country came to show their horses, and the socially ambitious of Cohasset vied with one another to entertain the prominent visitors in their homes."

An offshoot of the horse show was the formation of the Cohasset Hunt Club in 1930. Members competed at local as well as outside events.

Now about 50 years later, history is repeating itself. On

Prayer Law Discussed

The school committee discussed how the school prayer law should be implemented in the school system, and listened to recommendations from the high school advisory council.

The new state law goes into effect on Feb. 5. The advisory council suggested an alternative home room be formed for those students who wish to participate in prayer. Students not particpating could go to their regular home rooms.

Jack Langmaid termed the proposition a "good suggestion," and the committee agreed to take it under advisement.

School Supt. John Maloney cautioned the committee to be sure the suggestion would comply with law. He also

LWV Reminder On Primary Registration

The League of Women Voters reminds you that Primary Day is March 4, and in order to vote this day you must be registered by February 5. (If you wish to change your current party enrollment, this also must be done by Feb. 5).

The "Independent" status is now designated as "Unenrolled." If you have an Unenrolled designation, you may still vote in the primary, but you must ask for the party ballot you prefer. You will then be listed as a member of that party, and if you want to change or return to your unenrollment (independent) status, after voting fill out a change card available at the polls.

There will be three sections to the ballot. 1) Presidential Candidates — You indicate your choice for your party's presidential nominee. Candidates for president are listed followed by a choice designated "no preference" in case you do not wish to vote for any of the listed candidates. There is also a space for a write-in vote.

2) State Committee Candidates — You select a state committeeman and a state committeewoman from your district. They are your elected representatives on your party's state committee. One state committeeman and one state committeewoman are elected from each of the forty state senate districts in the state.

3) Town Committee Candidates — You vote for members of your town political committee to represent the party from your neighborhood. One or more slates (groups of candidates) may be listed as well as candidates running as individuals. You may vote for a slate as a whole or for individual candidates. Your ballot will indicate how many you may vote for. The number varies from 3 to 35.

If you haven't registered, do it now! The Town Clerk's office is open Monday-Friday from 8:30 to noon and from 1-4:30 p.m. Registration will also be held on Saturday, Feb. 2, from noon-8 p.m.

School Committee Briefs

PLAYGROUND EQUIP.

The committee voted unanimously to add $2800 to the already budgeted amount of $2500 for a new piece of playground equipment for the Osgood School.

The equipment under consideration is a kind of multi-activity climber which includes swings, slides and skywalks. Members considered a bid of $5300 by a Canadian firm and decided to put it out for rebid, including this time a more specific set of specifications.

BUDGETS

Two special budget sessions will be held this week: the first will be Thursday, Jan. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school and the second will be Monday, 7:30 p.m. at the high school.

HEALTH ED.

A 14-member committee will study the needs and curriculum of the proposed health education program. The school committee appointed Nancy Clapp chairman, pro temp.

BANCROFT

An article will be included on the town meeting warrant asking that Bancroft Way be closed to vehicular traffic.

Members pointed out that the road is often used as a speed way and if blocked off would not only prevent such speeding, but might also be useful as a place to park buses.

GIFT

Two solid oak study carrels with matching chairs were accepted from Ronald Beal.

JAZZ BAND

It was voted to allow the junior and senior high jazz band group to travel to Durham, N.H. and Mystic, Conn. at the school system's expense. The system will pay for travel expenses only, not lodging and food.

READING TEACHER

The committee agreed to advertise for the position of reading teacher at the high school. Members had voted Priscilla Giovanni to fill the position, but she declined to accept.

RESIGNATION

Accepted "with regret" was the resignation of Charles Stockbridge, effective Feb. 1. Stockbridge is an elementary school teacher.

DISABILITY COURSE

Approval was given for an in-service course entitled "Introduction Learning Disabilities."

School Prayer

suggested a limit be set on the amount of time to be devoted to prayer.

"We have an emotional problem here and we'll try to abide by the provisions of the statute," Maloney said.

1 WEEK TO GO!

Rev. John Benbow, chairman of the police chief study committee, advised selectmen last week 170 requests for applications for Cohasset Police Chief had been taken out, 31 completed applications have been returned, and one week remains 'til deadline.

DOGS RESTRAINED

Selectmen ordered several dogs restrained last week: two Great Danes owned by Claus Waggermann, Jerusalem Road; and a Golden Retriever owned by Clifford Mitman of SouthMain Street.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told the board a dog owned by his son, Sean Laugelle, would be gone from town within the week. The Laugelle dog had been ordered to be destroyed or permanently removed from town at a December meeting.

FOREST ROAD

Last week the planning board approved a Form A building lot plan on Forest Road, near Cedar Acres Lane. Each of the eight lots owned by Robert Hawker has 50 feet of frontage on an existing road.

Hawker had no construction plans for the land. Planners said they were troubled by the L-shaped lots, with long driveways onto 600 feet of raod — Hawker agreed to cut in half the number of driveways serving the lots.

WINCHESTER

Local developer Walter Winchester submitted a form A plan for 10 lots on seven L-shaped acres. The plan was first submitted 10 years ago.

CONSTABLE

There are four residents interested in making applications for Town Constable, but only Joe Hamilton, former town archivist for the town, has formerly applied for the job.

Last week Hamilton said he was aware of the responsibilities the job entailed and felt it would be a way he could make a contribution to the community. Hamilton will graduate from Stonehill College this spring. He is majoring in public administration, with a minor in psychology.

DEMOLITION ORDER

Atty. Richard Henderson notified selectmen that he has notified the owner of 52 Black Road that property must be either secured to comply with state building codes, or the town would seek a court order to have it demolished.

AUDIT

James Kearney, CPA, has been hired for $5,500 to audit the town's books. Kearney is a Cohasset resident.

INSPECTION FEES

The building inspector notified selectmen that gas and plumbing inspection fees have been increased from $5 to $10. A recall inspection will also cost $10.

PLEASANT APTS.

Last week developer Wayne Sawchuk submitted a preliminary site plan for an eight-unit town house development on Pleasant Street. The two-story, two-bedroom units will cost from $85,000-$95,000. A full presentation will be made to the planning board March 5.

WARRANT ORDER

Selectmen met with town counsel last week to determine the order of articles on the Feb. 14 special town meeting 8-article warrant.

Voters will select from the Paul Jones conservation land, the school land abutting the Music Circus and Whale Meadow (in that order) for a wastewater treatment plant site.

Following the above articles will be an article placed on the warrant by selectmen asking the town's permission to sign an agreement (in lieu of trial) to pay the state Department of Quality Engineering (DEQE) $10,000 for past effluent violations.

After the consent article — a financing article of $295,000 to pay for the design of the plant will be put before voters.

Non-sewer issues on the warrant are: an article asking for an appropriation of $4,648 from free cash to cover interest costs for borrowing in anticipation of taxes.

Also, an article asking $6,291 from free cash to pay medical expenses incurred by Police Sgt. Richard Barrow for service-connected injuries.

Riding Club Lecture Planned

The Cohasset Riding Club (CRC) has a number of activities planned for the winter months including a veterinarian lecture series and several films and slideshows.

Dr. N.R. Simpson, DVM, of Marshfield will be lecturing on several topics. Breeding and foaling will be the subject of his first lecture 7:30 p.m., Jan. 30 in the Cohasset Community Center. Fees will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Dr. Simpson is a graduate of Ohio State University. A newcomer to the South Shore area, his practice includes both large and small animals. In addition, Dr. Simpson has worked part-time for several clinics including the Ashdod Animal Hospital in Duxbury and the South Shore Veterinary Associates in Weymouth. He also works with Dr. Allan Bonnell, DVM of Marshfield.

The club is planning to show a film entitled "Ledyard '75" this Saturday (Jan. 26) at 10 a.m. in the Cohasset Community Center. Fees are 50 cents per person.

There will also be a lecture on bandaging and braiding at the Davenport Farm, Cedar St., Cohasset on Feb. 10 at 1 p.m. and a "horse fair" visual presentation day at the community center on March 1.

Home To Cohasset

We're not the "new" paper in town anymore. We're the newspaper.

A few months ago we compared a couple of circulation lists and discovered (not really to our surprise) we are the best read weekly in town.

Over the past year some of you said you like our sense of humor, our police log (we don't write that — we just copy it), the way we write the news, our columnists, our contributors.

Others of you said you liked reading the Mariner because we publish only Cohasset news and were a "real" Cohasset newspaper.

Our real strength is that Mariner editors and columnists are Cohasset residents. When we pull on Ed Young, David Place or Arthur Clark's strings for not having managed something to our satisfaction, we know we're going to run into them at the Log & Line sooner or later...and it's usually sooner.

So, we've got to be right. And if we're not right we should have been at least fair. And when we're not either, we answer to the whole community we live in.

We don't go home to Quincy or Scituate or Marshfield after a town meeting. We go home to Cohasset.

We consider the issue of sewerage just a little more carefully when we know we may end up paying the effluent fine along with the residents we're explaining it to.

We don't think our competitors can offer that total concern.

So much for us.

The unsung heroes heroines of our success story have yet to be introduced — and they are Cohasset merchants. Without them and their continuing, growing support of the Mariner... our weekly meetings wouldn't be possible.

You wouldn't have an alternative newspaper.

Support them during Cohasset On Sale weeks and all the time.

They bring you the Mariner — this week and every week.

We appreciate it.

Notes & Comments

...sympathies to writers who had letters cut or not printed over the last couple of weeks. One individual forgot and sent us the same letter twice. Another had the unique experience of seeing the second half of his letter in the Mariner and the first half in another newspaper. Editors everywhere are dealing with space limitations in their fashion!

...note to a recent writer: a 1,400 word commentary is just a little too long for the Mariner to handle...please cut it to 500 or so words and resubmit...

...3-3 (no action) votes on the school committee are depressing. Does someone out there think it's time again for the town meeting to consider either increasing or decreasing that committee by one? We do.

The Colorful Species Of Prep

By Caroline Wampole

[Reprinted with permission from the COHASSET LAMPLIGHT, Vol. I, No. I, a new kind of high school newspaper. Ms. Wampole is co-editor of the publication].

There was once a time, not terribly long ago, when torn jeans, faded Indian-print shirts, Earth shoes (or no shoes), and long, wild hair characterized the youth of America. Sad to say, those days are gone and the post-Vietnam hippie sheds a tear or remorse as he hoists his tattered backpack over his shoulder and thumbs to California.

The hippie is being pushed aside by a new "man on campus" — the Prep. Dressed neatly in a Brooks Brothers shirt, a crew-neck sweater, khaki's, and Docksiders, the Prep is a metaphor for the conservative attitude in society today, although he will swear to his death that he is a liberal. Let's take a look at this rather colorful species (defined in science as Homo preppain) and its popularity in America.

Not New

Preppism is not new; a look at your parents' scrapbook will tell you that what is new is the wide-spread preppism among youth, that has emerged only in the last three or four years. Granted, some of you have been preps since you were in diapers (you know, miniature espadrilles, the whole bit), but never in the history of mankind have there been so many young preps. If L.L. Bean were alive today he'd bust his boots!

The popularity of the preppie seems to grow daily, as new watchbands, sweaters, and turtlenecks are purchased by status-hungry girls and boys all over the country. What makes these clothes so practical is their unisex value: with the exception of headbands, jewelry, and a few other items, preppie clothes can be worn by males and females alike. The bright pinks, yellows, blues, and greens appeal to youth, and do not go unnoticed among the rest of the un-preppie world. Many high school teachers have complained of being "color-blinded" by the bright shades, and one high school no longer needs flourescent lights; the electricity is supplied by the students.

East Corridor

Cohasset High School is not excluded from this mass "Preppiemania." If you don't agree with me, then I will ask you to stand in the east corridor for three minutes and count the Dean sweaters and Bean shoes that go by. Do not be surprised if you come up with a two-digit number for both. The turtlenecks, espadrills, and Lacoste shirts are no less frequent. A note of caution, however: wear dark sunglasses to avoid the glare.

The species of Prep can be divided into three sub-species: the P.Y.G. Prep, the Nouveau Prep, and the Casual Prep (also known as the Messy Preppie). The P.Y.G. (Pink, Yellow, Green) Prep is perhaps the most obnoxious of all preppies, appearing usually in grades 7-10. You can't miss this one: pink turtleneck, yellow alligator shirt, green sweater, pink corduroys, and bright green Chris Craft moccassins. Other accessories to look for are striped or polka-dotted watchbands, alligator socks, and ribbon belts with gold animals (snails, mice, whatever) at the clasp.

Then there is the prep that doesn't quite make it — the Nouveau Prep. This type of Homo preppian will strive forever to achieve perfect prepdom but never will, because, like the "Nouveau Riche," he is a phony. The Nouveau Prep may have all the ingredients for preppie perfection, but his-her combinations are all wrong. Like wearing Pappagallo pumps with tennis shorts — very, very tacky. We must give this sub-species some credit, however, for their effort; I mean, who else spends their free time practicing to be preppie?

The last type of Prep is the Casual Prep, or Messy Preppie, who is neither obnoxious nor phony. This type wears preppie clothes from habit more than anything else, and does not have to try to be a prep. The combinations, styles, and preppie idiosyncrasies all come naturally to the Casual Prep. You will find him shuffling lazily down the hall, his hands in his pockets, his shoulders slouched, and not once picking his feet up off the floor. His collar is always up, his shoelaces are always untied, and his pants are pulled down around his hips. The Casual Prep goes through life in a shell of hard cynicism, never daring to express real emotions or opinions.

There are, of course, many other sub-species belonging to the colorful species of Prep, however it would be tedious and time-consuming to mention them here; anyway, I'm sure you are fairly familiar with most of them. What is important to realize is that the Prep is here to stay, at least for a while, and the unhappy hippies will just have to stay under cover until they are in demand again. For now, anyway, khakis have replaced bell bottoms, monogrammed sweaters have replaced Indian-print shirts, Docksiders have replaced Earth shoes, and a new, uptight, conservative, snobbish attitude has replaced the rebellious nature of yesterday's youth.

Little Whitehead Correct Site

Letters

To the Editor:

In one way the town of Cohasset resembles a human body. In one way the town operates in the same way that a human body operates. This will be an analogy to think of in relation to the wastewater treatment problem. It will point to one site as the best and most correct site for the treatment plant.

Only one site is needed and that site must be the correct one. No other possible sites need to be considered. As the writer sees it the choice of a site is now all settled. I am confident that the town is going to see it that way when the voters see how well this analogy applies. I am confi-dent that the town will make a right decision without further delay and that no penalty will have to be paid.

The human body operates in this way. Food and water are taken in at the upper end. They move down through the body naturally with the help of gravity. As waste products they come out at the lower end of the body after having passed through the alimentary canal.

The natural outlet for Cohasset's wastewater is the space between two hills of ledge, one large hill being Big Whitehead and the other, which is smaller, being called Little Whitehead. That location for the wastewater outlet has been selected by Metcalf and Eddy and is believed to be exactly correct. There is no other place along the rocky shore which is so suitable for the outlet.

The outflow pipe can be laid mostly in mud through Stockbridge and Border Streets and Howard Gleason Rd. It will not bother the yacht club but will turn left opposite the yacht club and run almost straight between Whitehead Rd. and Whale Meadow, terminating at the foot of the concrete bridge.

Near the further end of Whitehead Rd. there will be ample area for the treatment plant. There is one house owned by Mrs. McVeigh on

Cohasset LWV Series On Drinking Water Crisis

In one-third of the communities in Massachusetts, the drinking water is contaminated by hazardous materials. Other communities have imposed watering bans and conservation measures because water supply is low. "Safe drinking water" is an issue that is more and more in the headlines.

The time is approaching — if not already here — when we must act to assure safe drinking water.

Do we, in fact, have ample water and just need to allocate it more wisely? What role must the federal, state and local governments play? And what is the role of the citizen?

Because safe drinking water cannot be assured without urgently needed attention to the problems, the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts has prepared and the LWV of Cohasset has submitted a series of four articles to the Mariner to examine how our drinking water supply has gotten to its present crisis situation and some solutions which have been proposed.

The first of these articles, on water quantity problems, follows. In subsequent issues there will be an article on the problems of water quality, the Northfield Diversion, and water conservation.

WATER QUANTITY

An estimated 1,300 billion gallons per day (BGD) of surface water is available in the continental United States. In addition, a potentially very large ground water resource is still undefined.

The Water Resources Council (a federal agency) has estimated that 355 BGD is withdrawn each day, but only 111 BGD is consumed. The remainder is returned for reuse.

About 50 per cent of the total suppy is east of the Mississippi River, 20 per cent is in the rather small area of the Pacific Northwest, and the rest of the country shares the remaining 30 per cent.

Water use has increased markedly. Between 1900 and 1970 our population increased 2.5 times, but per capita water use increased 3.5 times. Add to these problems the increased use of chemicals, pesticides, hazardous materials of all kinds, and the pressure of development encroaching on watersheds, and you have not only a national picture but a microcosm of Massachusetts.

Although Massachusetts receives an average of 43 inches of rainfall a year and by all yardsticks is a water-rich state, concern about water shortages has increased in the last decade.

Because Massachusetts has been perceived to have an abundance of water, the water has been used excessively. It has been regarded as a "free good," and few if any efforts have been made to conserve except in times of drought.

Settlement patterns have developed without regard to water supply. The population is clustered in the eastern coastal area and the free-flowing streams are in the north central and western areas.

Ground water sources in the east have been limited in quantity and now are limited by quality problems.

Recharge management is not readily understood or practices in Massachusetts. The balance between the water withdrawn, water diverted out of the area (by sewage treatment plants, for example), and the amount of runoff from blacktop areas, paved roads, houses, etc., has not been a serious concern of water managers.

Consequently, water levels in wells drop, salt intrudes, reservoirs refill too slowly, and towns and cities find themselves with a "water problem." Because water supply has been primarily a local responsibility in Massachusetts, too frequently those in charge have not had the technical background to anticipate and deal with potential water problems.

Nor have planning boards regularly considered the effect of development on the water supply.

Flood skimming of the Connecticut River or diversion from the Millers River system and the Merrimack River have been suggested as ways to increase the water supply to eastern Massachusetts.

These sugguestions will be discussed in the League's third article. But such diversions will not aid Massachusetts cities and towns whose water supply has become contaminated.

the shore of Whale Meadow. It is believed that property will not have to be taken by eminent domain. There is another small residence on the right nearly at the end of Whitehead Rd., near what used to be the picnic grove. A survey will be needed to locate the treatment plant exactly, but there will be ample area for it. It will be exactly on the route of the outflow pipe. There will be no cost for pumping the wastewater to some remote part of the town and back again.

In short, this Whitehead Rd. site will be practically ideal just the same as outlet locations on the human body are ideal. The town of Cohasset is entitled to this site because it is highly important and has priority over any other use.

So, to avoid the penalty all that the town needs to do aty town meeting will be to vote a decision on Whitehead Rd. We can all heave a sigh of relief that the town's bothersome problem has been settled and settled correctly.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE TAKE NOTE!

...here's an alternative for department heads who get heart failure at the thought of facing the advisory committee with their increased budget requests.

Keep your budget to last year's recommended figure and hold a fund-raiser for those extra pencils, chairs, thumb tacks.

Last week, when someone suggested selectmen hold a "selectmen's dance" to raise money for new chairs in the town hall auditorium, Selectman Henry Ainslie said, sadly, he thought no one would come.

Raising $85,000 for the school department's anticipated energy costs above and beyond the tax cap might be a little more difficult.

the membership application it says, "The Cohasset Riding Club/4-H was organized to serve a growing community of horse enthusiasts. Membership is open to anyone who has an interest in riding activities whether or not they own a horse."

That application was first issued three years ago. Cohasset currently sports a population of about 45 horses.

"We started the club to provide low key, local events," explains Sally Davenport, president. "We do a little bit of everything." The club continues the tradition of annual horse shows on a much smaller scale and sponsors dressage shows, events, and jumping prizes. The club will present its fourth show this June.

Riders compete locally and at outside events, although pleasure riding seems to be the first love of many local horse owners.

Take Chris Rowe for example. Manager of Davenport Farm, an 11 horse boarding stable on Cedar Street, and a riding instructor who gives lessons on her pony Cam-O-Lot, she likes to compete in events and dressage shows with her horse Jacob.

"Events are very exciting. It takes training, an honest horse — and a brave one," says Chris. "During the last event I entered this fall, I walked the cross country-jumping course and said to myself, 'Oh no! Oh no!' but it wasn't really all that bad. There's a sense of accomplishment in just completing the event."

Chris came in eleventh out of the 14 riders (19 started) who finished the course.

Yet for all the fun and challenge competition provides, "I wouldn't trade my trail rides for anything!" Chris maintains.

"It's a beautiful area and it's fun going out with my furry friend to enjoy it," adds Sally Davenport.

Both kids and adults agree. "I like to ride for pleasure as well as work my horse. It's fun to do both!" says Debbie Osborn, president of the club's junior board.

Members of the 1980 Cohasset Riding Club may not all sport the monetary wealth which seemed to characterize the hunt club of years past, but enthusiasm is certainly not lacking.

also on alert — and had started on his way to assist Rhodes. But the sequence of events happened too quickly for anyone to assist. It was up to Rhodes, now).

In the interim, Raymond Sargeant got a tire iron to pry the door off its hinges and Officer Paul Laugelle arrived to back us up. He's (Laugelle) a good man.

We started pulling the pins from the hinges, prying the door apart. Sargeant did the prying, I stood behind him. Laugelle stood behind the door. No, my gun wasn't drawn.

The door opened and Sargeant let out a scream. I peered cautiously into the room and there he was — a hamster.

It was then we learned that five hamsters had escaped from the biology lab. We had one of them, for sure.

I picked up the hamster and put it in my pocket, heading upstairs towards the lab where I returned it to its cage. He was hungry.

Another officer might have shot the hamster, feeling he was rabid or something. But I knew he was hungry. I could tell when we opened the door he was tame because he was smiling.

It was one of the more exciting things that happened this week — one of the more tense moments in my career. I used to have hamsters — raised them all my life until 1971 when the last two died.

Olympics

The cost of pursuing this goal is staggering, win or lose. The teammates have to finance the cost of their boats and regatta expenses (European regattas cost over $2,400 each); they are not provided with a coach, manager, or support boat; nor are any living expenses paid for, and they have to organize their participation in international and domestic regattas.

Most Olympic hopefuls are young, in or just out of college, and are not in a position to begin to support the financial requirements of Olympic pursuit. They need all the help they can get.

The rigorous schedule in the months ahead will include more hard work, excitement and expectation. Franny will take his last semester off from Tufts, where he is a history major; and Skipp will leave his Cambridge boat and equipment sales business in competent hands, in order to concentrate all their efforts on winning in May.

After spending this week in final preparation of their boat, Franny and Skip will head for Porto Allegre, Brazil where they will represent the U.S. at the 1980 World Championships. They will take an older boat along for this race, saving the new one for domestic travel and first shakedowns in Miami.

Key West is next on their itinerary for the North American Midwinters, where they will face their American competition for the last time before the Olympic trials.

They will proceed next to Hyeres, France as the U.S. representatives against the Europeans.

Finally, they will train for three weeks in Newport at the site of the Olympic trials.

The United States International Sailing Association (U.S.I.S.A.), is a non-profit organization in Newport that has been established for U.S. Olympic sailing hopefuls. Donations, which are tax deductible, that are earmarked for specific individuals bring 90% of the donation directly to them, and the U.S.I.S.A. keeps 10% for a fund that may provide coaches and a support boat in the future.

If you wish to send a contribution to help Cohasset's Olympic hopeful win gold for the U.S., send a check, which must be earmarked to Franny Charles' 470 Olympic Campaign, to: U.S.I.S.A., Box 209, Newport, Rhode Island 02840.

Charge Accounts Delivery Service

The Food Freezer Business Ain't What It Used To Be

By Tanna Kasperowicz

It takes 12 refrigerator trailer trucks to deliver a load of fresh peas from the West Coast. It takes one non-refrigeratored truck to deliver the same quantity of freeze-dried peas.

As energy prices go up the operational costs of running a freezer are not really feasible. Two years ago New England was hit by The Great Blizzard. Energy crisis — mandated electrical blackouts — are predicted. Civil Defense recommends that persons have a two-week emergency food supply for every person in the home.

In 1977 the big freeze-dried purchasers were backpackers, campers, sailors, skiers. "Now, politicized rural types make up 75 percent of my business," Bill White, owner of Stowaway Products on CJCH said.

"We sell to a lot of individuals who don't want us to know where they're taking it," White said.

In a crisis, food can be bartered for services. White said spurts in food-buying and food storage closely parallel peaks in international conflict. "The tenser the scene, the higher the sales."

Recently, a New Hampshire resident purchased $150,000 in freeze-dried foods. He has secured enough food in a secluded barn to feed 100 people for one year.

White has been vacuum-packing freeze-dried foods since 1963. He and two employees, Denise Cowall, a sophomore at CHS in the alternative program; and Solveiga Gross, assist White in blending and vacuum-packing a large variety of "survival food."

The foods are freeze-dried out West, packaged in foil packs in Cohasset, and then vacuum-packaged in #10 cans.

"The shelf-life of survival food is 20 times that of canned foods. A year's supply of survival food takes up 14-16 cu. ft. of space," White said.

Briefly, freeze-dried food is food without its water content. At the Cohasset Co., White packages the food, fills the cans with nitrogen eliminating oxygen and moisture. The life of the canned goods are approximately 20 years.

White is the only freeze-dried distributor in New England. Stowaway Co. supplied the food and the menu for the scientists who went in search of Noah's Ark in Turkey (Mt. Arrat). Stowaway supplied food for the submarine crew of the Ben Franklin Gulf Stream Drift project — for the crew of the S.S. Manhatten who researched how to bring oil through the N.W. passage. White was also involved in menu-planning for the Astronauts.

Just about anything can be and is freeze-dried. You may have to rough it, but there's no reason why you can't have a delicious bag of ice cream — eaten dry; it's a high energy snack, pure ice cream without the water!

Dinner dishes: chicken almondine and wine flavored mix with TVP over rice; beef chop suey; 7-meal paks cost $37 a case. A 14-day deluxe pak costs $95. "Easy-Meal," not yet on the market, will soon be offered to individual buyers. White said Meals-On-Wheels is interested in freeze-dried foods for its clients when fresh delivery becomes impossible due to bad weather, emergency conditions.

Preparation of freeze-dried food is simple. You simply add cold or boiling water to foods and you're ready to eat. Because no cooking is needed, freeze-dried foods require less water and less fuel to prepare than fresh, frozen or dehydrated food products.

Ever buy a can of pork chops? These delicious chops come without the bone and minus the fat, White said.

Six cans (1 lb. 4 oz. a can) of raw pork chops (32 chops per can) cost $39 per can or $234 per case. Vanilla ice cream costs $11.75 per 14-oz. can. Pork chops are ready to fry after rehydrating, as directed. But you eat your ice cream, dry.

If this all sounds a little expensive, you've got to remember you're not buying the water. One reconstituted can of 32 chops delivers 15 4-ounce servings when rehydrated.

Also available, freeze-dried strawberries, peaches, pears, apples. If you're planning a hiking trip, Stowaway will provide food at periodic pick-up points along the trail — through the U.S. Mails.

White is an old pro at menu-planning, having supplied menus and supplies for National Geographic Society and Smithsonian Institute expeditions. And, Cohasset hostesses are catching on to the trend. Not a few groups have planned dinner parties around survival food

You Could Cut The Tension With A Knife. . .

By Rob Tis

[ED.'S NOTE: Tis said it was a mouse. Rhodes said it was a hamster. Conflicting stories like this drive an editor wild!]

If you were wondering why the JV basketball team, the Varsity basketball team and the wrestling team all lost Friday night, it was not because they were outplayed, not because they were worried about midyear exams, it was because they were involved in "The Locker Room Incident."

It began at 5:15 p.m. I was warming up with some of the other guys on the JV team when Sarah Froio ran into the gym in complete panic. We calmed her down and she explained to us that someone had locked himself in a closet in the girls' locker room and refused to either identify himself or come out.

When we arrived the freshmen, JV girls' basketball team and others were standing in a corner of the locker room in fright. It was the first time in the girls' locker room for most of us on the team, but we walked in, quite skeptical of the whole situation, and examined the door.

After we pounded on it and yelled through it for about 30 seconds to no avail, we decided the girls were going crazy.

Then, as everyone gathered around the door, Kevin Dooley placed a sheet of paper halfway under the door. Suddenly the paper was pulled under the door and the whole locker room froze in fear.

We repeated this many times and each time whoever or whatever was in there played some kind of game with the sheet of notebook paper.

The word spread quickly around the high school and before we knew it, two girls' basketball team s, the boys' varsity basketball team, two squads of cheerleaders, the wrestling team, and hordes of non-athletes, along with us were staring at the closet door with little doubt that we would soon catch some pervert trying to catch a 'sneak peak.'

We tried to pick the lock to no avail. Then the police arrived.

After consulting with the janitors, the police decided to take the hinges off the door. You could cut the tension with a knife as Bob Patterson removed the hinges from the door (ED'S NOTE: Rhodes said it was Richard Sargent)?

Just as the door was about to come down the police decided the 100 plus crowd in the locker room should wait outside, just in case. To say the least, this was an unpopular move.

When the locker room emptied, the police took down the door of the closet. When they opened the door for us to come in — they had a cute, little mouse.

Lamplight's Out!

The CHS Cohasset Lamplight is on the newsstands and it's been getting some good, community reviews. Pick up your copy at Stop & Shop, Central News or Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy.

Co-Editor Caroline Wampole has several superior pieces throughout the eight-page tabloid, while her co-hort David McCarthy said he prefers dealing with the technical side of the newspaper business — layout and production.

Bill Henry, III took over the critics' corner, while Patti Walsh took issue with the lack of, but growing interest in, CHS clubs.

With special permission, we reprinted Caroline Wampole's article on "Prepiemania," a disease which wedidn't know existed at CHS...or anywhere. Were you aware that the old-fashioned "Prep" is pushing the hippie out of the picture? See page 4.

Individuals between the ages of 8 and 17 interested in taking magic lessons from professional magician, Joe Carota, (who has performed in Cohasset a number of times), should call the recreation department office at 383-6791.

The program will not begin unless a minimum of 20 students enroll and will not commence, in any case, until the latter part of February. Classes will be held one evening per week, for a one and one-half hour period, for eight weeks. The cost will be approximately $15 per student for the entire program.

The recreation department will again attempt to start a swim program at the MDC Pool in Weymouth.

Details are not yet available, however, if you feel you would be interested in winter swimming, (no lessons — recreational swim-time only), for about a 10 week period with transportation included, at a cost of about $12-15, leave your name and phone number at the Recreation Office.

The program is open to all aged residents who are able to swim. Children in grade four and under must be accompanied by an adult or older sibling who swims and is responsible.

Rec-Swim will be a 100 percent self supporting program, administrated through the Revolving Account Fund. The pool will be reserved for the Cohasset group only which will be limited to 45 or so residents. The fee will include transportation as well as pool time. The program will probably be held on the weekends (Sundays if possible).

Skippers Muzzle Bulldogs

Skipper Icemen muzzled the Bulldogs on Skipper ice Saturday, in what proved to be an exciting game. The score was deadlocked at 2-2 after the second period with Doug Yeager and Matt Brown netting the Skipper tallies.

With only 17 seconds gone in the third period Doug Dillon zipped one home for the Skippers in what proved to be the winning goal.

Skipper momentum was now snowballing . . . barely a minute later Dom Campaclelli zinged another by the Holbrook goalies, as Winter Gardens erupted with joy.

With 4:16 left to play, Doug Yeager picked up his second goal to put the game in the record books at 5-3 for the Skippers.

"High livers" were New Yorkers who many years ago dined in the famous Broadway restaurant, Delmonicos. The major domo of the house of Delmonico was Alfred Filippini and in 1899 he wrote a massive book called 'The Table.' The "gourmands" as he called his customers, included the imperial families of Spain, France, Prussia, Italy and others who sat down to meals which sometimes included 22 different dishes. A ball in honor of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on Oct. 12, 1860 included champagne and wines, grouse, truffles, petits fours and six French entrees, salads and ices. Others who ordered in lavish style included the major of the city of Melbourne, President Johnson and admirals of the Russian Fleet. A dinner given for a Mme. James Gordon Bennett had a French menu with so many courses it filled one entire page. Included among the famous patrons was Senator Daniel Webster who made his summer home in Marshfield. This is the sauce named after the famous orator and politician.

DANIEL WEBSTER SAUCE

Put into a saucepan 4 ounces of apricot marmalade and half a gill of cold water. Place on the fire and stir until boiling; then remove and add immediately half a pint of St. Angelos Tokay wine, stirring thoroughly for one minute. Strain through a sieve over pudding and serve.

In the chapter on how to set a table, this imposing cookbook minces no words in telling the Victorian ladies just how a dinner party should be organized. They'd reach for the smelling salts at the sight of our easy, informal barbecues. We learn that the table should be placed in the center of the room under the chandelier and a table for six should be 6 feet long. "Should it not rest firmly, perhaps an old relic in the shape of a Bland Dollar, could be made serviceable by placing it under one of the feet." A large basket of flowers should be in the center of the table, a large bouquet at each lady's place and a small boutonniere for each gentleman. They even ate

FISH CHOWDER BOSTON STYLE

Take a nice live codfish of about 6 pounds, cut the head off and remove all the bones, then cut the fish into square pieces, place them in a bowl and add half a pinch of salt and a pint of cold water. Take the head and bones and place them in a saucepan with 3 qts. of white broth and as soon as it comes to a boil, skim it well. Season with salt and pepper and boil for 20 min. Peel and slice very fine one small, sound onion, place it in a saucepan with one ounce of butter, half an ounce of salt pork, cut in small dice-shaped pieces, let cook for 15 min., then add 2T of flour. Stir together for 3 min. on a brisk fire, strain into a bowl and add it to the flour, stirring well. Let boil for 10 min. Cut two good-sized sound potatoes in small dice-shaped pieces, add to soup. Boil 5 min. Drain the codfish, wash it again and add to the soup. Boil 5 min. more; add half a pint of cold milk, being very careful not to allow to boil again. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

What Do You Hose-y?

By Lois Martin

Delicacy is a prerequisite in discussion of one's panty hose. And I bring it before you, with an effort toward the utmost discretion, because it is those underpinnings that command what we women wear day in and day out.

And I don't think men realize how we come up with our outfits. It's our panty hose. What we wear depends on them. Men, of which there are surely too few, are still into those short little socks, some of which rise to the calf and cling while others do not. I've no idea if they've surrended those garter affairs that used to be a trademark of the securely hosed man. But women, for the most part, cheerfully threw away encumbrances of leg wear and headed for . . . the almighty panty hose.

It is in January that the average woman is faced with a drawer filled with tangled hose. In early September we started with a new batch of hose as our summer tans faded and a chill came with the fall breeze. It was easy then to wear a skirt because one's hose were intact. But as we doled out vast sums for children from that month on, we slowed our supply of whole hose.

Consequently it's a matter of Russian roulette for the dresser when she puts on her undergarments in the morning. Personally, I'm among those who put the left leg in first. If that looks good, I continue with the right leg. It is there I usually find the flaws. But women are flexible, if not easy.

If there's only one skinny run starting, we can still wear a skirt and claim, on arriving at school/office/luncheon that the darn thing just snagged as we were getting out of the car.

If the runs are out of control, beyond the stalling power of colorless nail polish, we go for slacks. If the entire foot has deteriorated into an unsightly gap, we opt for boots. If one leg is gone (this is a March or April move), we can work for two different panty hoses with the same but opposite leg problems. It's thus possible, though uncomfortable, to wear two different sets and come out of it decently, but wearing slacks.

There are the thrifty among us who've been known to tie knots in the toes of panty hose if that's where the holes begin. That won't look good with sandal-toed shoes and it makes a limper out of the woman who wears knotted hose in regular shoes.

The panty hose market grows increasingly sophisticated. There are continuing debates as to whether the woman more wisely invests her hose funds in the expensive brands or does better by buying the two for a $1 cheapies. The good ones do indeed last longer but are ultimately prone to subtle sneak runs after washing. The inexpensive variety gives way all at once. But a woman knows where she stands with those and can sling them without qualm, cutting back on the drawerful of arbitrarily useful stockings.

Clearly the most commanding change has been the variety of sizes, putting the woman's back to the wall about her real weight as opposed to the figure listed on her driver's license. We sniff at the "petite" sizings, knowing they are for children under six. And we quake at the "Queen" sized hose. They put that as kindly as possible I suppose. But the Queen size panty hose purchaser is well aware the impaired word could translate to "stout," "heavy-set," "portly." We don't like those terms, especially if they're true. Yet there are those who've given in to the larger size because these panty hose actually come up over the hips. If a woman appears to be wearing bikini panty hose, it's not of her choosing, but rather of her plumpage.

The independent woman never gave up her separate stockings and garters. No longer plagued by seams that curl around the knee, the separates may yet make a comeback to relieve females of wearing clothing to cover hose holes.

That of course is an option. But when they start insisting we revert to the Fruit of the Loom, peach-colored undershirts with a bit of edging on the neckline, in lieu of other garments, I'll pass. One can only be so modern.

Elderly Housing Developer Seeks Local Approvals

Robert Hawker of Beach Street, a partner in George Jednick Village Associates, will meet with the board of selectmen Feb. 6 to discuss his proposal to develop nine acres on Cedar Street (near the town landfill) into a 60-unit housing development for moderately-income elderly and handicapped.

Over the past week there has been some confusion as to Hawker's plans, but Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said this week Hawker told him the complex would be for the moderately-incomed elderly with incomes up to $12,500 — and not low-income elderly. Tenants would pay 15-20 percent of their monthly incomes for rent.

According to Department of Community Affairs (DCA) Attorney John Carney, Hawker will have to present his petition to the local board of appeals. The board of appeals may approve the project with conditions, or deny the petition. If the petition is denied the developer can appeal the decision to the State Housing Appeals Board (DCA).

Ed Kelly, DCA representative to Cohasset, said assuming a developer meets certain norms and the project is denied, "He can appeal through the State Anti-Snob Zoning Law. Ultimately, the town has the right of appeal. In effect, the state would allow whatever was feasible on the site, taking into consideration the number of units."

Kelly said a combination of state and federal laws are in effect here, but that in any case the department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) would heavily consider the health and safety of the project and would require extensive engineering studies before granting approval.

Should HUD agree to finance the project, it would make up the difference between market rents through rental subsidies. Hawker would not pay full property taxes on the development, but would be allowed a certain level of profit on the complex.

Last week when town officials thought the project was for low-income elderly, Clark and housing authority officials said there was a need for moderate income elderly housing. This week Clark said he does not feel the Cedar Street site is an attractive location for elderly housing, moderate or low income.

The Cedar Street site is zoned residential and exits

Gifted Program In 2nd Year

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The average student at Deer Hill School scores in the 60-80 percentile in the SRA test — 10-30 points above the national average.

Last year the present Sixth Grade scored in the 86th percentile in mathematics.

Even with the renorming of the SRA test last year Deer Hill students scored 20-25 points above the national average.

Without getting any more technical, that means we've got some pretty smart kids at Deer Hill School — and throughout the school system.

In 1978 Ken Ekberg, principal, decided to do something about all of this talent. Ekberg, along with three teachers, explored the need for a gifted program. After researching the subject of gifted and investigating programs offered by surrounding systems, they developed a pilot program, some criteria and presented it to the school committee.

In 1978 the school committee voted it down before annual elections. After elections, a new committee voted it in.

With a budget of $800 and one teacher who worked for $20 a week, the gifted program began.

This year Ekberg attempted to expand the program with a budget of $3,500 and parental cooperation. The objective of the program is to offer students research skills, develop independent learning and responsibility, expand creative thinking skills, and plan and implement research programs.

Kids' interests outweigh the meager budget, so group projects are encouraged for teams of 4-5 students.

Kimball's Hearing Continues Monday

By Jennifer Grisdale

Will Kimball's By-The-Sea Motor Inn be able to open its restaurant and lounge to the general public?

The Board of Appeals began discussion of this question Jan. 22. Due to the complexity of the situation and a need for further information, the hearing was continued until Feb. 4 at 8 p.m. in the town hall.

David R. Hegarty, attorney for the inn, went to the board after building inspector James Litchfield refused to allow opening of the restaurant and lounge to the public because of inadequate parking facilities.

Regulations call for 58 parking spaces for motel guests and 25 for the public for a total of 83. The lot around the motel can hold about 45 cars. Hegarty wants the board to allow the inn to park about 57 cars in the lot across the street.

This is the second time Kimball's By-The-Sea Motor Inn has made such a request. The first time the inn asked the board to allow the pool, restaurant, and lounge to be open to the public. The board denied that request.

The motel was built in 1975. Under the parking regulations passed in 1969, each parking space must have 250 square feet, which includes turnaround and maneuvering space. The parking lot around the motel conforms with the zoning by-laws. However, Hegarty maintained that the lot across the street should not have to conform because it was in existence before 1969, when there were no regulations on the size of parking spaces.

According to Hegarty, in 1973 when the late John Carzis was finalizing building plans for the motel, the building inspector refused to approve them unless Carzis agreed to make the spaces in the lot across the street conform with the 1969 by-laws.

Hegarty claimed that since Carzis already had the financial backing for the motel, he was reluctant to delay construction until he could appeal the building inspector's decision, and so abided by it.

Parking was only one of the questions brought up at the hearing, which about 20 people attended.

Board of Appeals chairman Robert Booth pointed out that Carzis originally agreed to open the motel's facilities to guests only.

Hegarty questioned whether Carzis's heirs needed to abide by that agreement. He also said the motel's innkeeper's license says it must provide food to the public.

Janet Daggett of 80 Summer St., in a letter to the board, pointed out that opening these facilities to the public would create an additional flow of sewage from the motel. She wondered whether the state would allow this additional flow to be carried to the town's already overtaxed sewer treatment plant.

Valentine Story And Poetry Contest

Kids K-12

Do you want Samantha Barrett to win all four boxes of candy? If no one else enters, she certainly will.

All you have to do is write an original Valentine Day story or poem and mail it to the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, MA 02025 before Thursday, Feb. 7 (that's next week).

Stories can be fact or fiction but they must be loving. Poems should be no more than 30 lines. Print, type, chisel your entry on marble — we don't care. Just get them in! The judges are getting impatient with nothing around to judge.

Candy awards will be made Monday, Feb. 11. Winning entries will appear in the Valentine Day issue of the Mariner. Only one entry per student permitted.

Cohasset's Week

Executive Sec.

Selectman Arthur Clark's been filling the role of executive secretary for some time, but last week during a meeting with the committee to study town government structure (CSTGS) selectmen gave their unanimous support for the creation of an executive secretary. An article will be presented to annual town meeting. If voted the position will become effective April, 1981. No price tag yet, but the low figure's around $20,000 in neighboring towns.

Tax Rate Article

The CSTGS (see above) will submit an article to annual town meeting which would direct, if voted, the assessors to set the tax rate by Sept. 1 (or 30 days after having received the cherry sheet). In 1979 the assessors' delay in setting the tax rate cost the town $4,648 — the sum is on the Feb. 14 special town warrant.

Union Talk

The cost of living increased 13 per cent this year. The town personnel board has offered town employees 5 per cent. A group of town employees who wish to remain nameless have called for a meeting of public works, water, sewer, highway, tree and park, all town hall clerical and other clericals to discuss the possibility of joining a "certified union." Organizers allege unfair town bargaining practices under labor rules. The meeting is planned for Friday, Feb. 8 at 7 p.m. in Cushing Room, Rockland Trust Bank.

No Pope Day Pay

No public comment yet from the Cohasset Police Association regarding town counsel's opinion that under Mass. General Laws the town need not reimburse policemen for "Pope Day." Counsel said the collective bargaining agreement in Cohasset lists specific holidays for which police may be paid — "It does not have a catch clause, such as Hingham which includes all legal holidays." The police association meets again on Feb. 4.

Saving Costs

The savings are truly amazing, School Supt. John Maloney recently said the school department has realized energy savings of 36,214 gallons of fuel oil by utilizing various energy-saving measures. In spite of conservation measures, fuel prices have doubled and the school department went over its 1978-79 budget by $1,276.32 (thru 1/18). Thanks to milder than usual weather, additional fuel oil needs are now expected in the vicinity of $40-$50,000 and not the $85,000 originally projected.

Free Of Charge

Harold Litchfield, highway department superintendent, told selectmen last week he will take over dump operations for one year "free of charge." Before accepting his new responsibility, Litchfield resigned as measurer of bark and wood. Selectmen said they would recommend to town meeting that Litchfield's salary be raised — "a little."

Town Hall Stage

Saving the Town Hall stage could cost a substantial sum, Dan Cotton, chairman of the town offices space study committee said recently. But to date "The stage is still in the picture. I understand the stage is the only thing approaching a professional stage in the area," Cotton added. Although Cotton's committee is recommending that the stage itself be left in tact, the auditorium area will be somewhat modified. So far town departments and organizations which use the auditorium have said they can live with the modification.

gifted? Because it's been proven that gifted kids in the public school system who are not challenged often drop out of the mainstream of society and we lose the benefit of their abilities.

Generally speaking, the gifted are considered to be those students with an I.Q. of 130 or above (110-115 is considered average) which puts them into the top 3-5 percent of the population.

On a percentage basis, Cohasset schools have 10 percent of those gifted students. Out of 139 sixth graders, 19 students, or 15 percent have an I.Q. of 139. And according to Ekberg, that's why we can't ignore the gifted in the system — we simply have so many.

"The average youngster at Deer Hill would be somewhere at the top of the heap in another school system. While a student considered to be on the lower end of the scale in our system might be average somewhere else," Ekberg said.

DEFINITION

At the end of fourth grade, teachers are given three separate sheets labeled as follows: creativity, leadership, motivation. "They are told to list on each individual sheet the names of students best exhibiting those qualities," Ekberg said.

"A single teacher's recommendation ranks very low in the reliability of identifying the gifted child," he added. In the fourth grade, kids who show up on two of those sheets are now under consideration for the gifted program.

The second criterion the student must meet is a high grade in the SRA test. If they fall within the 8th or 9th stanine, they're still on mark.

The fourth graders graduate to fifth grade. At the end of the first marking period in fifth grade teachers are asked to make another recommendation in the three aforementioned areas.

The last criterion is a Slosson intelligence test, the final determiner, and the one which has caused the most anxiety among parents.

"There are kids who do have a higher I.Q. than some of those selected for the gifted program. But because of our operational definition, they don't get selected," Ekberg said.

While Ekberg admits the selection process is not perfect, he feels it's a good one. "Certainly, we miss kids. "We're imperfect people. We can't guarantee parents that every kid who should be in the program is in the program."

But he stressed that no child, gifted or talented, is getting short-changed. "There is staff awareness and there has been staff instruction to teach educators how to deal with the whole group of gifted, talented and average students."

Evaluations of the program have been positive, in spite of the poor timing of the pilot program in 1979. "There was some decline in the level of sophistication of the class when students were taken out for special projects . . . but there was not a glaring difference. We're trying to achieve a subtle goal."

CHIEF GOING SOUTH

Police Chief Randolph Feloa will be on vacation Feb. 3 through March 4. Lt. Charles Stockbridge will be in charge of the police department during the chief's vacation.

CONSTABLES

"Why do you want to be a constable, of all things?" Selectman Henry Ainslie asked Barbara Elliot.

"Originally, I thought you needed a volunteer, I didn't know about the pay. And I felt some people wouldn't be threatened to see a woman," Mrs. Elliot, a striking blonde, said.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark asked Mrs. Elliot why Mr. Elliot, an attorney, had signed a reference for another candidate — when she wanted the job.

"He didn't know I was applying. If I had not been appointed, he would have never known," Mrs. Elliot said.

Only one position for constable is open, but selectmen said last week they will consider appointing two persons to the position. Fred Huntwork, who has not yet been interviewed for the position, is also interested. Frank Hamilton was interviewed two weeks ago.

Selectmen took the matter under advisement.

JOHN ROUSSEAU

Atty. John Rousseau, a partner in the Boston Law firm of Hale and Dorr was appointed as an associate member of the board of appeals. Rousseau, who has been a resident of the town for the past four years, specializes in commercial real estate law.

Myrna Putziger was appointed to a full member of the board of appeals after having served as an associate member.

NOMINATION PAPERS

Nomination papers for the April 12 annual town election are available at the clerk's office now. The last day for candidates to take out nomination papers is Friday, March 7, 1980 at 5 p.m.

SATURDAY, FEB. 2

A meeting of all town boards and committees will be held Saturday, Feb. 2 at 10 a.m. in the "new study hall" at CHS to discuss the Jones conservation land as a site for a sewerage treatment plant.

Chairman of the citizen's committee, Edwin Young, recommended holding the meeting to Selectmen last week in order that the citizens' committee could discuses the ramifications of the Jones land as its choice.

The public may attend the session but discussion will be restricted to town boards.

GRANTED

At the request of residents in the area, selectmen voted to grant a petition for a dead end sign at the entrance of Sankey Road.

SENTENCED

David Thomas, 25, of Boston was sentenced last week to 13 years at Concord State Prison for his part in a $2 M art theft in Cohasset over a year ago.

Thomas pleaded quilty last month to the theft of Rembrandt and El Greco paintings and Ming vases which were stolen from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herrington of Cohasset in 1978.

Sentenced to 13 years at Concord State Prison, the Suffolk philosophy student will be eligible for parole in about 18 months.

onto a sharp curve on North Main Street. In addition, the complex would not be within walking distance of the village, making the possibility of a second town shuttle bus probable.

In making their final determinations, both HUD and DCA will take into consideration that 10 per cent of the total housing in town has not been set aside for the elderly. According to a DCA formula, Cohasset is eligible for approximately 220 units of elderly housing. Presently, the town has one 64-unit low-income elderly housing project on Elm Street which is filled to capacity.

The development calls for several two-story buildings scattered over a nine-acre site. The building plans, considered to be very attractive by town officials, would be solar-heated with gas or oil as a back-up system.

An on-site sewer disposal system is planned and percolation tests have been successfully completed, according to Hawker's application. PDE Associates of Boston did the preliminary architectural work. No contract has been awarded for construction.

Editorial For Kids

The Gifted Team

Last week a Deer Hill student about to be tested for the "gifted" program at Deer Hill School told his mother:

"I don't know what's wrong with me. I think I'm going to have to be tutored or something."

Many parents and students are mixed-up about what the gifted program is all about. It took two hours for Mr. Ekberg, Deer Hill principal, to explain it to us.

From what Mr. Ekberg said there are a lot of talented kids at Deer Hill. Some of you are very good in sports. Even at a very early age you could hit a baseball, throw a football, handle an ice hockey stick.

Some of you are already playing musical instruments well, and Mr. Hyde at the high school can't wait until you arrive to play in the band. Others of you are artists. Some of you like to dance, sing, are very good at languages, take care of your own horse. Your teachers have already singled you out for special praise in those areas.

Everybody's good at something. Most of us can't be good at everything.

The gifted program is like a team. And to get on the team you have to have special talents. If this team had 200 kids on it — it wouldn't be a team anymore. It would be too large.

Life is full of competitions, track meets, contests — and the gifted program is one of them.

This year 30 Fifth Graders will be tested to be in the gifted program.

Last year, when the Fifth Graders were Fourth Graders, their teachers found them to have leadership qualities, to be creative, and to have stick-to-it-ness (or two of those special team qualities).

Also, those 30 students also scored well on tests called SRAS.

If you are in Fifth Grade and are taking the special test to get on the team, that means you are a pretty special kid already and have a lot of the talents this team wants.

But if you don't do well in the test, or if you have never gotten to take the test, that doesn't mean you might as well quit school.

Sewer Survey Of Whitehead Asked

To the Editor:

As the situation looks to the writer, the Feb. 14th Special Town Meeting will not accomplish anything. It will be impossible to vote for the Whitehead Rd. site for the wastewater treatment plant because that possible site was not listed among the other sites to be considered and is not on the warrant for the meeting.

However, that need not add to the further delay in obtaining general agreement on the Whitehead Rd. site. It is now clear that that is the one correct site and any one of the others proposed would be a mistake.

Probably Cohasset will be penalized and the ones to be blamed are those who have opposed Whitehead Rd. which has been mistakenly referred to as Whale Meadow.

Cohasset is faced with a dilemma. The imposition of the $10,000 payment was held off by an agreement of the Attorney General's office to reach a decision by Feb. 14th. That will be impossible, so that the penalty seems to be unavoidable. But it will be better to pay the penalty than to make the mistake of deciding upon a wrong site.

Ten million dollars is a lot of money and it would be unthinkable to deliberately plan to spend that amount of money knowing in advance that the site would be wrong and would always be wrong.

Immediate action should be taken by Metcalf and Eddy to survey the Whitehead Rd. district and delineate an area of proper size for the treatment plant. Then procedures should be started for taking the land by eminent domain. The town has priority for a very important town project. The land which may or may not have to be taken by eminent domain will have to be evaluated and compensation for the owners agreed upon. Hearings will be necessary.

The owners of two houses between Whitehead Rd. and Whale Meadow will probably be forced to move anyway because Whale Meadow will probably be dredged for boat moorings.

In the voluminous report at the library the engineers, Metcalf and Eddy included sketch #9-10 which shows the outflow pipe to be laid along Whitehead Rd. That was a wise choice by the engineers. Apparently it was overlooked that there is a relationship between the outflow pipe and the treatment plant site.

So the Whitehead Rd. site did not get included with the other sites proposed. Therefore another later date will have to be set for another special town meeting to obtain a "yes" vote on the correct Whitehead Rd. site.

That further delay and the penalty that seems unavoidable are to be regretted, but they appear to be unavoidable. They will be the result of the town's opposition to the wastewater treatment plant during the last 20 to 30 years. Even now it seems that some people are not yet really convinced that a treatment plant must be built.

It is hoped that the town will stand up with firm determination to take the Whitehead Rd. land by eminent domain if necessary, without being prevented by emotional objections by abutters. They have no valid reasons for objecting. There will be no appreciable odor. The appearance will not be objectionable and the plant will make no sound.

Notes & Comments

...Should we vote to pay the $10,000 effluent penalty on Valentine's Day? Probably. The Attorney General does not like us very much. He thinks we're all rich and he has a lot of clout. Even if we vote the site, fund a financing article...we think we would be wise to agree. This message comes following a lot of deliberation with lawyers inside and outside of the town. Setting examples is what it's all about. And the A.G. would love to set an example for Cohasset on the front page of the Globe.

...Town Hall smells delicious. For some reason the intense heat in the place cooks the wood (and probably the bodies) making it smell like boiled lobster. Visit often.

...Now that we're talking about food...have you ever forgotten celery in the refrigerator and discovered it's become limp? Don't throw it away. Put it in a glass of water (room temperature — not in the frig) and within a few, short hours it will become filled with water and be crunchy again.

...It has been a perplexing Winter so far. Uncertain of itself. Sometimes achingly cold yet not inclined to heap a vast amount of snow on us. We have had early and frequent temperamental outbursts but no forceful follow-through. OPEC eat your heart out.

...FISH has been operating in our town for several years now. It is fundamentally a group of people who wish to show their concern, through action, for neighbors in need. Anyone may call upon FISH for assistance and anyone may be a member. There is never any charge for FISH services.

...Louis Bravo [Cohasset Central Market] gets younger and younger. Two weeks ago he was going to be 39 this past Tuesday. Now he's down to 37. How clever of him to celebrate past birthdays!

...Old annual reports of the town reveal that the down-and-out have always been with us and that their basic needs were met. Small amounts of money, food and clothing were provided to both the "town poor" and the "outside poor." Somehow we think it worked better that way.

...Sympathies to Edward Sturzik, firefighter...for whatever ails him. The police department alerted us to this — whatever, we hope everything's better.

...In the old days selectmen and other town fathers were farmers or preachers, most of them, and they had almost a do-nothing attitude. They didn't want industry and they didn't want to do anything that cost them money. It was not their idea to put the town on the map — that costs money. But now we know that we can't just sit still and hope for the best. If we want the town to develop in a certain direction, we've got to work for it. And hard.

...Very important news...Henry Beetle Hough, of the Martha's Vineyard Gazette, has married (or is marrying) Mrs. Edie Blake of Edgartown. Mr. Hough, probably in his 80's now, has written many important books...including The Road, our favorite. (It's in the Cohasset Library). After a lapse of 10 years or so we renewed our subscription...it costs $15 for off island for one year. It costs $21 for two years plus (we imagine) an additional $3 for off island. We confess...our present community editor emulates Hough.

...The Mariner is on the threshold of obtaining a sportswriter ...no insult to Tis who has been doing a fantastic job. Tis will remain on, he will answer to Ed, who starts in next week. We hope the combination of Ed and Tis will give us some in-depth sports coverage.

...If you have a VW station wagon and are having problems... have a garage attendant drain the entire gas tank...we had that done recently to our satisfaction and it made all the difference in the world.

...We have some other new(s) things happening. We'll tell you about them next week.

Gifted

Somebody had to make a decision to limit the number of kids who can be on this team and they did. Not everyone is talented enough to be in the band. Not everyone can sing or play hockey well. Not everybody even wants to play hockey well.

Mr. Ekberg said the test is not perfect. He said it was made by imperfect human beings.

He also said it's hard to select kids for this team because everybody at Deer Hill School is so smart!

Bombs Away

By Chet Ellis

The news used to be fun. To get the morning paper and read about the latest international adventure, or the most recent local catastrophe, or better yet, studying yesterday's crossword answer, was the way to start the day in style.

Not anymore! The news is terrible! I get nervous anticipations whenever I reach for the paper as I put out the cat in the morning.

Our paperperson (old hole-in-the muffler Naomi) tortures me by holding the paper so as to obscure part of the headline. As I lurch to retrieve it from the bushes, half sentences such as "invades the", or "attacks the", or "loses control of", are what jolt me awake even before I get my orange juice.

Now don't get me wrong. It's not wars and invasions, or even pestilence and epidemics that get me upset. After all, that sort of thing has been going on for 10 thousand years and is likely to continue for another 10 thousand. What really concerns me is that, after reading in the Mariner that sales of Stow-A-Way freeze dried foods are up so dramatically, with some orders as high as $150,000, I think something strange is going on. Someone must know something I don't.

Of course, the increase in dried food sales is only one piece of evidence. What about the fact that the drug store is always out of bandaids?; or the sudden increase in the number of four wheel drive pickups with Dobermans in the passenger seat?

These circumstances taken together, and coupled with the recent upheaval in world events, clearly indicate that the "Bomb Shelter" mentality is back. Have you noticed how many backyard "swimming pools" are being installed? A sure sign.

Town Bomb Shelter

To check my theory, I took a walk in Whitney Woods to confer with my friend the Hermit. He not only agreed with me but added some observations of his own. He says he has evidence that someone, or possibly a group, has located and is stashing enormous quantities of freeze-dried food and supplies in the old town bomb shelter that had been built under the common about 30 years ago.

For those who have been in town only a short time and haven't heard of this fabulous foible of the fifties, I will relate the Hermits story of that infamous municipal mistake.

Back in 1952, when the cold war was red hot, a super salesman from California (in a powder blue leisure suit, I might add) persuaded some of the town fathers to construct (secretly, under the guise of excavating for a new sewage treatment plant) a huge bomb shelter, designed to protect Cohasset citizens from nuclear attack. Four entrances were installed in as many town locations and cleverly disguised as gift shops so as not to be readily discovered.

The reason for secrecy stemmed from the fact that bomb shelters were a controversial subject in 1952, and the group that promoted its construction were afraid if the facts were known, the plan would collapse from the sheer weight of controversy. They decided therefore, to present the town with a fait accompli and be acclaimed as heroes.

As you might suspect, it didn't work out that way. After the project was completed in 1954, conditions had changed. Stalin had died, the Korean War was over and the Cold War was just a warm glow. The probability of getting bombed was zilch!

Contrary to the shelter promoters' fondest hopes, the town went bezerk when everyone found out what had been done and how much it had cost. Meetings were held, panels were formed, inquiries were instigated, and in general there was a lot of indignant stomping around.

The persons responsible for the incredible folly were severely castigated; indeed, they were banished from the town, never to return. Cohasset citizens were so embarrassed at being fooled so easily that they agreed to forget the past two years and never to speak of the shelter again. If asked about it, they would deny any knowledge of it whatsoever.

If you doubt my tale, check further. Next time you visit one of the town's informal meeting places (the Log & Line, the Post Office, or the Wadleigh Park open air garage) ask an old timer about the municipal bomb shelter. He'll tell you he never heard of it; which proved I know what I'm talking about.

Better yet, next time you see a Doberman driving a pickup truck near the common, follow him. He may be hoarding freeze dried bones!

Cohasset's Portuguese To Be Venerated

Looking Back

By Peter Barnicle

One of the first Portuguese couples to make Cohasset their home arrived here in a manner which today would be frowned on by the U.S. Department of Immigration and Naturalization, but back in the mid-nineteenth century was looked on as an example of fortitude and determination.

According to legend the couple got into a minor scrape with authorities on one of the Azore Islands where they lived and were fearful of the consequences. Their plight came to the attention of Capt. Andrew Prouty of Cohasset, whose vessel was on a trading trip to the islands.

The captain arranged a midnight off-shore rendezvous and the man and wife swam out to the ship. They arrived here with only the clothes on their backs.

The story is only one of many being collected by Roger Leonard, 39 Bancroft Rd., to be included in his proposed history of the Portuguese in Cohasset.

"I guess I come by my interest naturally," says the 33-year-old Leonard, a Postal Service employee. "All my paternal and maternal forebears were born in the Azores and entered through the Port of Cohasset. They were naturalized here before the Civil War."

The early arrivals went through whatever formalities there were at the old Customs House near the harbor which was closed in 1910. The building still stands and today — with several additions and restorations — houses the George H. Mealy American Legion Post.

Leonard's research has taken him to the Town Archivist, the Cohasset Historical Society, Harvard University, old newspapers, magazines and to old-timers who can recall the stories that have come down by word of mouth in their families.

"I have talked with a number of people who have told me little known stories about the early Portuguese residents of town," Leonard said. "There are plenty more I would like to hear from. I'm sure they have some sort of old records or family papers tucked away. Things they may think of as having no value."

He noted that many Azoreans arriving here anglicized their names. He plans to include a chapter on family names such as Andrews, Howland, Marshall, Payne, Rollins, Rose, Roy, Sidney and trace them back to their original form.

"My own name could have been Leonardes, Leonardo, Leondas or Linhares on the island of St. Jorge, but here it is Leonard," he explained. "In some cases the immigrants took the name of the captain of the vessel that brought them here. In other cases the immigration officer who, perhaps could not understand Portuguese, just changed it for them."

Roger Leonard

Many of the Azoreans worked their way across the Atlantic on ships and it was only natural that they should find work in a seaport town like Cohasset. They made up the bulk of the membership of the Humane Volunteer Live Saving group which has been credited with many heroic rescues off our coast.

Leonard is researching Portuguese masters and mates who sailed from this port and the names of their vessels. One of his possessions is a gold watch presented to Capt. Manuel Enos by the financier, Thomas Lawson. Capt. Enos served on the Lawson yacht "The Dreamer" and accompanied the Lawson children on several trips to Europe.

Capt. Enos was the founder and long-time chairman of the Minot Ledge Benevolent Association. This group, established in 1889, aided the poor and the sick. Leonard, a great grandson of the founder, has the only known copy of the organization's contitution and by-laws.

Its work extended to seamen who became ill or injured over seas — if they could provide proof signed by an American consul.

" 'The Crown' is in itself a fascinating story," Leonard said. "It has been in the Leonard family for over 300 years and is now in the care of Miss Laura Leonard, a retired school teacher." It is not very ostentatious, but it has a long history. It is a replica of the crown worn by a queen of Portugal and has some religious significance that has been lost in time. However, it has been passed on from generation to generation and was brought to Cohasset in 1854 by my great grandmother, Reva Silvia Leonard."

The small wooden statue of St. Anthony, which now stands in a niche in the new St. Anthony's Church, was brought to Cohasset by Mrs. Ignatio Fratus, shortly after the Civil War.

Leonard is now 10 months into his serious research and is hoping that Cohasset residents who learn of the project will offer him whatever information they have concerning Azorean immigration and history in this area.

The Antoine family history he considers one of the high points of his research. Manuel Antoine, born on the island of Pico in 1820, was the first permanent Portuguese settler in Cohasset. He arrived here, after two years in Boston, in 1841, and lived with his first wife, the former Betsy Adams, in a house on what is now Gleason Rd. When Betsy died in 1852 he married Francesca McLean. The family had five daughters and nine sons.

Manuel's brother, Joseph, was a keeper at the first Minot Lighthouse. He lost his life in the great storm of 1851 when the steel structure was smashed into the raging seas.

☐From the Harborview Tenants' Association a news release about its open house last Sunday to celebrate its fifth anniversary of the Jan. 27 opening of the housing for the elderly at 60 Elm St.

Some of the invited guests were: Mr. and Mrs. George Benedict (Mr. Benedict is president of the housing unit); Rep. Mary Jeanette and Phil Murray; Barbara Clane, director of the apartment housing; Lanie Bacari of the Cohasset Housing Authority; former housing director Alfred Odermatt.

Odermatt and Rep. Murray remembered some of the growing pains all groups went through in launching the housing for the elderly. Light refreshments were served.

The news release closed with this note: "The tenants want everyone to know there is not one unhappy tenant at Cohasset Housing."

☐The "Go Getters" for the 1980 Channel 2 Auction in Cohasset are:

Captain MaryLou Studds, Nancy O'Leary, Corinne Leung, Joan DeCruz, Norma Grassey, Mickey Steimile and Peggy Soltesz.

Also Pat Delaney, Shelly Weier, Joyce MacDonald, Sue Fiore, Letitia Jordan, Marj Izzo, Carolyn Horn, Judy Bronstein, Carol Martin and Joanne Chittick.

☐Franny Charles Jr.'s sailing partner, Skip Whyte, is the coach of the B.U. (Boston University) Sailing Team. We mistakenly elevated him to coach of the U.S. Sailing Team in last week's article. Good luck and good sailing to the pair, who are seeking the 470 Class Berth in the 1980 Summer Olympic Games.

(Franny and Skip were rounding the windward mark in US 1477 in the photograph last week. We thought it was clear who they were. Sorry if it was not.)

☐On January 14, Cohasset's population increased by one little 6 lb. 10 oz. bundle of baby girl, Jennifer Maria Taft, first child of William and Maria Taft III of Oak Street. Grandparents are William H. and Caro. Taft of Rockland and Mrs. Maria Grazila, The Azores, Portugal.

(It's been quite awhile since Cohasset had a new born — that we know of. We're delighted to welcome Jennifer to town!)

☐Allan White of Atlantic Avenue was elected president of New England Baptist Hospital Corp., Boston and chairman of the board of trustees at the hospital's 85th annual meeting. White has been a trustee of the hospital since 1974 and was vice president and chairman of the executive committee last year.

He is the treasurer of Hendries Inc., Milton, manufacturer and distributor of Hendries Ice Cream and wholesaler of frozen foods throughout New England. Mr. White is also a director of the South Shore Bank.

☐"Fit to Print" is the title of the Vincent Club Show of 1980. The Club raises money annually for the Vincent Memorial Hospital, a gynecological unit of Mass. General Hospital specializing in research on cancer in women.

This show, like all 88 of its predecessors, will be an original review-type production with music and lyrics. Show dates are April 2-5. Tickets will go on sale March 17 through April 5 at the New England Life Hall box office, or may be reserved by calling the box office, 536-9696 during those dates.

Mrs. Robert C. Jordan of Atlantic Avenue is in charge of all the activities in the "front of the house." Save the dates!

☐Benjamin S. Blake of Atlantic Avenue was recently awarded a gold service pin from Wentworth Institute of Technology in connection with the observance of the college's 75th anniversary.

☐Cynthia Anne Bell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lowrie Bell Jr., of Gammons Road, and Joseph Leo Misite, of Weymouth, were married in St. Joseph's Church, Boston last Saturday. A reception was held at Maison Robert, Boston, which featured a menu planned by culinary authority and guest of the bride's family, Pierre Franey of New York.

☐To Lou, Squire of Cohasset Central Market, congratulations on the anniversary of your birth! (Only his butcher knows how old!)

☐The main entry and porch of the lovely gothic St. Stephen's Church probably looks more today like it was originally intended to with the exception of plexiglass — a 1980 protection device. The hand-carved beams, engravings and adornments have all been carefully and painstakingly replaced and restored over the past year and a half by Larry Hoogeveen, after kids vandalized the porch by fire.

The spot is popular among young people for it's protection from the wind and cold, but also for the vista of the village and all "that's happening."

Rev. Richard Muir says that while St. Stephen's "welcomes the kids, we wish they could try to take care of it for our sake and the community's."

When you're given an invitation to visit someone's private property the polite thing to do would be to pick up your trash when you leave and not damage the building in any way.

A Little Knowledge...

By Lois Martin

Isn't it pleasing that the old adage about learning something everyday is true. Nary a week goes by without our having gleaned a bit of provocative information to enrich our minds.

Take last week, for example. Tuesday I was apprised through a daily paper that some high school seniors are quarrelling with school officials about what caps and gowns they'd wear at graduation. That's my kind of harangue.

Apparently the adults in authority, in what they believe is strict compliance with Chapter 622 (equal treatment of sexes) have mandated that seniors wear the same caps and gowns. The graduating boys and girls, however, based on an older chapter and verse of sex difference, want to wear separate but equal colors.

PATCHES

I'm with the kids. I'd like to be equal to the males but not confused with them.

Monday it was brought to my attention that I, and others to be sure, could take part in a bottom trawl construction workshop being held at Mass. Maritime Academy. This may not qualify as added knowledge right off the bat. But it clearly indicated how I could learn to build a boat, something I've never known.

Wednesday I was appalled to learn that 50 per cent of my body heat escapes through my head if I leave it uncovered. No mention was made of the mouth as an escape hatch but the inference was clear. I've since taken full precautions during the cold spell, wearing a hat and closing my mouth.

But the kicker came Thursday when I discovered I could get my horoscope (horrorscope) on a daily basis by calling someone in New York. Apparently there's someone there poised on the edge of her seat in anticipation of filling me in on my stars.

You know, of course, there are 12 signs underwhich we operate. As an Aquarian I had my own number (1-212-936-6161) and paid 44 cents for the call. I dialed with bated breath. At first I believed my horoscope wasn't home. But not so.

A fast speaking woman (only a minute's worth) greeted me pleasantly. My marital and work relationships, she said will improve as I show more affection and understanding. But I'm to avoid quarrels on both fronts. Though I'm slated for continuing money worries, it's nothing to declare bankruptcy about.

As if that weren't heartening enough, I'm in for career opportunities soon and I've got this chance coming for financial investment. But I'm to beware of this kind of risk.

And pretty soon I'm going to meet someone who could create for me a magnificent chance at doing something wonderful. But . . . (this is a toughie) I'm not to come on too strong to this stranger . . . mustn't rush in and frighten away that tittillating turn of events.

And a bit of a bonus, I'm going to feel better as I take better care of my health.

As you can imagine I was taken aback. Aside from not having enough money for gas on a weekly basis, it looks like I'm in for a challenging spring.

But the key apparently is my wholehearted effort to be careful, shy, affectionate and the very soul of understanding. I can handle most of that. But Aquarians have always had difficulty restraining themselves.

And I fear my enthusiastic reaction to a stranger I'll meet in the near future, the one who's going to open exciting avenues in the world. If I heed the astrological advice, I won't hug him right off the bat. It's the people at home and work I'm to embrace and console.

Confusing, really, but I'm determined to be alert to the stars. Trouble is, with my luck the stranger will probably have an opportunity I can't afford to take . . . like a new charge card, chairmanship of a boat show on the Cape . . . or a gift certificate in a maternity ward that must be used by Dec. 30.

By Joan Pinkham

Today, housewives are considered rather quaint, perhaps a little odd. Definitely old-fashioned. Caring for one's husband, chauffering the children and running the house are not enough, according to the liberated woman. We should find ourselves, do our own thing, take advantage of all the choices there are, or we'll be unfulfilled. It's plain to see that I have been lured into the working world, but only after my three sons were in school and only succumbing to a part-time job. To those of us who enjoy a seemingly minority role as housewife, there's nothing quite so satisfying as producing a pleasant meal for one's family. Margaret Varnerin (a most attractive grandmother), suggests this.

BAKED STUFFED FILLETS OF FISH

1½ lb. haddock, schrod, or any white fish
3/4 c. chopped fresh mushrooms, or small can of sliced
Few drops onion juice, or tsp. of chopped onion
3 T butter or margarine
4½ T flour
1/2 c. cream or evaporated milk
Few grains cayenne pepper and mace
1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
12 oysters (if fresh), or 1 can. Clams may also be used.

Cook mushrooms, onions in butter. Add flour, stir until blended. Add cream. Bring to a boil. Add oysters, or clams and seasoning. Place fillets in buttered pan. Cover with mixture and dot with buttered bread crumbs. Servings can be increased by placing another layer of fillets on top of filling and topping with buttered bread crumbs. Bake at 325 degrees about 20 min., or until fish flakes.

Today's grandmothers don't grow gray, they turn blonde, so one precocious grandchild has observed. Where our own grandmothers wore cotton house dresses in the summer, adding a sweater in the winter, today finds her decked out in jeans, bejewelled with rings and bracelets and a slave to her weekly appointment with the hairdresser. Our grandmothers probably never saw the inside of a beauty parlor, their wispy white hair held in check by a hairnet. Those were the days when they went instead to the fishmarket on Fridays, perhaps to serve this dish of Evelyn Ferreira's, Scituate's selectwoman.

BAKED HADDOCK

Buy 1/2 lb. for each serving. Have clerk skin the fish. Use buttered pan, or butter foil paper. Salt fish lightly, then spread with Hellman's Mayonnaise. Cover fish with the following bread crumb recipe and sprinkle over entire fish: Dry French bread in 250 degree oven, then roll slices to crumbs. Empty crumbs into melted butter. Bake 3/4 hour at 375 degrees.

Letter To The School Comm.

To Members of the Cohasset School Committee:

The purpose of this letter is to share with school committee members parental concerns discussed at a meeting held this morning which was initiated by the Osgood Communications Council and attended by a representative group of parents and council members, in regard to the proposed 1980-81 Osgood budget.

Discussion centered around the following areas:

1. While we support the budget as proposed by the administration, there is strong feeling regarding the elimination of the instructional aide in the open space classroom.

Because the operation of the open space classroom requires added responsibilities of the teachers and a fully staffed learning center, it cannot function effectively without a full-time aide.

The aide receives open space and other kids in the math and language arts center for assistance with skills work, creative writing, problem solving, etc.; she continually reorganizes the center's materials and initiates new topics and approaches; maintains record keeping and corrects work; and provides time for teacher planning and coordination which is crucial to the program. The learning center channels children beyond the normal program providing "enrichment" as part of the daily curriculum.

2. We are in favor of the four proposed third grade teachers for next year. We feel very strongly that the projected enrollment warrants four classes. In addition, it would seem very prudent to maintain the staff as proposed in light of the fact that the 1981-82 third grade (90) will be even larger than 1980-81's (80).

3. It was the unanimous opinion of the group that class size at the primary level is of the utmost importance for social as well as educational reasons. The need for individualization of curriculum is perhaps most vital in the early grades. At no other time is the range of abilities and maturity wider.

4. We would like to see the art, music and physical education teachers maintained as proposed. While they'll be servicing fewer classes, we feel that the extra time should be used as a resource for the classroom teacher to supplement curriculum and provide individual activities for any child who could benefit from more exposure in these areas.

5. While we are pleased that there is now space for a separate library and an allocation has been proposed for the purchase of new materials, we feel the function of the library is more than just the dispensing of books. For that reason, we ask that consideration be given for the addition of a qualified person to run the library, making the most effective use of it.

6. We suggest for future consideration, that it would be useful to hold workshop hearings for each of the four schools, involving parents, administrators and school committee members prior to changing the proposed budget in any way. This would provide the opportunity for all parties to air their concerns and resolve differences.

In conclusion:

If school is not varied, stimulating and challenging at the primary level, how can we expect our children to have healthy attitudes toward learning in the upper grades.

We would caution against using declining enrollment as a reason for allowing current programs to deteriorate.

The improvement, expansion and enrichment of the school system should reflect the responsible balancing of priorities, but should not be contingent solely on fiscal constraints.

We hope that the ideas generated by this informal meeting will help school committee members to understand the parents' feelings about the future of education in the Osgood School.

Band Kids Are Into Jazz. . .Combos

No one could ever accuse the CHS band/orchestra/jazz group(s) of tooting their own horns. If we hadn't happened to visit the band room recently, we would have never learned the following:

—Senior Chris Williams has an early acceptance to Yale, "Music was probably the biggest reason." Williams was also the recent winner of the Hingham Civic Orchestra's concerto competition. He won with "Glazounov Concerto" for saxophone and orchestra. Runner-up was Alexandra Muller, another Cohasset student, who played Ceasar Franck's "Variation" for piano and orchestra.

Williams, who is strong in composition, has also entered a statewide competition for composition (jazz combo, four or five pieces) sponsored by the Mass. Association of Jazz Educators. His competition is entitled "Escopay," which is a variation of two words and means "nothing, really," according to Williams.

FIRST LAST YEAR

—Thursday, Jan. 31, the Jazz Ensemble will compete in the Norwood Jazz Competition, which the group took first place in last year. Bus tickets to the competition are on sale for $2 per person. If this group weren't so shy about its activities, we would have known about it for the last issue of the Mariner and could have alerted the general public sooner.

Tony Hyde, director of music at CHS is a low-key kind of guy who takes his music seriously. So do his musicians. This group is into jazz competitions, musical composition, music theory.

The marching band numbers about 60, counting the color guard. They strut their football stuff in a modified corps style. But this group of kids are really into jazz, disco and combos . . . and they take more than their share of individual prizes at SEMSBA competitions and districts.

IN FOCUS

"I keep the competition in focus," Hyde said. While he plans for more active shows next year, he has to consider that his music students are an active bunch.

"Traditionally, the emphasis at CHS is on academic courses. We attract a lot of those students to living arts programs. Many students work and have other obligations."

Two years ago CHS started having a colorguard. "This year 15 kids are involved. They have their own instructor — it's a young program," Hyde said.

In May the band will participate in a major trip to Mystic, Connecticut, where it will participate in the Heritage Music Festival, a two-day affair. At the fair there will be concert, jazz and chorus competitions. The event draws over 60 schools — this is the second year CHS will participate.

Also in May the band will hold a Spring Pops concert.

JAZZ GROUPS

Jazz groups are sprinkled at almost every grade level throughout the system. There is "The Czar," who has as its nucleus members of the jazz band. The "Jazz Combo" practices after school hours and is big on competitions. There is the "Jr. Jazz Band" (Grades 7-9) — this group also has performance opportunities, one at the state level. Mike Laitta is a member.

Jokingly, Hyde remarks "We have our welfare state in the band — some join up because they enjoy the social life — they are carried along by the stronger players."

Chris Williams noted that many CHS musicians take lessons at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham. "I started playing the saxophone in fourth grade. When I was in seventh grade I began lessons at the conservatory. All the district kids have been through the conservatory."

Hyde, who himself prefers music theory, said in recent years he has had to combine music theory seminar levels.

A return to basics hasn't helped the music program, but Hyde noted that serious musicians will always find a way. And he's still available after school to offer special help.

Hoopsters Lose Heart-Breakers

By Rob Tis

The boys' Varsity basketball team had two heartbreaking losses last week. Tuesday they traveled to Middleboro to face last year's league champs. The Skippers came onto the floor with poise and confidence — remembering a victory against the Sachems earlier this season.

However, this time the hoopsters were missing Mark Goff due to a tendon injury. This proved to be a key loss.

The Skippers went from basket to basket with the Sachems, ending the first quarter in a deadlock at 12.

The second quarter was equally as tight, the biggest lead being a 20-16 Sachem advantage. The Skippers put on a 10-4 surge from there to go up 26-24 at intermission. This lead was mainly due to the all around playing of junior Bill Kurtz who had 19 points on the night.

From his point guard position, Kurtz kept the team moving and under control.

The third quarter proved the supremacy of the Sachems with the Skippers being outscored 19-8. Bill Taylor, Skipper big man, could no longer hold the two big man offense of Middleboro. This resulted in a shortage of rebounds for the Skippers and an eventual loss, 64-48.

HEART-BREAKER

Friday, the Skippers faced Abington in what proved to produce quite a few heart-attacks. The Skippers wanted revenge on the Green Wave after they had dealt them a tough loss earlier in the season. The tired Skippers, still without their iceman, Goff, played hardnosed ball and captured a 27-25 halftime lead, mainly on the services of Jim McCarthy and Bill Kurtz.

McCarthy played an awesome brand of defense holding South Shore League scoring machine to a mere four field goals. Kurtz directed the offense in his usual professional manner as well as sinking 18 points.

The Skippers put the scoring into overdrive as they went up 56-48 with only 3 minutes left on the clock. The Green Wave began to roll and gradually took the lead. But with 22 seconds left, Bill Kurtz drove the lane and put the Skippers up by one. Abington came up the court using the time for just one shot. The Skipper's defense was tight. The crowd was on the edge of its seats. With five seconds left, Joe McShanny sank a jumper to clinch the game for Abington.

MATMEN

The Cohasset Varsity Wrestling team, although suffering two disappointing defeats at the hands of Marshfield and Randolph, are beginning to collect some outstanding personal records.

Wrestling at 114, Torin Sweeney has a personal record of 9-2-1, and appears to have a good shot at placing very high in the sectionals.

In the lower weight classes there is David Duncombe and Jack Hernan wrestling at 121 and 128 respectively. These two juniors have displayed brilliant wrestling, boosting their records to 8-3 and 10-2. The team also has senior sensation Jack Maclean. Jack, combining strength and agility, has a fantastic record of 10-1-1 and also should finish well in the sections, and could go to the States.

Skipper Girls Ice Sachems

The Girls Basketball Team played good fundamental ball Tuesday to surpass Middleboro 40-37. The Skippers charged out to a 11-6 lead in the first quarter and the Sachems never could quite make up the difference.

The Sachems stayed close the whole game — until Kate Salerno sank a key basket in the final minute to ice the game for the Skippers.

Lorainne Carrol could not be stopped as she poured in 13 points. Donna Chisolm and Jode Sandblom each had 7 and Ellen McCarthy had 6.

Friday the Skippers could do very little as they faced a Girls Basketball dynasty, the Abington Green Wave, who have not lost a game in two years.

Jodi Sandblom put in 11 for the Skippers, but it was a losing battle, 64-21.

HOCKEY

The Varsity Hockey team faced Hull Tuesday. Hull advanced to a 2-0 lead in the first period taking the Skippers by surprise. But the Skippers reorganized fast and soon the attack flourished.

Two quick goals by David O'Conness and Doug Dillon tied the score at two at the end of the first period.

Cohasset dominated the second period scoring four goals, three by Dom Campudelli and another by Doug Dillon. In the third Rich Young put the icing on the cake with a blazing wrist shot. Hull quickly scored two goals at the end of the game to finalize the score 7-4 — a Pirate win.

On Saturday, Skippers tripped to Rockland to face off against the Abington Green Wave. After two periods the score was knotted at two. Cohasset broke the tie in the third period on a Don O'Neil tally. Then in the last two minutes the Green Wave tied it up, and then with under a minute to play, Waves netted a 4-3 win.

Winter Sports. . .Safely

By Safety Officer John Rhodes, III

SKATING — Make sure the ice is safe — don't go near open water or black ice. If possible have an adult check the ice. Have an adult or someone on shore watching so that they can call for help if something happens. Have a length of rope or a long pole handy so that they can be used for rescue.

Remember that once you fall in freezing water that you will lose consciousness within two-three minutes.

HOCKEY — Wear all the equipment provided (helmets, gloves and padding) so that injuries will be prevented. Keep the hockey stick on the ice (it will improve your game) and don't swing it around without looking, it can be a dangerous weapon.

SLEDDING — Select a clear area (no stumps, trees, rocks, etc.). Do not go sledding in a roadway or any other public area that is not set aside for sledding. Don't sled onto any road or across any road; don't let the sled go alone.

SKIING — Dress comfortably, preferably in layers, and so that you have free movement of your body. Wear a proper size boot and make sure that your bindings are adjusted properly so that they will release. Be careful with your poles as they can cause injury to others. Stick to your speed trail, only after you have mastered one then go to the next. Watch out for the person in front of you.

SNOWMOBILING — All snowmobiles have to be registered unless you are on your own property. Keep off all public roads and sidewalks. Keep your feet on the running board. Stay off private property unless you have written permission. Don't drive on ponds, as the ice may give away. If you are under 14 you must have an adult present and watching you.

EXTRA CAREFUL — If you are a pedestrian — Longer hours of darkness, snow causes roads to be narrowed, sidewalks are difficult to walk on, more reflection off the snow, cars cannot stop very fast, you cannot move very fast because of extra clothes.

Ground Water Still A Mass. Problem

The following article is the second in a series of four prepared by the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts and submitted by the League of Cohasset. The series defines current water problems and actions and discusses various proposed solutions.

SUPPLY: QUALITY

By the late 1960's water specialists became very concerned about drinking water quality. In the United States between 1961 and 1970, 128 known outbreaks of disease and poisoning were traceable to drinking water, 20 persons died, and 46,374 became ill. Many other cases were unreported.

Surprisingly, few Americans question the quality of their drinking water. We have become used to turning over our water supply management to local governments and private entrepreneurs. We continued to assume that water from the tap is clean — although a few do turn to spring water, home distilled water, commercially provided bottled water, or even home-installed filtration devices.

Congress passed the Safe Drinking Water Act in 1974 but delayed full implementation of the Act until 1977 to enable the National Academy of Sciences to come up with primary drinking water standards.

Every community water supply which serves 15 or more connections or 25 people must meet the safe drinking water standards. Even trailer parks, motels, etc., are covered.

One of the provisions of the act calls for testing local drinking water supplies for ten chemicals, six pesticides, bacteria, radioactivity, and turbidity (turbidity, or cloudiness, is caused by solid matter particles suspended throughout the water).

It also requires that the public be informed when the quality violates the primary standards set as "maximum contamination levels." These tests, when carried out in Massachusetts, revealed widespread contamination with salt, trichlorethylene, and many other substances. Fully one-third of Massachusetts communities' drinking water supplies are contaminated with hazardous materials.

Some of these supplies must be closed permanently. Others will require expensive treatment and years of restoration effort. And this alarming development has appeared throughout New England and the nation.

Contamination has occurred in many wells because of lack of safeguards to the aquifier (underground area where water is retained). This has happened largely because there are inadequate understanding of the nature and characteristics of ground water.

Although the state has been engaged for many years in a cooperative program with the United States Geologic Survey to determine the flow and interaction of ground water, the entire state is not yet mapped. Additionally, many toxic and hazardous substances have been disposed of carelessly and often illegally. These wastes can then enter the ground water system.

Widespread use of road salt has caused problems in some areas. Nitrate (a salt) is a real and immediate danger to infants and cannot be tolerated in the water supply.

Coliform bacteria from fecal material also are a health hazard. These bacteria are often treated with heavy doses of chlorine, but chlorine can mix with debris in the pipes and create tribalomethones, which are cancer-causing agents. Turbidity tends to make chlorine treatment ineffective.

The solution to such problems for many communities is filtration at the source, which is expensive. Massachusetts recently adopted a regulation requiring filtration for some communities. Many large supplies of water already meet the standards and have adequate treatment facilities.

Others will have to provide treatment which will often be expensive. The law gives the states primary responsibility (primacy) for implementing the safe drinking water act when states can prove they have adequate means of providing coverage. They are to be provided with technical and financial assistance from Congress.

Massachusetts has primacy and is preparing to carry out its responsibilities. Two important bills were passed in the last session of the legislature which will help communities finance their programs.

The state will pay 50 per cent of the costs of local filtration systems. The state will also give financial aid for leak detection and refining and repairing of distribution systems.

Water specialists expect that when the public is informed about its water quality problems. it will insist on corrective action. Whether this expectation is realistic remains to be seen.

Cohasset's On Sale!!!

By Larry Fone

JANUARY SALES ARE HERE! Shops throughout the village, harbor and CJCH have some specialities at the best prices around. Most shops have bargains from 10-70 percent off. Take a look-see:

Cohasset Hardware has Rubbermaid Swing-tops, reg. $7.95, now $3.44. Also many other super specials, especially games — an item they are closing out this year.

Village Shop Talk

Notes & Quotes has a special table of hard and soft-cover books at 50 percent off. All other items are 10 percent off. Cards & Shards is offering its Christmas cards, wraps, etc. at 50 percent off — many other good buys, too!

Classics is selling their elegant 1979 stock at 50 percent off — a good selection and sizes, too! David Sharpe Galleries has some grand paintings, prints, etc. at affordable prices — stop in and talk with Martha. The Linen Chest has a fine selection of quality merchandise at prices you won't resist.

Scott Liquors has some fine specially-priced wines for February gray days by the wood-burning stove. Cookworks has marked down most items from 10-70 percent. Some especially good savings on copper and a good selection of teapots at 50 percent off. Pot racks are also at special bargains. Anyone around town need a Mongolian hot pot, copper, for $49?

Have heard there will be a new tenant shortly at the old Fish Market and that the large shop at Stagecoach Way (Old News Store) will soon be occupied. Sure hope so!

Phillip Smith of Creation Interiors is redoing his shop with his usual expertise. Look forward to the new look!

Cookies On Fridays

Cookworks would like to get some of the good cooks in town to make available their cookies, breads, rolls, squares, etc., Fridays, to shoppers. Anyone interested call me at 383-1906. Something similar was done a few years ago very successfully and since we don't have a bakery in town anymore, it might be worth a try!

While in Cohasset Village stop for lunch at the Red Lion Inn. Daily specials at $2.30 — plus the regular menu.

Put your money where your Heart is.

Musings...

By John Cutler

☐"News is the first rough draft of history." — Philip Graham.

☐Balzac who stood a squat 5-2, once murmured as he glanced in a mirror: "All great men have short necks."

☐An investor is a person whose stocks go up. A speculator is one whose stocks go down.

☐Businessmen generally flop in politics because, while they see clearly what should be done, they seldom perceive what it's possible to do.

☐Russia is an imperialistic nation which uses communism as an export product. Communism doesn't work in Russia because Russians have a special aptitude for private enterprise.

☐MBTA riders used to put a hand on their wallet when they read the sign at Sullivan Square: "Beware of pickpockets." This made the job easier for the pickpockets."

☐An indispensable person knows there is no such thing.

☐"Lenin sprung a leak in the cesspool of Russian history and the stench has poisoned the civilized world."

☐If a weekly newspaper is loved it is either lapsed, lousy or both.

☐"Don't you remember me?" a panhandler asked Mayor James Curley. "I'm sorry," Curley said. "I can't place your face, but I never forget a breath."

☐A tax loophole is a deduction someone else gets.

In two recent surveys (June 1979), over a thousand people saw three unidentified 19" diagonal and three unidentified 25" diagonal color TV pictures side by side. They were asked to pick the one with the best overall picture...and they picked Sylvania Superset 2 to 1 over each of the others.

For the third year in a row, a Sylvania Superset beat RCA and Zenith.

The people's choice is clear. You don't have to be the biggest, to have the best picture.

Cohasset Marine

vol. II, no. 18 thursday, february 7, 1980

PAUL PRATT MEMORIAL LIBRARY
COHASSET, MA 02025

12 CHS Staff Out

No — there's no impending strike. It's feverish, headachy, 3-5 day flu venting itself upon staff and students alike throughout the system.

CHS freshmen were the heaviest group hit so far, School Supt. Dr. John Maloney said Monday, with a total of 252 students absent throughout the system at the start of the week (or a 16 per cent absentee rate).

Maloney said the school department will monitor the situation throughout the week, and consider taking action should be absentee rate hit 25 per cent, which is considered epidemic proportions.

Late Monday night Maloney said he didn't feel closing the schools would become necessary.

Foster Wants More

If the MBTA Advisory Council approves a $62 million increase sought by MBTA Director Robert Foster, Cohasset's $87,143 assessment will be upped by $36.000 — for a grand total of $123,000.

The $62 requisition amounts to a 41 per cent increase on town assessments. Imagine the town fathers will have something to say about that!

Boney Budget

Christmas is over and business is business.

Nevertheless, Monday's school committee audience looked quite startled when Committeewoman Patricia Walsh asked Sam Erby, science department head:

"How many skeletons do you have?"

"One and a half," Erby said.

Mrs. Walsh then wondered aloud why Erby hadn't replaced the missing parts on the half skeleton.

"It's not economically sound to replace the missing parts," Erby said. (although everyone was very interested at this point, that remark was not elaborated upon).

"It's really difficult to move them back and forth."

In addition, responding to Mrs. Walsh's questioning, Erby said he needed six head skulls, but wasn't sure how many cat skulls he had or would be needing.

Ugh.

An Interview With Patricia Facey

Businesses Waiting For Sewerage

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Between January 1979 and January 1980 the following items came before the Cohasset Planning Board for approval:

—Two subdivisions (22 new building lots).

—10 subdivisions (no approval needed) for a total of 46 lots.

—Three site plan approvals for new business on 3-A.

—A preliminary site plan review for a business on 3-A on the Williams land (across from Williams' Brothers).

"The plan for the Williams land was for strip-shopping: a supermarket, department store, bank, restaurant, several small shops. I'm not entirely sure what's happened to it. The fact that there was no sewer or water . . added to the construction costs," Patricia Facey, chairman of the planning board, said in a recent interview.

This week the planning board is scheduled to meet with yet another developer who proposes to develop the Winchester property on 3-A and Beechwood Street.

Also, Bergsons and Autohaus have bought land next to Frame-Up (2 lots). Autohaus has already had a site plan hearing. Bergsons is waiting for sewerage.

Angelos Supermarket is also planning to come into the town when sewerage comes.

Regarding multi-family housing: Mrs. Facey said there's one multi-housing unit planned for Smith Place/Pleasant Street — condominium units and town houses. "That will happen without sewerage," she said. "And — that's all quite a bit of building."

According to Mrs. Facey, "There is land available for multi-family housing in the town's business district if we

Special TM Warrant Looks Expensive

It is uncertain how the town's Valentine's Day meeting on a wastewater treatment plant will be recorded in the annuals of the town's history. Probably dully. But it is expected that meeting will be anything but dull.

One week before the rally it appears residents have agreed there is a need for sewerage. Town boards and committees appear to be pleased with the citizen's advisory committee's presentation of the Jones conservation land for a wastewater facility.

However, some people on the street claim they're going to vote against everything — which they feel will force the town into expanding the Jacob's Meadow facility. Others say they'll vote to select a site but will refuse under any circumstances to vote to pay the $10,000 consent agreement (in lieu of trial).

Still others say, cryptically, that if the town votes the Jones site (inland), Cohasset will be the only Mass. town with an inland wastewater plant.

In brief, this special town meeting was called at the strong instance of the Attorney General's office — which intervened on behalf of the state Division of Water Pollution Control when it alleged in Norfolk Superior Court that the town had exceeded its discharge permit (since July 1979).

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. said recently he is unable to defend the town in the matter. Up until recently, at least, our Jacob's Meadow facility was completely broken down and discharging raw sewerage into the ocean.

The Jones conservation land, the school lands abutting the Music Circus and the Whale Meadow location (in that order) will be presented to voters. Each of the three articles requires different, special treatment. Of the three articles, only the school lands require a majority vote (as opposed to two thirds for the others) as it is in the form of a petition to the legislature to release the land from educational purposes to town use. In its most recent vote on the issue, the school committee voted 4-2 to retain the land for educational purposes.

Voters will also be asked to provide $560,000 for working plans and specifications for a system of main drains and other street connections (sewer related).

Other articles call for the payment of $6,251.87 for medical expenses incurred by Police Sergeant Richard Barrow for service-connected injuries. Blue Cross does not insure officers injured in the line of duty.

And — the town will be asked to appropriate from free cash the amount of $4,648 for interest paid in borrowing in anticipation of taxes.

Cohasset's Week

CS Debate

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark and Police Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge will discuss the pros and cons of Civil Service at the Unitarian Parish House at 9:15 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 7. The meeting, sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters, is open to the public.

Recently, a majority of selectmen announced their intention to place an article on annual town meeting warrant which will ask voters to remove police officers from Civil Service. Police officers feel they need Civil Service to protect them from political influences.

Selectmen feel Civil Service is burdensome and cumbersome to handle.

Third

First Jazz Band Trumpeter Steve Daniels reports the CHS Jazz Ensemble, under the direction of Tony Hyde, took third place in the Norwood Jazz Classic Festival last week.

Daniels said of the ensemble, which took a rousing first place last year, "I felt we did well for the songs we were playing. "Coach" Hyde had chosen several selections written and arranged by award-winning band leader Toshiko Akiyoshi — quite a pretty lady and a former college classmate of Hyde's.

The ensemble lost first place to Maine's Westbrook High School, narrowly missing second place (Marshfield High School) by one point. "There were two judges. One judged us high, the other low," Daniels said.

The ensemble's next competition will be at the S.S. District Jazz Competition in Foxboro, Wednesday, Feb. 13. In this competition ensembles will be categorized in groups according to school size.

Daniels said: "There will be six or seven bands in our class. I think we've got the potential."

Another Third

A wastewater reclamation facility in Saudi Arabia, a 29 billion dollar plan by which all of Saudi Arabia will be electrified won the Grand Conceptor Award at ceremonies in Boston Monday sponsored by the Consulting Engineers Council of New England.

Coming in a close third was Cohasset's little $1.9 million water treatment plant, designed by SEA Consultants, Inc. of Boston.

Fred Aufiero, of SEA said the Cohasset plant will be entered in the National Competition held by the American Consulting Engineer's Council on March 12 in Washington, D.C. A Grand Conceptor prize will be awarded and 15 honorable mentions will be given out.

Assistance

A fuel assistance management meeting has been set for Monday, Feb. 11 from 9-1 p.m. at Town Hall. The meeting will be run by the Quincy Community Action Organization, Inc. Persons interested in the details of obtaining assistance should attend.

Deliveries

Postmaster Gerard Keating of Cohasset reminds area residents that magazines delivered by private carriers are not the responsibility of the United States Postal Service.

Postmaster Keating said numerous complaints have been received from residents who have found publications left on their laws, porches, steps, or in apartment house vestibules. In addition, allegation of untimely delivery are being directed to the Postal Service when, in fact, the magazine is being delivered by an independent delivery service working under contract with the publisher.

Postal regulations prohibit private couriers from using U.S. Mail receptacles. Therefore, anyone found to be in violation of these regulations will be assessed appropriate postage charges.

Individuals who are experiencing problems in this regard should contact officials of the publication in question for corrective action. The Postal Service is not responsible for deliveries made by private carriers.

Bassing Beach

For the time being, the recreation commission has run up against a wall regarding its interest in opening Bassing Beach up to more of the public. The Conservation Trust (private, non-profit regulatory agency) which maintains the beach and its two vacation cottages, feels the beach is too fragile an area to encourage any more public than presently tents, swims or parties on its sands.

Complaint

Atty. Richard Henderson of Town Counsel's firm, said Monday the town will petition the court this week for a contempt complaint against Ocean Bay Nurseries on CJCH. In addition, the town will ask the court to issue a contempt citation against trustees of the land, individual owners of the nursery and the corporation for violations of the zoning by-laws of the town.

The town is seeking to have removed from the property a trailer which is used as an administrative office (illegal under the by-laws) and signs which are equally nonconforming.

Citizen Alerts Police To Thieves

Russell Gallagher, 32, of Vineyard Haven was supporting a $1,000-$1,500 heroin habit a day. Jason Chisley, 30, of Belmont was his assistant.

Both men are alleged to have been working the Beach Street, Nichols Road, Atlantic Avenue areas of town for several days. The day before their arrest last Wednesday they were observed on Nichols Road.

At the time of their arrest for alleged attempted breaking and entering, no police officer in the town had ever set eyes on either of the men. But they knew all about them from observant citizens. They knew what the license plate number was on their tan car, and they had a general description of the men. Chisley was black, Gallagher, white. And they looked suspicious.

That was enough to interest the police department.

Last Wednesday at 2:30 p.m. a citizen alerted the police department to the two men's presence on Beach Street.

Officer Carmelo Conte reached the area first — soon joined by Officer Joseph Kealey and Sgt. Jack Rhodes. The men did not resist arrest.

Back at the station Chisley was charged with two Cohasset breaks while Gallagher was charged with three breaks. Shortly after their arrest it was discovered there were warrants throughout the state for both men on a series of B & E's.

Chisley was released on a $1,000 bail and personal recognizance.

On the very day of their arrest they had broken into a home but had been deterred by a dog.

Gallagher was put on pretrial probation in the care and custody of the probation department and placed in Bridgewater State Hospital for a drug-related problem.

Officers Kealy and Rhodes recently went to Belmont and entered Chisley's home there on a search warrant, but none of the stolen items has been recovered. Chisley has confessed to breaking into a Beach Street home where $19,000 in possessions were reported stolen.

The case has been continued until March 6 in Quincy District Court.

Campaign For Cohasset!

It's Your Turn to run for local office. As a service to the citizens of Cohasset, the League of Women Voters has compiled the following information to encourage participation in government.

Town Election Day is April 12, 1980.

What positions are up for election? One Selectman (3 years); one Assessor (3 years); two School Committee members (3 years); three members of the Cohasset Free Public Library (3 years); one member Board of Health (3 years); one member of Planning Board (5 years); one member of Planning Board to fill a vacancy (2 years).

Also one Water Commissioner (3 years); one Sewer Commissioner (1 year); one Sewer Commissioner (2 years); one Sewer Commissioner (3 years); one Recreation Commissioner (5 years); one member of Cohasset Housing Authority (5 years).

Information about the duties of these offices can be found in the Annual Report of the Town, and in the League of Woman Voters publication, Cohasset Through the Spyglass (copies in the library).

How to Run: Between now and March 7 obtain nomination papers from the Town Clerk's office, Monday through Friday between 8:30 and noon, and between 1 and 4:30 p.m. Get the required number of signatures (at least 50) to place your name on the ballot. Submit the papers to the Registrars of Voters for certification of the names of the signers on or before 5 p.m. March 10.

Your Campaign: Coffee and sherry hours are effective ways to meet the voters. Town Affairs Night, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, gives each candidate the opportunity to speak and answer questions. Over 200 residents attend, and Tuesday evening, April 1, is the date. The League also publishes a Voters Guide for distribution throughout the town, giving candidates background and views to specific questions, and is usually published in local newspapers.

Next week the League of Woman Voters will give information on "how much it will cost to run" data on recent elections, contributions and expenses, printing costs, and record keeping to comply with Massachusetts laws.

Kids On The School Committee

The England Dream

Frank England, vice chairman of the school committee, has been having a recurring two-year dream. He can't shake it. He wants to put two students on the school committee and give them all the confidential mail — let them in on negotiations — the whole bit. Everything or nothing.

The present student advisory committee does visit the committee from time to time, "But they're not familiar with what we're discussing," Frank said. He wants kids to regularly show up and participate, albeit as non-voters, but PARTICIPATE.

Quite regularly, Frank said, the school committee hears from the School Supt., school administrators, teachers and parents individually or through the communications councils. "But we hardly ever hear from kids — and they're the consumers. I feel it's time we give the consumers a break."

Twice in the past two years Frank has tried to pull a vote for putting kids on the committee; it's been voted down both times.

But now that the newly established health committee has requested that students serve on it he feels there may be new interest in having kids on the school committee.

He's even thought of a way in which it could be done. When annual elections are upon the town, CHS could hold elections for let's say a junior and a sophomore student (who would be a senior and a junior the following year) to serve on the school committee and safeguard student's rights, publically air student qualms, negotiate salaries, and basically tell it like it is from the real inside.

Frank prefers that one boy and one girl be elected, but the method and the criteria could be left up to the student body.

He knows attending school committee meetings "might be quite a chore for a kid," but he also feels it can work, and well.

Anybody out there with any thoughts — pro, con or neutral on the matter? Write School Committee Kids, the Cohasset Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025.

That's a magic number. It gets results.

Some people call that number when they're lonely and just want to talk with someone. Others call when they are out of oil, locked out of their homes or their cars, fall out of their beds, hear noises in the cellar, misplace their horses or discover someone else's.

They also call that number with more personal problems.

Reading the Cohasset Police Report weekly is usually fun because many of the problems dutifully recorded, sometimes quite humorously, are not really a problem after all. We can all enjoy a laugh at ourselves.

But a resident recently told us she didn't find the Police Report in the least humorous and felt that many citizens are bothering officers with their silly problems.

Last Sunday when we talked to a group of officers at the station they said that's not true. They said your interest, your reports of suspicious happenings — even when they turn out to be only a hamster in the storage room at CHS — are what keep them alerted to what's happening in Cohasset.

Three officers on a shift can't cover the whole town. The police department needs and wants your eyes and ears. And they unanimously, to a man, said you shouldn't stop calling.

THAT'S 383-1212

Notes & Comments

. . . Gilbert Tower said he will consider writing, but does not promise, an article about his boyhood at the turn of the century in Cohasset. He said he's really a current events man and doesn't like to write a lot of words about things which don't amount to a hill of beans (our words). However, he did say he'd think about it. We said we didn't intend to let the issue drop.

. . . The citizens' advisory committee on the sewerage treatment plant site has done a commendable job . . . and a host of town boards and committees who attended the weekend discussion of the Jones land site publically agree. The citizens' committee had a bit of a problem with the presence of the press at the out-set. It seems it thought the release of its workshop information to the public-at-large might prejudice a public hearing on the site to be held Monday, Feb. 11 at 8 p.m. at CHS. But when other town officials informed the committee that would not be the case — everyone relaxed — especially the press.

Edwin Young, chairman of the above committee, said that of course everyone "hated" the proposed new wastewater facility and not one wanted it in their neighborhood. He added:

"Maybe we should just put the damn thing on the Common and then everybody could come and hate it!"

. . . quote from The Media and Business: "The First Amendment does not guarantee a competent, fair and accurate press. The guarantee is for a free press."

...Answer to a disgruntled subscriber...we're working on all that stuff beginning this week. Don't give up on us!

Attend Town Meeting!!

To the Editor:

Of all the issues the townspeople of Cohasset have acted on at town meetings in the past, the wastewater (sewage) treatment plant issue is probably the most important in the town's history.

The final outcome of this crucial matter will significantly alter the course of community development, the growth and character of population, the rate of property taxes, and the impact on environmental health and safety for years to come. There are increasing indicators in the offing to support this proposition including state mandated requirements and penalties.

For these reasons, every responsible voter in Cohasset should endeavor to attend the upcoming town meeting.

Although many of the residents are perplexed over the conflicting proposals by the sewer committees, it is unfortunate that so many citizens are so apathetic about town affairs.

This attitude has prevailed for several years as evidenced by the extreme difficulty to muster a quorum at mos town muster a quorum at most town meetings. As a result of this phenomenon, a relatively small percentage of the voter population can effectively determine town issues and events.

This influence is strongly embraced by elected and appointed town officials, alike, and this so called public acceptance or pressure has been brought to bear regarding the selection of a site for the wastewater (sewage) treatment plant. This observation should be obvious to even the most naive or unaware citizen upon reading the recently posted town warrant.

The relative articles have been carefully selected and arranged to achieve a predetermined result by the proponents of an inland site.

It's Just The Beginning. . .

To the Editor:

We've listened and read about it for years, like our new fire station, and soon it will be a reality.

Now we're going to face more reality, replacement of fieldstone walls, granite walls, brick walls, cement caps, crumbling town water pipes and town drains, replacement of old water lines from the street into our homes, cracked walls and ceilings, etc.

Then the cost of the new school we were able to put off for approximately fifteen years and our still unbuilt fire station that will be a must in a growing town that has sewerage.

These fine points and many more too long for this article, we the taxpayers of Cohasset, can look forward to.

We've seen the tax rate climb in surrounding towns after sewerage and we've seen them looking towards business to help offset a staggering cost, yet Cohasset has been on a boarder line of anti-business for years.

Will this all change in the years to come before a new school, fire station, expanded town employement of personnel for the highway department, water department, sewerage department, school department, and oh yes, town hall? I hope so! Because this is just the beginning.

To the Editor:

Enclosed please find my entry for your Valentine's Day contest — the poem entitled, "Heart." I am seventeen years old and in the 12th grade at Cohasset High. I hope you have gotten more entries since last week.

Incidentally, I congratulate you on both the excellence and the success of the Mariner. It is just what Cohasset has needed, a local, yet not limited in scope, newspaper. Best of luck in the future.

Yours very truly,

Sir To His Face...Fuzz Behind His Back

(ED.'S NOTE: the following definition of a policeman is in an essay given to all candidates graduating from police academies around the country. Officer David Pomarico, president of the Cohasset Police Association, lent us his tattered copy to reprint in the Mariner. Fans of the Cohasset Police Report will find it hard to disagree with these thoughts):

A policeman is a composite of what all men are . . . a mingling of saint and sinner . . . dust and deity. Cold statistics wave the fan over the stinkers . . . underscore instances of dishonesty and brutality because they are news. What that really means is they are exceptional, unusual — not commonplace. Buried under the froth is the fact that less than one half of one percent of policemen misfit that uniform, and that's a better average than among clergymen.

What is a policeman made of? He, of all men, is at once the most needed and the most unwanted . . . a strangely nameless creature who is "Sir" to his face . . . and "fuzz" behind his back.

He must be such a diplomat that he can settle differences between individuals . . . so that each will think he won . . . but . . . if the policeman is neat, he's conceited. If he's careless, he's a bum. If he's pleasant, he's a flirt. If he's not, he's a grouch.

In an instant he must make decisions which require months for a lawyer. But if he hurries, he's careless. If he's deliberate, he's lazy.

He must be first to an accident . . . infallible with a diagnosis . . . he must be able to start breathing, stop bleeding, tie splints, and above all, be sure the victim goes home without a limp, or expect to be sued.

The police officer must know every gun . . . draw on the run . . . and hit where it doesn't hurt.

He must be able to whip two men his size and half his age . . . without damaging his uniform and without being brutal. If you hit him he's a coward. If he hits you, he's a bully.

A policeman must know everything and not tell. He must know where all the sin is and not partake.

The policeman must, from a single human hair, be able to describe the crime, the weapon, and the criminal . . . and tell you where the criminal is hiding. But, if he catches the criminal, he's lucky . . . if he doesn't, he's a dunce.

If he gets promoted, he has political pull. If he doesn't he's a dullard.

The policeman must chase bum leads to a dead end and stake out ten nights to tag one witness who saw it happen, but refuses to remember.

He runs files and writes reports until his eyes ache to build a case against some felon who will get dealed out by a shameless shamus or an honorable one who isn't.

A policeman must be a minister . . . a social worker . . . a diplomat . . . a tough guy . . . and a gentleman. And of course, he will have to be a genius, for he will have to feed a family on a policeman's salary.

Nothing We Can Win Will Equal What We Lose...

By John Worley
Director, Cohasset Recreation Department

By this time most of us have taken a stand, one way or another, with regard to United States' participation at the Summer Olympics in Moscow, Russia.

Arguments on both sides are valid. Many feel that politics and sports should not be intertwined, but rather, remain distinctly separate from one another. Others feel that we will be able to inflict economic crisis on the Russians if we are successful in our boycott attempts.

It is very doubtful that even a complete boycott of the games would inflict that much economic strife on Russia. On the other hand, are we really talking about "politics" when we consider a boycott? That depends on one's definition of "politics," a term which is loosely used to depict a number of situations and actions.

The most dramatic affect a boycott on the Moscow games would not manifest itself economically or politically, but rather it would serve as a form of international protest against Russian actions that, not only go against our very doctrine and way of life, but that, perhaps, jeopardize our very existence.

Displeasure can be demonstrated in a number of wavs. Yet it is quite a different story to express displeasure to Russian people because of acts taken by their government. Remember, only recently were the Russian public informed that they had troops in Afghanistan.

They were also told there had been no conflict or fighting — this was after Russia had over 1000 troops killed and wounded.

So, what do the Russian people really know? Not much! Who will tell them? Not the Kremlin!

Our possible boycott of the 1980 Moscow games should be viewed as a world-wide protest against Russia, on "principle," not politics. Our boycott of the games may or may not generate support from other countries. And it is true that it may be 'politics' that determine the ultimate decision. In effect, it may not really matter what other countries do. It does matter what the United States does.

Nothing is really 'apolitical.' Not unlike the "play" politics is the "Thing." It affects our daily lives directly and indirectly, there is no escaping politics and its ramifications. The Olympics and the concept of the Olympics is supposedly apolitical — don't kid youself.

While it remains a shame that a group of young, hard working, hard training, athletes may be the ones to sufler most by a boycott, is that not a small sacrifice to offer as compared to what it could, and might yet be?

How can we put ourselves in a position of 'guest' to a country who may be jeopardizing our very way of life and world peace. Can the Russians guarantee no acts of terrorism against our team or another country's? I doubt it. Is terrorism not to be expected at the games? Terrorism is never expected and that is why it is employed as a radical form of protest.

Nothing we can win at the 1980 Summer Olympics will equal what we will lose if we attend the games.

Locating The Ocean Outlet

To the Editor:

The solution to Cohasset's problem of disposing of its wastewater hinges upon where the wastewater will discharge into the ocean. It is important that every voter should understand that point. Therefore I will repeat "The answer to Cohasset's problem of disposing of its wastewater is dependent upon where the outlet into the ocean will be."

Up to this point it has been the general understanding that the outlet will be at Whitehead. There is a narrow beach between Little Whitehead and Big Whitehead under the concrete bridge which is over the beach. An outlet pipe could be laid on the sadn, or buried out towards Sutton Rock. But it seems almost certain that the pipe would be broken up by the violent waves. Fortunately another arrangement is possible.

On the landward side of Big Whitehead Rock there is a small area where the ocean water is more or less tranquil during a storm. There may be violent waves on the channel side of Big Whitehead and some wave action on the west side. But in between the sides there must be a place that is Fairly calm. That would be the place to terminate the outlet pipe. It would not become broken or plugged. The end of the pipe would be accessible for cleaning.

That location of the outlet would be at the end of the outflow pipe laid along beside Whitehead Road from Jacob's Meadow. That route for the outlet pipe is shown on sketch #9-10 of the Metcalf report at the library and the town hall.

Along Whitehead Road on the route of the outflow pipe there is space for the treatment plant. So there is the answer to the problem of where to build the treatment plant. The general situation will correspond to the arrangement at Scituate where the treatment plant is located close to an inlet from the ocean where the water is calm.

In a few words that described the one and only correct site for the treatment plant. All other suggested sites are impractical because they would involve mile long pipes through the center of the town to convey untreated water to the plant and to conduct treated wastewater back to Jacob's Meadow. The cost of laying those pipes would be considerable. And the cost of electricity for pumping would be an important factor. Those considerations rule out the Jones land (or "Wiggle") as a site for the plant. The further end of Whitehead Road will be the correct site.

It is therefore hoped that the sewer commissioners will instruct Metcalf and Eddy to make a survey of the further end of Whitehead Road. At one side of Whale Meadow an area of proper size for the treatment plant should be deliniated and evaluation made and preparations made for taking the required land by eminent domain if necessary.

There are two houses in the neighborhood, but the town has priority for the use of this land for an important town project. The town of Cohasset must have that land for its treatment plant. No other site will do.

In a few words there is the picture. But there is more to it than that. A study is now being made of Cohasset Harbor and it seems probable that the town will want to deepen Whale Meadow and raise the elevation of the surrounding low land. A new town road will be recommended starting from Howard Gleason Road opposite the yacht club to extend out to Whitehead.

That road will resemble Border Street which is on one side of the inner harbor. It will provide a place for a second boat launching ramp and access to a possible marina. All that can be shown on the new map of the harbor which will be prepared. If the town will be courageous there will be an opportunity for developing and improving one of Cohasset's natural resources.

Her birthday party was given by her son and daughter-in-law, A.J. and Marjorie Antoine. About 60 friends, neighbors and family gathered around to wish her a happy day.

Mrs. Antoine's late husband, Abraham Antoine, Jr., was the son of Abraham, who was one of Manuel Antoine's nine sons. Manuel Antoine, born on the Island of Pico (Portugal) in 1820, was the first permanent Portuguese settler in Cohasset (see Peter Barnicle's story in last week's Mariner on Roger Leonard's research on the history of the Portuguese in Cohasset).

Many of the guests were the volunteer drivers who take Mrs. Antoine back and forth to Boston three times a week for dialysis treatment at the Kidney Center. Also on hand were three of A.J. (Abrahan III) and Marjorie's children, Nancy, Jane, and John; Mrs. Antoine's daughter an her husband, Rita and Jim Carroll and their son, Mark; her grandson and his wife, Paul and Jeannie O'Neill and their new daughter, Meghan from Ct.; and granddaughter, Mary Frugali of Cohasset.

□The absence of sustained cold weather and snow have made hibernation difficult these past months. This pseudo-winter is not good for deep snoring and total withdrawal.

Being a bit more daring than the ground hog, I have been making a few excursions out into the community. If you wanted to pick a place to begin real life re-entry, the American Red Cross Bloodmobile is an excellent choice. Red Cross personnel and volunteers welcome you in with open arms and take good care of you while you visit □their donor center.

A word of caution for fellow hibernators: best to do some moving around before offering a pint. Your body temperature is bound to be lower than normal after so much sleeping and it must be within normal range for giving blood. (Mine just barely made the minimum reading!)

Typists, nurses, technicians and helpers are there to abide by your every wish and do all that they can to put you completely at ease.

They do frown upon "blood" stories once you get to the donating table. Volunteers also found no humor in the fact that the actual process takes place in Trueblood Hall (appropriate, don't you think?) Fears of light-headedness and anxieties are dealt with quietly so that other guests who are about to have the veinpuncture are not worried.

After the plastic container is sealed with your special, irreplacable contribution, you are escorted to the canteen for 15 minutes of relaxation and snacks and there you can tell your "blood" stories. (I refrained from mentioning that there was a picture of the Nile River, full of red blood, on the back wall of the hall . . . what coincidences!)

All in all, the whole experience of giving blood is as regenerating as the body's own process of replacing the lost pint.

□Bloodmobile co-chairmen Roella Hobbs and Jill O'Donnell report that the yesterday's drive was slow, and only yielded 72 pints. The next one will be held June 9!

Remember to come the next time you see the Red Cross out in front of the Unitarian Parish House and give the "gift of life"! You.

☐Dr. and Mrs. John I. F. Knud-Hansen of Easton, Maryland, announce the engagement of their daughter, Emilie, to Kenneth R. Coleman Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Coleman of Cohasset.

Miss Knud-Hansen is a graduate of the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, and Stephens College, Columbia, Missouri. She currently is the senior news editor at W.E.R.E. Radio in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Coleman is a graduate of Berwick Academy, Berwick, Maine, and attended Norwich University, Northfield, Vermont, and the University of Massachusetts in Boston. He currently is the sports director at W.E.R.E. Radio in Cleveland.

A fall wedding is planned.

☐Julie Caristi, Juliana Chittick and Julie Neusdorfer will participate in the South Shore Conservatory of Music's evening of music and dance program to be held Saturday, Feb. 9 at 8 p.m. at Trinity Church in Weymouth.

The three Cohasset students are the pupils of ballet instructor Deborah Edwards.

☐Governor Edward J. King recently nominated Sandra L. Hamlin of Cohasset to the position of Associate Justice of the Boston Municipal Court Department.

The nomination was submitted for the advice and consent of the Executive Council, and on the recommendation of the Judicial Nominating Commission.

Hamlin has been with the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office for the past 13 years. Since 1974, she has been an Assistant District Attorney. As Senior Trial Attorney, she is responsible for the prosecution of major felony cases. Prior to 1974, she wrote briefs for the Appellate Division of the District Attorney's Office.

Atty. Hamlin has also been an instructor of law in evening courses at Pine Manor College for two years.

A graduate of Vassar College, Hamlin, 35, earned a master's degree from the London School of Economics and Political Science in 1967 and a law degree from Suffolk University Law School in 1973.

She has been nominated to fill the position vacated by Judge A. Frank Foster, whose retirement will take effect Feb. 8, 1980. The position pays $42,500 annually.

☐Scott Barcomb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Barcomb, is on the Dean's List at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst Campus. We couldn't reach the Barcombs to discover which year of study Scott is in, or program. But we're pleased for him and them!

☐Nancy Snowdale recently graduated from a municipal 12-week management training program run by the University of Massachusetts. The aim of the program was to assist local governments in increasing productivity and services without increasing budgets.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Roger Porter and son, Jason, of Elm Street and Bassings Beach, are taking their first vacation in almost a month by spending an entire week in Nassau, Bahamas. Mr. Porter, after cleaning out several of his former friends at a local poker game recently, wants to try his luck as a steely-eyed gambler in that well known tropical Elysium. Mrs. Porter tans easily. (C.E.)

☐(Green-eyed reporter, C.E., as in parking meters, bomb shelters, Whitney Woods, etc., will get his much needed vacation soon. He will not, however, be traveling to a humid "place of perfect happiness" — that's what Elysium means, and I looked it up — rather, he will be negotiating man-made granular covered slopes in what has previously been known in New England as the ski resorts. Have a nice vacation, Chester!)

Decision As Early As Monday On Kimball's

The board of appeals may have a decision as early as Monday on Kimball's By-The-Sea Motor Inn's application to open its restaurant and lounge to the public.

Monday, the board read a letter from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEGE) which stated sewerage flow could not be increased by the motor inn without a DEQE permit. In light of the special problems the town is having agreeing on a wastewater treatment plant, DEQE said the motor inn might not receive that permit from the state.

Lieut. Charles Stockbridge said the police department does not foresee any additional traffic problems being created should the inn be opened to the public. But board member Myrna Putziger said she felt the parking lot across the street should conform to the 1968 by-laws — as the plan which the building inspector approved in 1975 showed the parking lot conforming with the by-law.

"He should have appealed for a non-conforming use at the time," Ms. Putzier said. "Kimball's has not asked us for a variance. It has asked us whether the building inspector was right or wrong in his decision to abide by the original building plan."

Ms. Putziger reminded the board of the conditions in the special building permit which stated the motel's facilities would only be open to motel guests and personal friends of the owner — and not to the general public.

Regulations call for 58 parking spaces for motel guests and 25 for the public for a total of 83. The lot on the motel grounds can hold 45 cars. If the lot across the street were used, the inn could park an additional 57 cars.

The motel parking lot conforms with the zoning by-laws. At issue is whether the parking lot across the street should have to conform with the by-laws as it was in existence before 1969, and before regulations on the size of parking spaces were in existence.

MARCH JURORS

Names of residents drawn for Civil and Criminal Court for the month of March are as follows: Kenneth Gallagher, Old Coach Road; Priscilla Long, Nichols Road; Joanne High, Diab Lane and Cornelia Brundage, Highland Court.

CONSTABLES

Barbara Elliot and Joe Hamilton have been appointed constables in the town.

GRIEVANCE

The Cohasset Police Associates have informed the selectmen it disagrees with town counsel's opinion that officers are not eligible to be paid for the day the Pope visited Massachusetts. The police union feels compensation should be computed at one fifth of a week's pay — hourly rate times eight hours for holiday pay.

Selectmen referred the matter to the personnel board and town council.

VACATION DAYS

Before Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. went on vacation last week he wrote to selectmen asking that his vacation days be reinstated at 28 vacation days from the 21 days he now receives. The chief stated in his letter he doesn't receive the same number of days as Fire Chief Charles Pipenbrink, who gets 28 days.

BID AWARDED

Mark's Service Station on South Main Street, high bidder, was awarded a DPW truck for $150.

MOTORCYCLE

Selectmen have agreed to place on the annual town meeting warrant an article for a federally-funded motorcycle for the police department.

Residents can burn brush and garden debris only (twigs, not leaves) until May 1. A permit can be obtained by calling Central Fire Station at 383-0260 on the day of the burning (no charge). Burning must be done between 10-4 p.m.

SOME SAY COHASSET'S FUTURE is down this road—get sewerage. Barbara Powers, (planning board member) and I spent hours looking over the assessor's map, counting lots. We came up with approximately 200 lots that could be developed in Phase I of the project (Hillside, Pond Street and up 3-A depending on how far up it goes." She added that Edwin Young, an engineer, in researching the same maps, came up with a total of 281 lots.

The planning board is very concerned about present and future drainage problems that sewerage will bring to the town. In many areas of town there are already drainage problems.

GROUND WATER

"Under the Wetlands Law developers have to get a special permit to build, but they can still build. Cohasset has so much wetland, so much hardpan. How do we handle ground water? Sewerage can't take care of that."

Mrs. Facey and others on the planning board know that when new building starts moving water around — it has a cumulative effect somewhere. "It immediately effects abutters and ultimately has an effect downstream."

"If there are inadequate drain pipes, the town will have to take care of them. There are a lot of pipes, small and old, in the town. You can't hook drainage into a sewer system," Mrs. Facey noted. At present, the planning board would like to find some grants to tie into.

They also desperately need some good tools (like a topographical map) in order to make some sound judgments.

Although the planning board, over the years, has been accused of being anti-development, Mrs. Facey said that's unfounded. "We want planned development."

Presently, Mrs. Facey is aware of available money from the department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to do a drainage study. She became aware of the study funds as a result of a Cohasset League of Women Voters soil study done in recent years. "Under that plan, the town would pay for any part of the HUD study it used."

SEWERAGE NEEDED

The planning board recognizes the town needs sewerage, according to Mrs. Facey. But she and other townspeople are concerned about the operating and maintenance costs which go along with sewerage. And she still feels the town could have staved off sewerage with a good water-saving program.

BANKRUPTING COSTS

"Many towns have gone bankrupt trying to operate sewerage treatment plants. I'm concerned about the one million gallon size plant — I feel there is pressure to tie in other parts of the town."

"Over the years the town has underspent, traditionally. I feel we have paid heavily for that type of philosophy. There are so many new techniques being evolved in wastewater."

A new study, which is not yet legislation, Mrs. Facey pointed out, recommends that the federal government cut back on flood insurance, not build sewerage plants on barrier beaches. "In California HUD is discouraging the building of treatment plants and is funding communal septic systems."

In any case, she feels people have a right to know what they're buying . . . and how much it will cost "Once the plant is built and the feds leave town."

What They're Saying

"I'd like to see 3-A developed. The town should expend funds to develop it. Do we need sewerage? The veteran's project is leaking into the drinking water Lilly Pond." — Teressa Sladen.

"I feel the people who use the town as a residential town can't appreciate our problems." — Businessman, name withheld by request.

"I'd like to see sewerage in the King Street area, the town's light industry area. An article was prepared to town meeting last year proposing a water line out to Winter Gardens. None of the businesses wanted to pay betterment charges. Having businesses pay is not a normal procedure. I think voters were afraid others would want water." — Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark.

"Sewerage really isn't a problem for me. My big problem is water. I can't get water. There's no fire protection. The nearest hydrant is over 3,300 feet down the road. It's a shame — all that water in the town reservoir and we can't get it. Some people said to me: 'You didn't have water when you first opened up.' I'm considered one of the largest taxpayers in town and I have no services." — Peter Breen, Cohasset Winter Gardens.

"I'm not entirely convinced sewerage would bring in a lot more revenue to the town. There are 12 lots undeveloped on 3-A . . . 16 lots if it is subdivided into 10,000 sq. ft. building lots. With sewerage, you know full-well land will be developed." — Pat Facey, Planning Board Chairman.

Singers To Make Rare South Shore Appearance

The Kuumba Singers, a performing group of talented Harvard and Radcliffe College students who present the essence of the black cultural experience through song, poetry and dance, will make a rare South Shore appearance in a benefit concert at Cohasset High School on Friday evening, March 7, at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Third World Society of the High School.

The concert by the 53-member group will feature a program containing both gospel songs and renditions of African music and will be its only high school appearance this season.

Tickets are $2.50 and will be avilable through representatives at each of the schools and members of the town's Metco host families.

The Third World Society of the High School is made up of Metco students at the school, and proceeds of the concert will go to fund scholarships for the seven Metco seniors who will be graduating from Cohasset High this year and going on to further education.

"We are very fortunate that the Kuumba singers have been willing to come to Cohasset for us," India Turner, president of the sponsoring Third World Society, stated in announcing plans for the concert. "We know they will provide a memorable evening of entertainment as they have for scores of audiences in many states over the past several years.

The local student group is being assisted in arrangements for the concert by Metco host families in Cohasset and representatives of the four Village churches. A similar cooperative effort arranged a sell-out presentation of the "Black Nativity" by the National Center for Afro-American artists at St. Anthony's church in December, 1978.

The Kuumba Singers were organized in November, 1970 by a group of black undergraduates at Harvard who were acutely aware of a cultural and spiritual void in their college environment.

In an effort to provide a source of unity, strength, joy and inspiration this student-organized coordinated choir was created. They immediately assumed a unique position in Harvard's campus and in the Boston-Cambridge community.

The word "kuumba" is Swahili and, loosely translated means creativity. Since the time of their organization they have performed throughout the Greater Boston area and have often made tours, performing in churches, schools and auditoriums in a number of states, including Michigan, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, North Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Maryland, New York and Connecticut.

In March of last year they culminated nearly a decade of development by making their first recording, I'm Gonna Sing, a record that will be available at the Cohasset concert.

The Cohasset school system was among the first to participate in the Metco program which brings inner city students into suburban schools. Cohasset joined the program in 1968 and currently has 48 Metco students in the schools. Seventy local families serve as host and back-up families to the Metco students, paralleling an organization of Metco parents in the city. Thelma Burns is coordinator of the Metco program in Cohasset.

Officers of the Third World Society, in addition to Miss Turner, are Yvonne Porter, vice president; Paula Bouknight, treasurer; Sharon Wong, secretary; and Marie Miller, student adviser.

OH MY GOSH—it looks like she's going to call on me! Amanda Douglas, 3, at the Cohasset Community Center.

Doherty Announces For State Rep.

Richard S. Doherty has announced his candidacy for State Representative from the Third Plymouth District. This district is comprised of the three towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

Mr. Doherty emphasized the necessity for a government that is more responsive to the needs of the people. In a statement he said, "We can no longer afford to tolerate elected officials that are not sensitive to the problems of their electorate. A State Representative has an obligation to continuously seek the views and opinions of the people that elect him. If a State Representative is not aware of the feelings of his contituents it is impossible to adequately represent them in the State Legislature."

Richard Doherty

Mr. Doherty, who is very active in the community, is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the Hingham Community Center and an advisor to its Junior Board of Directors. In the past he was vice chairman for the council for children as well as the founder and chairman of its Child Abuse and Neglect Committee.

He is a decorated veteran of three years active army duty, including one year in Vietnam where he received the Bronze Star and Army Commendation Medal. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Boston State College where he has also done graduate work in Political Science.

Campaign manager, Rob Thornton, said Doherty is planning a very vigorous campaign and hopes that every concerned voter in the district will have an opportunity to meet the candidate in the months ahead.

Regardless, Cohasset's voters must individually decide whether or not to disturb the official preservation of a natural resource, to dissolve the official preservation of vital land for future school purposes, or to disrupt the intrinsic beauty and valuable interets in coastal properties.

Acknowledging certain merit in the opinions or recommendations of technically unqualified advisors on this project, it is essential that professional engineering conclusions be realistically presented and thoroughly evaluated before officially voting on any of the pertinent articles.

Fundamentally, the site selection involves a basic understanding of the local topography, knowledge of the natural environment, and good common sense. The personal desires and interests of a few should not be permitted to jeopardize the best interests of the taxpayers. For years the wastewater treatment plant has been and will continue to be a taxing issue for the natives of Cohasset and, therefore, is deserving of resolve by the entire voter community.

It is imperative that every registered voter actively particiapte at town meeting on Thursday, Feb. 14, 1980.

Curtain Goes Up On 60th Year With Brodie

The performance of "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" on Wednesday, Feb. 13 at the Cohasset Town Hall will be a benefit for the preservation of the Town Hall stage. Both the Dramatic Club and tne Town Hall stage have quite a history. The Dramatic Club is in its 59th year of continuous production of three plays a year. Cohasset Town Hall was built in 1957, and many famous actors have appeared on its stage.

Alexander Dean, who was the head of the Graduate School of Drama at Yale University, used to spend his summers in Cohasset, and during the years 1933-1939 he ran a group called the South Shore Players, who used the Town Hall for their rehearsals and performances.

During this seven year period, many theatrical luminaries appeared on the stage, including Sam Jaffe, Cecilia Loftus, Donald Brian, Josephine Hull, Blanche Yurka, Lorette Taylor, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Humphrey Bogart, Edith Barrett, Lawrence Barrett, and Jane Bancroft. Alexander Dean was also responsible for persuading Sinclair Lewis to make his stage debut in the dramatization of his novel "It Can't Happen Here."

Dean was also able to persuade his friend Thornton Wilder to play the part of the Stage Manager in his famous play "Our Town."

In 1949, a group was formed called the South Shore Playhouse Associates (which subsequently became the South Shore Music Circus) and they also benefitted from being able to use the Town Hall stage. Indeed, it is a stage with a history.

So the news that the Cohasset Town Hall's days may be numbered has come as a great shock to those who benefit from it. Not only does the Dramatic Club have the privilege of using it for their three productions a year, but the Recreation Department offers many exciting activities in the Town Hall, including theatre for young people. What a loss it would be to the Town of Cohasset if this vital resource were to be removed in the name of progress.

(ED. NOTE: As far as we know, current plans are to keep the stage — albeit the auditorium area itself will be reduced to experimental size).

There will be three performances of "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" in the Cohasset Town Hall this February. In addition to the benefit performance on Wednesday, the 13th, there will be performances on Friday, Feb. 15, and Saturday, Feb. 16. The curtain goes up on this fascinating drama at 8 p.m. each evening and tickets are $3 each to all performances.

Tickets will be available for audience sale at Cookworks, Cohasset Village.

O' Toole Promises To Revitalize Republican Party

Mrs. Austin (Nancy) O'Toole, of Cohasset, since announcing her candidacy for Republican State Committee Woman of the Norfolk/Plymouth District has put her campaign in full swing.

Coffees, rallies and receptions have been or are being scheduled in Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth. A "Community Reception" has been scheduled in Cohasset for Sunday, Feb. 10 from 3-5 p.m., at St. Stephen's Roger Walton Hall.

O'Toole feels the Republican Party, because of lack of candidates on the ballot in recent years, has lost prestige and respect.

In addition, she said Republican candidates on the ballot have lost because of splits in the party and by lack of good election practices.

O'Toole's principal purpose in seeking the position of State Committee Woman is to revitalize the party from the grassroots in her district.

Nancy O'Toole

She will make every effort to search out and enlist candidates for every Town, County, State and Federal elective office on the Republican ticket. She will also give them her support in organizing their campaign and in raising campaign funds.

O'Toole's professional experience in marketing, public relations and production for many business firms, and her wide experience in working on campaigns with candidates at both the local and state level make her well qualified to broaden the over-all base of the Republican Party.

O'Toole asks for your support on election day, Tuesday, March 4.

Logan Calls For Voter Turn-out

Polly Logan, Republican State Committeewoman, of Hingham (formerly of Cohasset) announced that one out of four people eligible to vote, will not be able to exercise this right if they do not register at their local town hall before Feb. 5.

"Problems such as inflation, energy and the rising cost of living effect us all," said Logan, "making it all the more critical for people to make sure they are registered and to get out and vote."

Logan said there are nine Republicans and three Democrats campaigning for the presidency, offering a great variety of personalities and views from which to choose.

She added that statewide figures show that less than three people in 10 exercise their right to vote in presidential primaries and just over half of the eligible voters turn out for the general elections in November.

Logan is especially concerned with the 18-20 year old vote noting that only 38 per cent of this age group voted in the 1976 general election. High school students may have a registration session at their school if 25 unregistered, voting age students sign a request addressed to their principal who must then forward this petition to the local town or city registrar.

(ED. NOTE: A registration was recently held at CHS).

Should anyone have any questions or need transportation, please call Polly Logan or Sam Spencer, members of the GOP State Committee at 749-0300 or 227-2478.

Hull Woman Announces

Jean Robinson, who calls herself an activist Republican, announced recently she is a candidate for Republican State Committeewoman from the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

At a series of meetings throughout the district from Weymouth to Duxbury, Mrs. Robinson has pointed out that the Republican Party can be revitalized by a series of events such as the presidential primary where there is a good variety of candidates.

"When there is activity, there is interest. You will see a new lifeblood of Republicanism surge through the veins of the Republican Party if there is interest, enthusiasm and activity," said Mrs. Robinson.

Robinson says she has that enthusiasm. She has campaigned for many Republican candidates for office and has helped to increase enrollment. She said, "I feel that I can accomplish more from a position within and this is why I am running for Republican State Committeewoman."

The Backpack

By Lois Martin

Young people have a subtle new means of intimidating their parents. They're holding these things over our heads, so to speak, implying they might leave home at any time.

It's called a backpack. During a trip to Boston last week (wish I'd learn to say "Intown"), I saw herds of kids wearing, lugging, toting backpacks. I don't know where they were all going but of course they should have been home, which I assumed they left because they had one of those backpacks.

They are attractive, I must say, if one hankers for that sort of thing. They come in all manner of colors, sizes, straps. In the past few years I've become accustomed to seeing mothers who lug babies backpacked or front 'slung' in a sling. I've wondered if those children only recognized the mother by the back of her head or from beneath her chin.

PATCHES

Nonetheless, the affinity our children have established for backpacks poses an implied threat. By mid teens they have one or want one. And a request or acquisition of a backpack is a notice of an intent to leave home. Presence of that bag on a boy's bedroom floor says . . . "I got other places I could go in a flash . . . "I'll be staying here tonight but I won't make any long range commitments."

Some say those backpacks are used for practical means of lugging supplies, like books. My foot. I suspect each backpack is stashed with a toothbrush, the family comb and one pair of matched white socks.

Youngsters who own stereos aren't likely to leave home. Stereos are awkward to carry, even in a backpack. And parents have a hold over their children if they hold onto those tape decks.

And we've learned to keep their bank accounts with us as trustee, at least through the child's 28th year. That'll keep 'em coming back. Even allowing a youth his own car keys doesn't mean he'll escape from home. In most cases his key chain offers access to an old car that uses three gallons of gas to get to the nearest movie. The threat would only arrive in the matter of car keys if he had a key to a car that got good mileage.

No, it's the backpack alone that sets me on edge. There are several around my house, letting me know they'll be 'outta here' at any moment. One false move on my part and that thing'll be packed and strapped on.

Thing is, I think maybe I'd like one, navy blue and camel-trimmed, perhaps. Now that I've come to recognize the power of the backpack, I wonder if mothers shouldn't start buying them. Personally, I'd leave mine right on the kitchen floor. If smartmouths looked askance at supper again and asked what it was, I could start packing. They'd be nervous about my leaving before the dishes were done. That would be no small measure of clout.

Or maybe I'd toss it casually down by the washer and dryer. That could worry them there and they'd hasten to get the wash going to please and appease me. But they don't go near those appliances.

The truth is they probably know me too well. They wouldn't be intimidated by my backpack, even if it were in a nice Harris tweed country style. They are perfectly secure in the knowledge that I wouldn't go anywhere without my electric blanket, typewriter and knitting needles.

Probably the wisest move on my part would be to fill their backpacks with dirty clothes when they're not looking. They'd put it by the washer and leave it there till the clothes got clean . . . and that could be a long spell if the person in charge of the wash has anything to say about it.

Hoopsters Hang On; Pucksters Persevere; Grapplers Get a Grip

By Rob Tis

The Cohasset Skippers basketball team rebounded from three tough losses with two big wins this week, over East Bridgewater and Norfolk Agricultural.

But the win over the Vikings, 62-57, was not as close as the score might indicate.

Cohasset took an 18-13 lead at the end of the first quarter and never fell behind. Bill Kurtz led the Skippers with 15 points, and Mark Goff added 14, including eight clutch free throws in a row down the stretch to ice the win for the Skippers, who upped their record to 10-5.

Cohasset jumped out to an early lead in the 65-50 non-league win over the Aggies, and at the end of the first quarter, the Skippers led by seven points. But by the halftime, the Aggies gnawed the lead to one point.

Skipper coach Hogan put Jim McCarthy on Aggie Tom Marble, who had scored 14 points in the first half. McCarthy's shirtsleeve defense held Marble to two points in the second half, while freeing Skipper Bill Taylor to finish with a game high 23. Goff added 17.

The Skippers must win three of their last four games to get a state tournament bid.

HOCKEY

Danny Bowen and Joe McCullough scored two each and Rich Young and Doug Dillion added one each to lead in a battle of offense with the Skippers over Duxbury, 6-4, Wednesday night, but tied Dom Savio at 2-2 in a battle of defense Saturday.

Kudos to Dom Campedelli, Matt Brown and John Ayer for police work on the ice against the Salesians.

WRESTLING

Who says Mondays are always lousy?

Well, for the Skipper wrestling team, Monday was better than all last week. It was their first win against two losses, to Marshfield and Plymouth-Carver.

Monday's win against Hingham, 39-33, was highlighted by the pins of Torin Sweeny, Jack Hernan, Jack MacLean and rookie J.T. Price.

But last Thursday, the Skippers were suffering from an old fate — they couldn't keep their shoulders off the mat. Sweeny, MacLean and Mike Ellis posted wins, along with pins by Hernan, David Duncombe and Todd Langford, but those 28 points couldn't add up to the 36 posted by the Rams, new math or no.

The Skippers should have stayed in bed Saturday, as they were soundly thrashed by Plymouth-Carver, 41-12. The only high point the Skippers had was a last second 12-11 win by Sweeny.

Introducing ... Eh,

The Mariner is pleased to introduce the newest addition to its staff, sports writer Eddie Finocchiaro.

Finocchiaro, 23, a native of Braintree, comes to us from the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel, the city's morning daily newspaper. There, he kept close records of and reported on high school sports, amateur boxing, and anything else that nobody wanted to do.

A graduate of Marquette University, he worked on the school newspaper, the Tribune, for four years, covering everything from basketball, football and rugby t inner-tube water polo and beer chugging contests. His expertise in the latter comes from attending school in the city of the amber nectar.

A sportsman himself, he played hockey and soccer at B.C. High in Dorchester, and hockey and rugby in college. Once during a rugby game, he was knocked out cold, woke up in the hospital and vowed never to indulge in such trivial inanities again as long as he lived. And that was one of the conditions under which he was hired.

We're happy to have him with us, but we have to make him earn his pay. Please, if you would like to report your sporting event, or even just talk about sports, call him at 545-3950.

He'll be ready and waiting to take your call.

And now for the fun month of February — fun if you're basking in the Florida sun or cruising to faraway places. But for those of us left behind, we can always console ourselves by having a party and here is Kenna Liatsos' all-time favorite company dish called

1 pint sour cream

Here in the frozen North we're "snowed under" with a busy winter calendar which includes Lincoln's birthday on the 12th, Valentine's Day, the 14th and the traditional Washington's Birthday on the 22nd. Stock the shelves with peanut butter, for school vacation week starts the 18th. The cookie jar will need replenishing often and Laurie Carroll has a marvelous recipe which at first glance seems pretty expensive with peanuts, peanut butter and chocolate bits costing at least $3, but they're delicious and you should end up with 108 cookies which I figure at 3 cents apiece. Well, you can always ration them.

PEANUT CRUNCHIES

1¼ c. brown sugar
1 c. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 lb. soft butter
3/4 c. chunky peanut butter
2 eggs
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1 6 oz. pkg. Nestle's chocolate bits
1 c. salted peanuts
1 c. flour

Mix sugars, salt, butter and peanut butter together. Beat in eggs till light and fluffy. Sift together flour and soda and gradually blend into sugar mixture. Stir in chocolate bits and peanuts. Drop by tsp. 2" apart. Bake 9 min. Yields 9 doz. cookies.

It's been more than seven years now since "From the Kitchen" was launched and I'm sure that by now you're thoroughly convinced I adore mussels. Every so often the subject comes up and someone gives me a recipe and I again point out that they're a delicacy in Europe, but free for the taking in our area. You don't have to dig them as you do clams, you don't need a license and you can harvest them year-round. Actually, I don't care for mussels at all, but I think Bessie Davis' casserole might just change my mind. Mrs. Davis is retired from her position in the Marshfield school cafeterias and whenever it's low tide and she fancies some mussels she heads for the marshes to bring home her evening meal. This is her variation of a casserole recipe she found in Sarah Hurlburt's book on Mussel Cookery. Scrub mussels and steam until they open, not too long, or it makes them tough. In a buttered quart-size casserole put layers of seasoned crumbs and mushrooms and mussels as follows:

1/2 lb. mushrooms
1 T minced onion
Dash of Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
1 can of mushroom soup and 1 can of milk
Season with chopped parsley

Pour soup, milk and enough broth from the mussels to make the layered casserole moist, over other ingredients. Top with crumbs, butter and paprika. Bake in 375 degree oven until brown, uncovered, approx. 30 min.

Limited Disclosure Requirements

Early this month the state ethics commission submitted a bill which would establish disclosure requirements for officials and employees of cities, towns and special districts of the commonwealth.

The commission developed its proposal after holding six public hearings across the state and soliciting written comments from over 500 local officials and employees and meeting with over 30 groups of local officials.

Officials covered would be the elected chief executives of each city and town and the members of the municipal legislative bodies (except town meeting members), school committees members, the clerk, treasurer-collector and town or corporation counsel.

Also, the executive or administrative heads, including members of boards or commissions of municipal bodies which exercise primary executive authority for general purpose administration, planning, development and land use, public safety, education, inspection and licensing, public works and assessments. Also, employees who meet the salary level of $21,762.

It was recommended that the following information should be disclosed for the reporting official and spouse:

—A description of business associations and interests but not the amount of income derived from or the share and type of equity in the business.

—Gifts, honoraria and reimbursements of more then $100 from sources which do business with or have matters pending before the municipal body which employs the reporting person or over which he or she exercises legislative or administrative control.

—A description of interests in real property other than primary residence, located within or in a municipality contiguous to the city, town or special district which employs the municipal official.

—Limited creditor information restricted to creditors located within or doing business with the town or regional district.

The bill recommends that the municipal clerk should play the major role in the administering of the disclosure requirements, while the state ethics commission would be responsible for issuing rules and regulations and advising municipal officials.

Momentum For Jones Site Growing

Selectmen still feel the logical site for a wastewater treatment plant is Whale Meadow . . . but they have agreed to support the citizens' advisory committee's choice of the Jones land conservation site at the special town meeting which will convene at 7:30 p.m. at CHS on Valentine's Day.

The planning board has also joined the growing group of town officials supporting the Jones site, and it is expected sewer commissioners will recommend it as their first choice on the floor of town meeting.

According to Metcalf & Eddy (M & E) Consultants, no particular site (Whale Meadow, school facilities land or the Paul Jones conservation land) shows a clear economic advantage over another.

While the town has no topographical map from which to make a good cost estimate of any of the sites, M & E Consultants feel costs will not vary greatly from one site to the next.

Cost-wise, the Jones site falls just between Whale Meadow and the school facilities land with capital outlay and operating and maintenance costs estimated at $6.3M.

The Jones land has the added attraction of being extremely isolated from residents with a large area of wetlands surrounding it.

M & E Consultants upgrading the present plant would cost the town a total of $1.4M with no federal or state reimbursement.

Upgrading the present Jacob's Meadow Plant (with septage) would cost the town $3.5M — again with no federal or state reimbursement.

A new 9.4 MGD plant would cost the town $2.5M with the government absorbing $6.9M. And a new 0.5 MGS plant which would sewer phase 1 and 3-A would cost the town $3.8M with the government absorbing $7.8M.

A new 1.01 MGD plant would cost the town $3.9M with the government's share being $8.8M and would serve phase 1 in the town and have the capacity of serving other areas over the next 20 years.

Kornet & Ainslie Announce

April 12 seems a long time away, but a few individuals have or are about to take nomination papers out for town offices.

Diana Kornet of Nichols Road has already taken out papers for a three-year term on the school committee. Last year she waged a successful campaign for a one-year unexpired term on that committee.

Selectman Henry Ainslie of Reservoir Road told Arthur Clark, chairman of the board of selectmen, that he will be taking nomination papers out this week for a third term on the board of selectmen.

John Langmaid, III of Beechwood Street, chairman of the school committee, has not yet decided whether he will run for a second term.

Hoodlumism Poses Threat To Cohasset-Hull Rivalry

By Eddie Finocchiaro

Many questions remain after the senseless bus-stoning incident in Hull that sent five Cohasset cheerleaders to the hospital. But one, especially, is a sticky one.

Will this rivalry continue to be?

"I don't like the word 'rivalry,' " said Hull High School Principal Thomas Ballerino. "It should be called 'athletic competition.' We've always had a healthy athletic relationship, partly because it's very difficult to separate athletics from the far wider base of communications between schools. And this is unfortunate. It gives the impression we don't have a good relationship."

Nine teens have been arrested and charged with assault and battery in the incident, which happened as the Cohasset bus was leaving Hull after having lost their basketball game.

When asked about the liquidation ofthe rivalry, Ballerino paused.

"Sure, that'll be one of the alternatives," said Ballerino, "in view of the fact that it's already been interjected into the conversation. But I feel our relationship can continue. I don't think we should end our athletic relationship, and if we do, we won't do it permanently."

45 Years With The Cohasset Dramatic Club

By Jennifer Grisdale

Paul Blackmur loves the theater.

Oh, he'll say he was "hornswaggled" into joining the Cohasset Dramatic Club back in 1935, but it is plain to see he has never regretted it. "Ralph Manard was the dramatic club then," Blackmur explains. "He cast and directed the plays. He was a good director."

Blackmur had just moved to town the winter of 1935 when Manard was looking for someone to play the part of a "cranky old farmer" in one of his productions. He bumped into Blackmur's brother, who suggested Paul for the part.

"I've done amateur acting all my life," Blackmur said. "I acted this part in a wheelchair. It was fun practicing it!" he recalls.

He first started acting in plays at Quincy High School. While attending Harvard, he became a member of the PIETA Club, an organization similar to the Hasty Pudding. Like Hasty Pudding, the plays — all musical comedies — were all male productions.

Blackmur did a lot of acting as well as directing for the dramatic club. "I directed about 25 plays. The last one was 'Never Too Late.' I thought I'd retired 10 years ago, but now they want me to direct 'Sister Eileen,' the dramatic club's spring production.

Negative Negative Negative Negative!

The Board of Appeals signed their decision denying a request by Kimball's-By-The-Sea Motor Inn to open its restaurant and lounge to the public at their Monday night meeting.

It also voted to write "negative decisions" on the Salt Winds Development Corp. and Melrose Savings Bank applications.

David Hegarty, attorney for the inn had argued that the inn's facilities could be open to the public if adequate parking were available. If the parking lot across the street could be considered exempt from the present zoning bylaws, it could be designed to hold 57 cars, rather than the 33 spaces it now contains.

These 33 parking spaces were part of the original building plan for the motel. Board member Myrna Putziger said that Carzis should have appealed non-conforming use of the lot at the time the building plan was first outlined. By not doing so, she said, he abandoned the old use.

The Salt Winds application called for three houses to be built at 695 Jerusalem Road. The board decided to deny their request because the property in question is subject to flooding and tidal action.

The Melrose Savings Bank application called for a septic system at 551 Jerusalem Road. The board cited possible flooding and sanitary problems as reasons for denying the application.

The board voted to meet March 3 at 8 pm. to sign these decisions.

Cohasset's Week ... Board Of Health Informational Meeting

HOORAY!

. . . The above headline is just how State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray put it when she called us Monday night. Hooray, hooray about what, we asked?

"A bill allowing Richard Sargent to be reimbursed for his snowmobile during the 1978 Great Disaster is due to be signed by the governor this week," Mary Jeanette said.

Town meeting approved the reimbursement last year . . . in the interim it got lost by the state for awhile . . . but Mary Jeanette persevered and finally got it to the governor's desk. Hooray!

PAUL PRATT

Maybe nobody knew it, but Paul Pratt Memorial Library really isn't known by that name in legal circles. Accordingly, the library board of trustees have introduced an article to annual town meeting requesting that the name be legally changed to the same.

PROPOSED BILLS

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray has proposed a bill which would allow towns without a full-time wiring inspector to maintain a part-time wiring inspector. Home rule provisions are provided within the bill.

RULES & REGULATIONS

The board of health will hold an informational meeting Tuesday, Feb. 26 at 8:30 p.m. prior to updating its rules and regulations concerning subsurface sewage in the town.

The meeting will be held at the health board's office on 43 Elm Street, upstairs in Rotary Hall.

Persons unable to attend should send their ideas in writing to the board by Friday, Feb. 22.

PAY RAISE REPEAL

Over 73,873 certified signatures were collected and submitted to the Secretary of State to repeal the legislative pay raise.

UNION ATTEMPT

According to sources, "The clerks have been scared off," but town hall employees and others are still considering joining a union.

While the Mariner has no official sources, it is led to believe from documents that employees would like:

—7 per cent of living increases for all non-union town employees.

—4 weeks paid vacation for ten or more continuous years of service.

—3 personal days off per year for (full-time) employees.

—Observation of Saturday holidays on previous Fridays.

LWV Campaigning Tools!!

Last week the League of Women Voters gave information on how to run for local office, what positions are up for election, and tips on campaigning. Town election day is April 12, and nomination papers are available at the Town Clerk's office until March 7.

How much will it cost? Here are some estimates for campaign tools:

Postal costs: 15 cents per letter, 10 cents per postcard. There are approximately 2500 families in Cohasset.

Printing costs: approximate cost based on 2000 items: $28 for letters (8½ x 11½ pretyped), $48 for #10 envelopes, $25 for postcards without pictures.

Paid political advertising: Cohasset Mariner: $2.50 per column inch; Patriot Ledger, south edition: $4.27 per column inch for one day; South Shore Mirror: $4.25 per column inch, one issue.

CONTRIBUTIONS & EXPENSES: The law requires that campaign expenses and contributions be reported by candidates seeking election at every level of government.

The town clerk can advise local candidates of local requirements and reporting dates, and give the required forms to be filed from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Office of Director of Campaign and Political Finance. All amounts of money or other things of value received from all sources, and all expenditures and disbursements must be reported, and detailed records kept by the candidate and all political committees.

Massachusetts law requires that all candidates for public office keep records of the names and addresses of all contributors, regardless of amount, and retain these records until the end of the term of office the candidate is seeking. There is a regular schedule of reporting dates which must be adhered to by the candidates. The best rule is RECORD EVERYTHING.

Editorial

Welcome Lamplight!

This week we begin what we hope will be a long and loving and satisfactory association with the Cohasset Lamplight high school newspaper.

It is somehow appropriate we begin this mutual endeavor on Valentine's Day.

The Cohasset Lamplight page will appear biweekly in this newspaper on page . It will be written, produced and be in every way a CHS page. And Lamplight newspaper advisors will be its only editorial board. We may offer a suggestion or two — but only if we're invited.

In reality, students were always welcome on the pages of the Mariner. The commentaries offered by Philip Trask and Mike Ellis this week could have easily run on our editorial page. But without the Lamplight page vehicle, we may have never heard from them.

It's going to be fun. We look forward to it!

Notes & Quotes

. . . We attended one of those candidate coffees a week ago and were told by one candidate for public office he was running because the encumbent had never asked him for his opinion about anything . . . we asked if he had ever offered his opinion.

CORRECTION: Patricia Facey, planning board chairman, did not say HUD funds were available for a drainage study in the town. She said HUD funds were available but dried up sometime during the Viet Nam War. We're sorry we got it wrong the first time, but we're glad she called pronto! This is a plea for other of you to PLEASE call when we're wrong. When we're not told about our mistakes we sometimes end up reprinting them for months as facts in other stories!

Free Passes To Boston's Museum Of Fine Arts

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library made nearly 400 loans in 1979 of free passes to the Museum of Fine Arts, the New England Aquarium, and the Museum of Science. The passes are gifts from the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Any adult resident of Cohasset may reserve one of these passes for the day of choice, Sunday through Saturday. Each pass admits a family group.

Many requests have been made by library users for this pass. Anyone who wishes to encourage the Library Trustees and the Friends of the Library to add this pass may call the library at 383-1348 and leave a message.

Anyone who wishes to contribute to the Friends to support their many gifts and services to library users, may pick up a membership form at the library, or make a donation to Friends of the Cohasset Library, Inc.

Gilbert Changed His Mind

Letters

To the Editor:

The writer has been opposing the selection of the Jones land as a site for the treatment plant. Now my mind has changed. I see the situation in a different way. It is very simple to explain and I believe everyone will see it quickly.

No one has any love for a treatment plant like what we have in Jacob's Meadow. I think everyone will be glad to have it placed in a corner of the town where it will be out of the way and distant from all houses.

A second point is in the neighborhood of Whitehead Rd. there are a number of houses and the people are objecting to the idea of a sewage treatment plant at Whitehead Rd. In most ways that would be the correct site for it, but there is strong opposition from abutters. Their opposition may not be valid but they are unhappy about it so that the town should not want to hurt them.

The cost to the town for laying a pipe from Jacob's Meadow through the town to the Jones land will be considerable and there will be another appreciable cost for laying another pipe back from the treatment plant to Jacob's Meadow which is the point of distribution. There will also be an appreciable cost for electricity for pumping.

If there were time the routes to be taken by those pipes should be planned and the costs estimated. However, the town is probably not in the mood to give much consideration to the matter of cost. The important thing is to determine the site without delay. That is the way I see it now and I think that every voter at town meeting will follow that simple line of thought and will approve the selection of the Jones land.

A treatment plant on that site will not annoy anyone and the added cost will be forgotten. The sewer commissioners are now urged to instruct Metcalf and Eddy to go ahead with arrangements for acquiring the land by the town, having a land survey made, obtaining necessary easements and having a public hearing. The contract with the engineers can then be made to cover the work of planning the sewer pipes and that work can go ahead.

We are hoping that the special town meeting on February 14 will settle the matter of site.

The citizen's committee not only recommended the Jones land but it also recommended an outflow pipe from the Jones land through Red Gate Lane to Pleasant Beach, where an outlet pipe is proposed near the Sherbrooke house. In a storm that is a very rough place. It is the writer's opinion an outlet pipe into the ocean at that point would surely be broken up by pounding waves. That proposed outlet should be reconsidered. It is believed that an outlet in the shelter of Big Whitehead would be the only practical place. It would be accessible to the pipe end and it could be cleaned when plugged with sand.

Let Us Pray

By Chet Ellis

AMEN! Hallelujah! they finally got prayer where it belongs — out of Sunday school and into K through 12 — and just in time, I think.

The Massachusetts Legislature, in its infinite wisdom, apparently found that a supplication supplement was needed to offset the decrease in humility in the public schools. How else, it reasoned, could one deal with playful mischief in the elementary school, snotty backtalk in the middle school, and steely-eyed arrogance in the high school. More high quality humility was definitely required.

After all, the Moslem prays five times day, flat on the ground, and we all know what a humble fellow he is, just ask your neighborhood hostage.

All seriousness aside, the legislature has come up with an idea which might be used to good advantage in other situations.

For example, if it were required to have a short period of prayer at the beginning of every Cohasset School Committee meeting, a smoother agenda might be the result.

The chairman could ask for a volunteer committee member to lead the prayer. Anyone with a specific axe to grind, a budget request, or cut, which they might have a tough time getting through the regular hazardous discussion period would have a chance to get an edge on their associates by appealing to a high authority.

Any member who felt the prayer was out of line could, of course, leave the room. Then again, that might result in a lack of quorum.

Another possible advantage to a prayerful reconnection of church and state lies in the area of law enforcement. For instance, after an arrest is made, in addition to reading the arrestee his (or her) rights, the arrestor would offer to lead the group in prayer.

Again, anyone who felt that prayer was not in her (or his) best interests, could leave, which the arrestee would no doubt take advantage of, thereby sparing the State the expense of feeding and clothing another social ingrate.

There are, of course, some people who question the wisdom of bringing prayer back into the civic arena. Being a fair minded journalist, and desiring to give this group of antiquated abstracts its day in court, I interviewed one and found that their concern centers around the precedent created by choice.

Apparently, last Sunday in church, after the minister announced the beginning of the morning service with "Let us pray," two thirds of the school age congregation got up and left.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!

He Won't Do It!!

Our photographer, who is an extremely talented nice person, is not interested in making prints of pictures which have run in the Mariner. He said he will not even do it for lots of money.

He said he doesn't have the time (we suspect he throws his negatives into one, huge messy pile and can't even find them).

When we told the above sob story to several callers looking for pictures last week they said that's a pretty messy way to run a newspaper. But it's not, really. We save the pictures we know we might need for future publications.

The rest we give to you at the Cohasset News Co. for the minimal fee of 25 cents. First come-first served.

The problem is — by the time we get the pictures back from the pressmen we are well into a whole new Mariner newspaper. If we all stopped to take picture orders, and Greg Derr stopped to make prints, the publisher would undoubtedly fire him.

One subscriber said Greg Derr should hire an assistant print-maker.

Probably.

The Great School Valentine Contest

To Poets & Story-Tellers:

It's over. Your Valentine entries were mind-boggling. We loved our task. Over 80 entries were received in the Mariner Valentine & Story Contest.

If you weren't a winner — don't be sad. Perhaps you'll do better in our next contest.

April 6 is Easter — that's a couple of snowstorms and a whole lot of oil tanks away. We're going to be needing Easter bunnies for that issue . . . black and white only (felt-tip or India ink).

We will be offering cash prizes this time. Details will be announced in the Mar. 6 Mariner. DON'T SEND ANY BUNNIES TO US UNTIL YOU SEE THE ANNOUNCEMENT. We wouldn't want to lose them. But nobody's stopping you from practicing your bunnies right now.

In fact, if you're home with the flu — it might be a good way to wile away some hours.

Love,
Valentine/Bunny Judges

CLASS PARTICIPATION PRIZES

A box of hard candies were awarded to Mrs. Fink's First Grade class and Mrs. Price's Second Grade class because everybody in the class sent in Valentines. The judges hadn't originally planned to give these prizes, but they were so impressed with the quantity and quality of the poems that they did. A few poems from both classes are printed here.

DEER HILL - FIRST PRIZE

Clementine's Valentine
By Caitlin Staunton, 5th Grade

There once was a careless girl called Clementine
Who received a mysterious Valentine
She was so happy that she drank turpentine
And promptly collapsed flat out on her spine
She was rushed to the hospital just in time
Where she met her secret love, Dr. Pine,
As he examined her throat, he said, "Love of mine"
Poor dear, she had to answer, in pantomine
He wrote a prescription with a squiggly line
Which they read together with their arms entwined
It said "When excited, dearest please, stick to wine"
This happened in the year 1979
And today they have a child named "Porky-Pine."
P.S. This is a humorous Love story!

By Beth Perry, 6th Grade

Valentine's Day
So many people, they say
"What is it for?"

Spending a dime
For a Valentine's rhyme,
Oh, it's much more!

Yes, the note is a part,
But being heart to heart
Is what Valentine's Day is for.

DEER HILL - FIRST PRIZE

The Valentine Present
By Kristen Contis, 5th Grade

Little Miss Suzie had a friend who was a boy. His name was Herman, but Susie called him Herm.

It was the week before Valentine's Day. Herm wanted to get Susie a box of chocolates, so he went to the center of town and got her chocolates and a card. On his way home he stopped to get a stamp for it (because he was going to mail it).

After he got the stamp he put it in the mailbox, but he wasn't fast enough and it got crushed! Now he was upset!

So he was on his way back to the store with the candy in his hand when he remembered he spent all his money so he decided to give her the crushed candy with a little note saying "I'm sorry."

He put the note at Susie's door and walked home. When Susie opened the door she saw it and the card. Boy, was she surprised!

She then read the note. It said:
Dear Susie,
I'm sorry about the candy, really I am.
With all my lov,
Herman

Well, Susie thought it was lovely and she wrote Herm a note saying thank you.

P.S. It's the thought that counts.

Valentine's is sometimes special. It is when you should be kind. It is not just giving candy. Well, sometimes we get candy. But we will not be here. We will be in Carver. I am moving. I am going to be sad. We live with my grandma. She is nice. On Valentine's we celebrate. It is fun.

☐John Howley, son of Fran and John Howley of Windy Hill Road, a freshman at Colby College, Waterville, Maine, made the Dean's List with an average of 3.42. John, who graduated last June from Cohasset High School, is studying liberal arts and may go into business, or possibly, pre-law. He is a member of the junior varsity basketball team and was just initiated into the Psi Zeta Fraternity.

☐Magali and Richard Audet leave Cohasset this week after four-and-a-half years here. Their new home will be in Marion, Indiana where Richard, a dentist, will work for the government at a Veteran's Administration Medical Center.

Good-bye to Ricky, 6, a first grader in Miss Bowker's class, Amy, 7, second grader with Mrs. Clark, and Beth, a Deer Hill fourth grader.

A happy note: they hope to come back to Cohasset in a few years. We'll save space for them!

☐If you are younger than junior high age, or older than a high school senior, you are going to miss out on a lot of Cupid's fun this Thursday, Valentine's Day, sub-dubbed, Flower Day!

Cohasset High School students, with the assistance of 32 National Honor Society members, will send 800 color-coded carnations to those they love (red), like (pink) or secretly admire (white).

A fund-raising project of the Honor Society's, the success of Flower Day has been, happily, overwhelming. Yoanna Zotos, President of the Society, feels they will probably do it again in the Spring.

So if you were too late (or too sick) to place your order for a heart-zinger, or if romance didn't bloom for you on Flower Day, there will be another.

The party was hosted by her seven children: Albert and Paula, Louis and Lorraine Meallo, Millie and Frank Froio, Mary and Sal Forgione, Frank and Marie Meallo, Teresa and Wayland Howell (a surprise from Florida) and Joseph Meallo. Seventeen grandchildren, 18 great grandchildren, five brothers and sisters, and neighbors for 58 years, the Espositos, Lagrotterias and Barbutos were there too.

Mrs. Meallo came to Cohasset in 1913 from Italy at the age of 12. She lived for a short time on Forest Avenue and then moved to her present home on Hull Street.

She loved every minute of the party/family reunion and we congratulate them all!

☐Truth or rumor — who knows? Log & Line regulars insist there's going to be a party on Jerusalem Road Saturday and you've got to wear pajamas to get in! We would love to have some follow-up commentary from party-people on this!

☐Nancy Snyder, Marsha Silvia and Teesha Bryant are three Cohasset members of the North River Chapter of the Friends of the New England Home for Little Wanderers. They are selling tickets for the group's annual fashion show, which will again be held at the Barnside in Norwell.

Save Monday night, March 24, for enjoying champagne and dessert while watching Carole McCole models show the latest fashions from the Sue Butler shop, Beginnings, and Janet's on the Wharf, all of Duxbury.

Call Nancy at 383-1636 for tickets or more information.

POLLY LOGAN

Polly Logan Seeks Republican State Slot

Polly Logan of 562 Main St., Hingham, has announced her candidacy for re-election as G.O.P. State Committeewoman from the Norfolk and Plymouth district. Mrs. Logan is serving her third term as State Committeewoman and is the G.O.P. National Committeewoman for Massachusetts.

Logan has been active in Massachusetts politics since she began working for Hastings Keith's Congressional races. In addition, she has worked and raised funds for Edward Brooke, Gerald Ford, Margaret Heckler, Elliot Richardson, Francis Sargent, John Volpe, and William Weeks.

She has hosted receptions in her homes in Cohasset and Hingham for local, county, state, Congressional and National candidates, as well as forums for important issues.

Mrs. Logan has also served as South Shore Area Director for the United Community Services, Vice-President and Public Relations Director for the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, and Founder and first president of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. In addition, she is the recipient of the Environmental Protection Agency New England Award for environmental achievements.

Mrs. Logan's work with Republican and Community causes gives her a unique opportunity to mesh the two interests. "The people of Massachusetts, as well as the nation, now recognize the wisdom of policies advocated by the Republican Party," she said. "The opportunity to enlist the support of disillusioned Democrat and Independent voters must not be abandoned.

"Our strength lies in our ability to make people aware of issues and Republican policies as well as recruiting and aiding candidates," she added. "In this vein, it is important that we choose our State Committee members on the basis of performance, not promises."

Logan's husband, Major General Edward F. Logan, is a former Commander of the Yankee 26th Division of the Massachusetts National Guard. They have two children, Malcolm, 24, at Harvard University, and Martha, 21, at Smith College.

She'll Find Purses For Candidates & Market Them!

"The more your country does for you, the less you are going to be allowed to do for yourself," Nancy O'Toole of Cohasset, candidate for Republican State Committee Woman, said during a recent interview.

Although she said she's not running on political issues and is in fact waging more of an "administrative" campaign . . . she feels strongly there are too many laws about everything.

"It's getting to the point where you need a license to build a doghouse."

A petite blonde, O'Toole has never waged her own campaign before, but has been behind many successful local candidates (school committee and selectmen) and is a staunch supporter of State Rep. Mary Jeanette.

Her main issue in running for office is to build the Republican party. She feels she's got the business savvy to do it.

O'Toole will be challenging encumbent Polly Logan, Republican State Committee Woman of Hingham (formerly of Cohasset) for a seat which Logan has held unchallenged for 12 years. Jean Robinson of Hull is also waging a strong campaign for the seat.

In brief, O'Toole feels Logan is "over-subscribed. She has not got the time to get down into the grass roots. I haven't seen her at town committee meetings for several years. While I'm sure this is not a result of her desire to not be there, I feel she has too many responsibilities. She is most competent on the higher echelon level and has done an excellent job getting the Republican presidential candidates into our area. But I want to relieve her of the state committee woman's job," which O'Toole feels needs an individual as herself who will find purses for Republican candidates and market them.

If elected, her major emphasis would be to enlist candidates on the Republican ticket in every state and county office in the district — in both Plymouth and Norfolk Counties.

O'Toole feels three things are important to good government: family, church and government — in that order.

"When people won't discuss religion and politics they're not discussing two of the most important things in their lives."

O'Toole feels her candidacy isn't really debatable. She's successfully run her own public relations firm and over the years has worked for major advertising companies.

Mrs. Wool: Lucky Lady

By Gail Hobson

The two dump trucks playing chicken did not see Mrs. Wool coming in the other direction on March 29, 1979. She had been attending a Title IX meeting at the school. After that, she drove six girls home from a softball practice who were playing with her daughter, MaryBeth.

On the way home, one of the trucks crashed into her, hitting her car mainly in the drivers side door.

The impact of the crash was devastating. Luckily, MaryBeth, who was in a car seat, sustained no serious injuries. Mrs. Wool though, after being taken to South Shore Hospital suffered a fractured elbow, femur, and knee.

She spent thirteen days in intensive care.

A rod had to be placed in her arm and leg and constant attention had to be paid to her so she would not lose the circulation in her arm completely. Thereafter she underwent major surgery twice. Because she was very active before the accident, she recuperated much more quickly.

She had been a swimming teacher and now is a volunteer swimming instructor at the Percy Walker Pool in Duxbury. The primary motivation to get well came from her husband, Bill, and her daughter MaryBeth. She wanted very much to return to her family and home.

The faculty and students at Cohasset High School, where she teaches Typing, Consumer Economics, and Business Management, were also a great inspiration to her. She received over 300 cards and numerous visits.

Recuperation was slow, painful and difficult.

In May she attended the Senior Prom in a wheelchair, delighting all the students and faculty. Her first time on crutches was when she went to the CTA party in mid-June.

Even though the worst is over she still has to have two additional operations on her knee and femur. Possible surgery on her elbow may also be in the future. She still has to do therapy once a week and maintain a high protein diet, as well as take pills for her metabolism.

A little background: Mrs. Wool began her schooling at the Gate of Heaven High School. She then went to the Boston Business School. After working for a year at Harvard University, she finished her Bachelor's Degree at Salem State College. She then attended Boston University, at which she majored in Business and Career Education, receiving her Master's Degree.

She just resumed teaching two weeks ago. We would like to wish her all the luck and happiness in her future endeavors.

Question: To Draft, Or Not To Draft?

By Michael Ellis

Since the cold war of the 1950's, the prospect of a nuclear holocaust has been evident. In these times, more than ever, the question of reinstating the draft has come up. The conscription of young individuals is a serious matter. It can totally rearrange the destiny of a person's life.

I decided to find out for myself how some of the involved individuals in Cohasset and at C.H.S. feel about the situation at hand. The first person I interviewed was Jon Durant, a C.H.S. student. I asked Jon what he felt about the draft, and if he would go if the government called upon him.

Jon said, "I feel no serious musicians should be drafted. Someone has to stay at home to keep the spirits alive of those people whose sons and daughters are away at war." Obviously he did not take the subject seriously, so I interviewed a C.H.S. teacher, Donald Reade, to find out his thoughts on the draft.

Mr. Reade replied: "The way the draft has been handled in the past is not fair. I am concerned for the minorities who would be conscripted over the wealthy. I feel it should be fair for all. And depending on the status of the E.R.A., I think that women should also be drafted, but not into combat positions."

There are many questions raised about the draft. Should women be drafted? Should college students be drafted? To be fair, the answer to all these questions should be yes. But can you imagine Cheryl Tiegs fighting in the trenches in a fishnet bathing suit? Or O.J. Simpson peeling potatoes in an Army Mess hall? What about Harvard Med-School students cleaning bedpans?

Will exceptions have to be made?Or will the draft be fair to all?

Another question is the punishment of draft dodgers. I will go along with the government's decision on the punishment. But hopefully, it will be decided during the five years I am in Canada visiting fourth cousins, three-times removed.

Let Us Light Your Lamp

Dear Readers:

You may be asking yourself "What is this I'm reading? The Cohasset Lamplight?" That's right, you're reading the Cohasset Lamplight, the Cohasset High School newspaper.

What, you ask, is a high school newspaper doing in the Cohasset Mariner?

Well, after seeing the January issue of the Lamplight, the Mariner invited us to publish a page for them on a bi-weekly basis. Considering the expense and the time needed to publish a separate paper the staff decided to accept the Mariner's invitation. So, here we are, and we hope to see you here every other week.

A week ago this past Tuesday, a bus carrying the Varsity Basketball team and its cheerleaders was stoned while returning from a 52-49 defeat at the hands of the Hull Pirates.

Three or four rocks the size of a fist pelted the bus and shattered windows all over six girls, sending them to the South Shore Hospital to be treated and released. One girl, a statistician for the team, received five stitches in her cheek.

The Hull Police have apprehended eight individuals who are suspected of being involved in the rock throwing incident in Hull on Tuesday. (There is a possibility of several more arrests.)

They were arraigned on the morning of Thursday, Feb. 7 at Hingham Court. They will be charged with assault and battery and premeditated intent to harm with a dangerous weapon. This carries a severe penalty.

[The Cohasset School Administration requests the student body to remain calm and let the police handle the matter.]

Two CHS students, Susan Buckley and Bonnie McClay, were recently honored in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Competition. Miss Buckley submitted a portfolio that was nominated for national scholarship competition. One piece of work, a print, received a Golden Key Award for excellence on a regional level.

Film Discussion At St. Stephen's

Begin with Goodbye is the name of a film/discussion program offered at St. Stephen's Church on Wednesday evenings during the Lenten season.

It is a deeply human series of six films which deal with the crises in our lives — the changes, the losses, the new beginnings, some pleasant, some traumatic, by which we grow and develop.

The program will deal with the major transitions in life that each of us faces — those of changes involving our work, our relationships, our bodies, the loss of loved ones, and our own death.

Following each film will be time for questions and discussions.

The program will begin each Wednesday evening with a celebration of Holy Eucharist in the Church at 7:30. The films and discussion will begin at approximately 8 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall.

The program is especially organized to encourage young people of high school age to participate and young adults and adults from the general public are invited.

B-Ballers Split a Pair

By Rob Tis

The Skipper cheerleaders weren't the only victims Tuesday night.

In a classic Hull-Cohasset contest, the hoopsters suffered a tough, 52-49 loss on Hull's home court.

The lead changed hands several times in the first half, but never did either team amass more than a three-point lead. But Hull bolted ahead by six in the third quarter, and the Skippers scraped away at the lead for the rest of the game. With 25 seconds left, guard Mark Goff sank a jumper to tie the score at 49. Brian Donahue made a fast break lay-up to put Hull ahead for good seconds later, and a foul shot with seconds remaining provided the final margin.

The Skippers entered Holbrook with fire in their eyes after the loss to Hull, and it showed. They ran away with a 55-36 laugher.

Junior point guard Bill Kurtz led the Skippers effort with 20 points, as they took a five point, 37-32 lead into the final quarter and outscored Holbrook, 18-4, in the final quarter and outscored Holbrook,18-4, in the final stanza to add insult to injury.

Kurtz also pulled down nine rebounds.

HOCKEY

The Hanover second and third lines may just as well have stayed home Wednesday night, as the first line was quite enough.

The Indian first line slapped home all five goals in Hanover's 5-2 win over the Skippers.

Skippers Don Campedelli and Doug Yeager scored first period goals to negate a 2-0 Indian lead, but Hanover came back with two more before the period ended and sapped the Skippers of all the offense they could muster.

The Skippers suffered from the opposite fate Saturday night against East Bridgewater — plenty of offense, but no defense.

The Skippers got two goals each from Rich Young and David O'Connell, and one each from Yeager, Campedelli, Doug Dillon, Dan Bowen and Jack McNeil, totaling nine.

East Bridgewater also had nine, though.

Bus Stoning

When asked about the youths, Ballerino sought the words carefully.

"The sad thing," he said, "is that the other students merely sat back, didn't interject themselves positively into the situation. Where is the peer pressure? So, you ask, will the few spoil it for the many, yes, if the many don't act, try to deter them."

And Ballerino expressed the student's concern for the rivalry.

"Many students have sought me out to express their concern and so forth," said Ballerino. "They've made it clear to me they don't want to break off the relationship."

They've also made it clear to Cohasset, according to sophomore Cohasset cheerleader Kirsten Moore.

"I got a call from some kids from Hull that I know, apologizing for the whole thing, and for their friends," said Moore. "Physical violence really has nothing to do with a rivalry."

Cohasset Athletic Director Clark Chatterton expressed similar feelings.

"It's a shame, because Hull did such a fine job with the game," said Chatterton. "We had a meeting on it, and I'm sure some drastic action will probably be taken, we don't know what. An athlete came to me asking, 'What fun is it to play in Hull?' "

And it was the cool action of the two chaperones, Joann Fichtner and Barbara McCool, that kept the fiasco to a dull roar.

"We haven't slept for days," said Fichtner.

"First, everyone started ducking," she said, "then they (the girls) started crying. We got the girls out and into the ambulance immediately."

"The boys behaved extremely well," said McCool.

But meanwhile, there is still animosity, to accompany the shock, mild anger and broken windows.

"After being on that bus," said sophomore cheerleader Beth Salvador, "I don't want to go there, I don't want to play there, I don't even want to see Hull again."

Hull, Cohasset To Talk About H.S. Rivalry Gripes

Early next month Hull and Cohasset administrators will discuss interscholastic competition between the towns, School Supt. Dr. John Maloney said Monday. He told the school committee he felt it best to discuss the situation in an "unemotional way." Maloney was referring to the incident last week when a school bus was stoned by Hull youths after a basketball game and several cheerleaders were injured.

Murray Bill Seeks Caps On Local And State Taxes

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray is co-sponsoring legislation to place a cap on both local property taxes and state taxes.

"Property tax relief is the most pressing issue facing the Legislature today," said Mary Jeanette. "People are demanding action and this legislation responsibility answers that demand."

According to Mary Jeanette, the legislation is sponsored by The Committee For The Responsible Limit, a 23-member, bi-partisan coalition of legislators committed to using reasonable, practical measures to achieve tax relief.

"These changes are designed in response to several citizens' initiative petitions which are unrealistic and will impose impractical restrictions on state and local governments," she said.

The alternative proposed by Mary Jeanette and the Committee For The Responsible Limit will restrict state and local property tax increases to no more than half the percentage growth in statewide personal income during each of the next three years. A similar cap will be placed on spending by state and local governments.

Additional tax relief will also be available under the plan, for it requires half of any increase in state taxes to be used to cut property taxes.

The Committee's proposed constitutional amendent would hold state tax increases to no more than the annual percentage growth in statewide personal income.

"This plan could take effect in 1985, with the approval of the voters and the Legislature, and would guarantee that wage-earners would not pay more taxes than they can afford."

The constitutional amendment will also limit the property tax on any parcel of land to 2.5 percent of its full market value.

"Unlike other tax relief proposals," she added, "our plan includes provisions giving state and local officials tools to comply with the limits of the caps." She noted the cost of pensions and debt service would be excluded from the caps, and that other exemptions are permitted with appropriate approval.

"This is a tax relief plan that cities and towns can live with," she said. "It will remove the Legislature's power to set county budgets, bring MBTA costs under control, and requires full funding of state-mandated programs."

For further information please contact The Committee For The Responsible Limit, 73 Tremont Street, Boston, MA, 02108, or call 723-7899.

There are presently no plans to close the schools.

The school committee went into executive session for approximately 35 minutes to discuss a grievance from the Cohasset Teachers' Association. The press was not let in on the details of the grievance.

"I put on 'Sister Eileen' 10 or 15 years ago and it was a 'wow' — a big success.

"The club has its ups and downs. You've got to get people who like to do it. Everyone needs some ham in them to do it. Some of our best actors and actresses are the ones who tried out and couldn't make it. But for an amateur production they're great!

"I first started directing in '36, '37. I even did bit parts in my own plays

The club eventually made him and three other people honorary members. The other three are Isabelle Grassie, Josiah Wheelwright, and Mrs. Charles Gammons.

Club members cover a wide age bracket. They are people from all ends of town, Blackmur explains. "For newcomers it's a good way to meet people."

He says members don't have to be amateur actors to join the club. Anyone can try out for a part, and those that don't want to act can help behind the scenes with lights and scenery.

The key to acting, Blackmur thinks, is to take a part and figure out how the person would act naturally. "Then act naturally when playing the part."

Although the stage at the town hall is small Blackmur says it is not hard to use "once you get used to it."

He recalls how the South Shore Players used the stage for performances. Alexander Dean, then head of the Graduate School of Drama at Yale University, ran the group and was able to persuade people like Sinclair Lewis to make his stage debut when the players produced the dramatization of his novel, "It Can't Happen Here."

Dean also talked Thornton Wilder into playing the part of stage manager in his play "Our Town."

"I like to produce comedies, rather than melodramas," Blackmur says. "We have five weeks of rehearsal. The first three weeks we rehearse three times a week; the fourth week, four times, and the last week a lot. Actors have got to know their parts and come to rehearsal," Blackmur maintains firmly. "I time my acts. I like my productions to move.

"I ran a pretty tight ship," he said, "and we had some pretty good productions."

Local Legacy

Bursk Book Of Poems

By Karin Bartow

Christopher Bursk, age 36, has already left a legacy. His legacy, a gift for all, but for you of Cohasset, a special one, is a book of poems titled Standing Watch. The poems chronicle his childhood here in Cohasset, adolescence and move full circle into fatherhood.

The people of Standing Watch, Christopher's parents, Kitt and Ed Bursk, brothers Eddie and Jack, his father's mother, the housekeeper, Jessie Vaughan, caretaker Alonso, relatives, neighbors, strangers, are remembered with love, awe, understanding, fear and tenderness. They are preserved for an infinite legacy in his rich poetry.

Christopher grew up on Sohier Street, at the corner of Green Street. He was a crossing guard at the Ripley Road School, delivered papers on his bike, played good baseball, terrific tennis, was a scout, swam, sailed, kept the tennis courts at the golf club.

He did all these things, while inbetween and during, recorded and synthesized his world with the sensitivity, perception and an articulation that today would be called gifted.

A shy, sensitive child, he grew up in a loving family that talked about feelings and attitudes and didn't hesitate to solve problems. Chris's mother, Kitt, taught school, loves still to tell stories, paint, garden. His father, Edward Bursk, recently retired from a long teaching career at the Harvard Business School. He wrote poetry at Amherst, but devoted his writings (six published volumes) to business.

Christopher began writing at about the age of nine — poems about family things — for Easter, Mother's Day, certainly Valentines. He entered Brown and Nichols School in the ninth grade; lugged books around the Harvard Business School Library for six months; and attended Tufts University after that.

His interest and study of poetry became serious at Tufts. John Chiardi and X.J. Kennedy lectured while he was there and influenced him greatly. Standing Watch, which was commissioned by Houghton Mifflin as the sixth in their New Poet's Series and published in 1978, includes a jacket inscription written by Kennedy, in which he says, "At a moment when so much American poetry seems determined to play cool, Christopher Bursk isn't afraid to be heartbreaking."

The book received rave reviews from the Washington Post and has enjoyed successful sales. It is now in paperback (and available at the Hingham Square Book Shop).

Bursk graduated from Tufts, magna cum laude, class poet; he taught American Literature at Shaw University for two years afterward; and earned a doctorate degree from Boston University. He is currently a Professor of Literature at Bucks County Community College, outside Philadelphia. He and his wife, Mary Ann, and their children, Christian, Norabeth and Justin live nearby.

In language which is rich, sensitive, alive and full of honest, unabashed emotion, Bursk translates into clearer meaning, many of youth's mysterious and exhilarating experiences in his book. Of youngsters' play, in Thieves, Arabs of the Tall Grass, he writes, "In the dusk after school we are no one's sons, Arabs of the tall grass. Caravans of trees cross out trails, yellows, scarlets flapping like sleeves of many great robes . . .

Visiting a forbidden barn, in Long Before Harkness's Father Shot Himself There, "I recall only the dumb mooning face of a car that has crashed and this barn through whose cracked slats in the root cellar years earlier we crawled, whispering each other's names."

Of growing up as a boy in Cohasset, in Over Two Thousand Strong, . . . "In Cohasset a boy got to be a man by capsizing and learning to shed his pants in the water. A boy grew up boat by boat: Scorpion, Moth, Mercury, 110, 210. Adolescence was genoa jibs and spinnakers, old age centerboard and mainsail again." And in the same poem, "Wedged in between the rocks, the beach looked like an old shoe. We were proud of our history of shipwrecks, read aloud to the school assemblies poems about drowning immigrants."

The sounds of a boy's world, from April 9, 1945/ Bewahrung, "From my house I was sure I could hear everything in the world. I could tell the channel buoys like the bells of different churches, could hear the sea mumbling its low mass . . . "

Thoughts during Morning Papers, " . . . to pedal conversations through your head, long talks you would finally have with your father, scores you would play to sudden death (you loved the long driveways you could finish a whole murder in)."

As a father he writes in Namesake, "Christopher, fatherless, makeshift child, little apostrophe hung like a cap over an empty chair . . . Christopher, one day all our families will vanish — great ships built hurriedly, poorly, arks, old farmhouses floating away from their farms . . . We shall remember the scents names mark their territories with like bears . . . the names of other children on our desks, inside schoolbooks . . . uncles we've never met, aunts who smelled of lilac and Yardley's lavender . . . "

The unspeakable, tender fears of a father in Bedtime: "I try to imagine this house drained of me, my children's lives without me like stiff, wet winter clothes softening as they are put on again, this world without me, only the half-moon, the watermark where a glass was. I write this because I am afraid. I hear the pauses in breathing, the dropped stitches, the faint moans of my children as they are sewn into their dreams."

In his book, Bursk notes how precious the world is, and how time and family must be safely held, lest they be lost.

☐Twelve year old Amy Duncombe of Sheldon Road distinguished herself recently in slalom and giant slalom skiing events in the New Hampshire state qualifications. She earned a berth on the nine member girls' team (13 and under) to represent New Hampshire in the Eastern Championships to be held in mid-March at Waterville Valley, N.H.

Since last week, the school committee has discovered another skeleton. Now there are 1.5 plastic skeletons and one "real" skeleton.

Elderly Need Not Give Up Assets At Hawker Project

Robert Hawker's proposal to develop nine acres on Cedar Street (near the town landfill) into a 60-unit housing development for moderate-income elderly and handicapped met with some favorable applause at last week's selectmen's meeting.

Unlike the town's state housing project on Elm Street, Hawker's proposed elderly development will not require prospective tenants to divest themselves of all holdings and trusts before applying to the project. As long as the income from trusts or assets is not more than $10,850 elderly tenants can apply for subsidized housing at the location.

Assets are not a part of the Section 8 project — only taxable income is considered.

At the present time the project is at the feasibility stage and Hawker has no idea when or if the state department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will approve a subsidized development in the town.

If HUD should approve the $900,000 project (estimated value of the building and the property) it would also establish a fair market rental for each unit, or approximately $550 a unit according to 1979 statistics.

The fair market value rent would include all utilities, appliances, trash pickup, not including phone.

The developer's profit would not exceed six per cent equity per year. Property taxes would be negotiated with the selectmen and the assessors. Hawker estimates an estimated $37,920 yield to the town. He pointed out that a tax agreement would be necessary as the limited divident entity must pay 10 per cent of its rental income in an excise tax — not property tax — all of which is returned to the town.

Hawker said 121-A entities are allowed tax agreements by the state as they are bound by six per cent on equity because "A substantial increase on the property tax could lose the project money. Projects like these don't have large reserves."

A housing need study done by the Department of Community Affairs in 1978 showed that Cohasset's housing needs were 106 units — 80 low income and 26 moderate income — over and above the 60 low-income units on Elm Street.

According to Hawker, a person making $50,000 a year could not live in a unit marked as subsidized . . . 15 per cent will be subsidized at a minimum. But Hawker's proposal calls for 50-75 per cent to be subsidized. "My request went in that way to HUD."

Hawker said there are 103,000 unit applications before HUD at present time for the same type of projects. However, he said "it is not his intention to get involved in a lot of community controversy. "If the town doesn't want it — I'd be the first guy to fold it up."

He said water could be brought to the project through a lot he owned on Cedar Acres. He would extend the water line across Forest Avenue into Dr. Roger Pompeo's property, and on through Cedar Street.

Hi, Sweetie?

By Lois Martin

What does Valentine's Day mean to you, Sweetie? Or are we supposed to have surrendered that silly vulnerability to palpitating hearts and flushed cheeks, the trademarks of young love.

Nonsense, Love belongs to the possessor. It is an equal opportunity employer of our affections. If you can get it, I say you had it coming to you, at any age. There's not one good reason to outgrow any kind of love. True, we change our expressions of it but I like to think of us as growing riper, more mature and discerning in exercise of fondness.

Still, Valentine's Day to me connotes all caring love as well as in young lives. None of us is above receiving cards or boxes of chocolates. The Valentine card industry is constantly challenged in its efforts to come up with messages that really relay love.

PATCHES

And no one does that better than little people. It is they who create from small moments memorable momentoes of love. And if we're lucky we share them.

Collected here are a few patches of life which could be identified with true messages of Valentine's Day seldom noted in cards.

Love is when a boy of four stands on the facility seat while his Dad shaves...and the two of them talk...a lot. They each come away with a bit of shaving cream left on a cheek and a pleasing start to the day.

Love is when your second grade boyfriend (Tuffy Carlisle) gives you his cat's eye marble and you discover, years later, that you still have it.

Love is when you and your grandfather secretly arrange to go out for an ice cream sundae.

Love is when a mother reads the same story, "Rabbit, Skunk and the Scary Rock," night after night to an enraptured child.

Love is when a teenager fixes a tray for his sick mother with soup and crackers and remembers to put on her favorite real butter.

Love is when a grown man extolls his mother's bread as being the best in the world.

Love is when his wife listens, smiles and agrees.

Love is when a baby spots his Dad coming home from work and sets off in a flurry of arm waving and hollering.

Love is when a mother fusses over a special supper for her family.

Love is when they notice and say so.

Love is a friend who breaks with Yankee tradition by complimenting another to her face.

Love is the teacher who singles out the downcast child and lifts him up with proof of his own good work.

Love is when a small person in pajamed feet crawls into bed between his parents and conducts a cheery conversation while snuggling.

Love is when a young man concedes with a smile that he's a lot like his father.

Love is a warm hug shared and still sought by full grown people who are parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles.

Love is unlimited, comes in all varieties from the marrying kind to the mothering kind to the caring kind.

Happy Valentine's Day!

We'd like to meet you.

Tread carefully today, for legend has it that the first person you meet on St. Valentine's Day, will become your Valentine. It's a custom that goes back to the 17th century in England and France, where your chance encounter was fated to be one's beau for the coming year, but only with the full consent of the parents of both families. Even today, there are still those who believe the way to a man's heart is through his stomach and he'll be hooked for sure if your Valentine gift is a batch of these cookies made to look festive with a touch of red raspberry jam. We have Margaret Ward to thank for these:

THIMBLE COOKIES

1 stick unsalted butter
1/4 c. confectioners sugar
1 c. flour, sifted with
1/8 tsp. baking powder and
1/8 tsp. salt

Cream butter well and gradually add confectioners sugar, then dry ingredients. Mix well. Shape into balls. Press a thimble in the center and fill depression with raspberry jam. Sprinkle with finely chopped nuts, if desired. Bake in 350 degree oven for 20 to 25 min. and you will have about 30 cookies.

The red heart and red rose have signified love and affection for many a year. If you've priced roses recently, you won't really expect your Valentine to shower you with a dozen or two. A nice, big, fattening slice of Millie Carr's dessert will have to suffice for you and your Cupid.

CHERRY CHEESE PIE

1 [1-lb. 5-oz.] can cherry pie filling
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
12 oz. softened cream cheese
3/4 c. sugar
1 tsp. lemon or orange rind, grated
2 large eggs
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1 c. sour cream
1 9" unbaked pie shell

Spread 1/2 of pie filling in shell. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 min. Remove from oven. Turn oven temperature to 350 degrees. Beat eggs with 1/2 c. sugar, cream cheese, vanilla and fruit peel. Pour over hot cherry pie filling. Bake 25-30 min. Filling will be slightly soft in center. Cool completely. Spoon sour cream mixed with 1/4 c. sugar around edge of pie. Fill center with remaining pie filling. Refrigerate at least 3 hours.

Definitely not a column for those counting calories, here we have another recipe from JoAnn Nelson designed for Valentine's Day. Talk about sweets to the sweet! This may be baked in a two-layer cake pan, or large, heart-shaped pan, baking time depending on size of the pan, so you'll have to keep an eye on it. Heat oven to 350 degrees, keeping in mind that it takes approximately 45 to 60 min. for a tube pan. Grease and flour pan.

MARASCHINO CHERRY CAKE

Sift:
2½c. flour
1 T baking powder
3/4 tsp. sale
Add:
1/2 c. Wesson oil
2/3 c. milk
1/3 c. maraschino cherry juice
Beat together:
2 eggs
1 c. sugar
Add 1/2 c. chopped cherries

Mix well after adding liquids. Beat eggs until foamy, adding sugar gradually. Beat until well blended. Fold eggs, sugar and cherries in flour mix. Ice with pink-tinted frosting and decorate with cherries. Happy Valentine!

February Marks Scouts 70th Anniversary

February 1980 if the official month of celebration commemorating the 70th anniversity of the start of the Boy Scouts of America and the 50th anniversary of the movement's offshoot, the Cub Scouts.

In honor of the occasion, Cohasset's three scouting units — Boy Scout Troop 28, Cub Scout Pack 38, and Explorer Post 28 — will be holding an open house in Bates Hall of the Congregational Church on Cohasset Common from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 16.

Troop 28 is one of the oldest troops anywhere in the United States, being now in its 64th year of continuous service to Cohasset's youth. Over the years, it has varied in size from about a dozen boys to times when upwards of 60 filled its ranks; currently, about 25 boys are registered.

Whatever the number actually involved, the Troop has had a strong, consistent program, as evinced by the many ribbons attached to the head of its flagstaff proclaiming it a "National Honor Unit" year after year. Nelson Pratt is the current Scoutmaster, and has filled that volunteer position for over eleven years.

Pack 38 is much younger, but currently is the larger unit, having, as it does, about 40 boys between the ages of 8 and 10. Jeff Forsdick is Cubmaster. This is his third year in that position, a testimonial to his patience, fortitude, and commitment to Cohasset's youth.

Post 28 was founded about 11 years ago by Post Advisor Arthur C. Lehr, Sr., when he "retired" after having been Troop 28's Scoutmaster for 25 years. The post has some dozen young men and women of high school age who train in emergency medical procedures and disaster relief.

They often work with Cohasset's Fire and Police Departments, responding to calls and providing valuable and necessary assistance.

The three scout units invite friends and interested persons to come visit with them on Saturday, the 16th, reminisce about the "old days," talk about program activities, witness displays and demonstrations (participate if you wish), and enjoy light refreshments. Also on hand will be Four Harbors District Chairman Merle S. Brown and District Commissioner David James, who oversee the scouting activities in Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Hull.

Jones Land Voted Easily

By Tanna Kasperowicz

By 11:30 p.m. on Valentine's Night special town meeting voters had conceded to everything the Attorney General's Office had asked — and voted to place its new multi-million dollar wastewater plant on the Jones Conservation land off Sohier Street.

The 417 voters who attended the four-hour session on the eight-article warrant (mostly sewerage issues) had few questions, and appeared to be eager to get the deed done after four months of discussion, public meetings and coffee house debate on the subject.

Although even as the meeting began voters were grumbling in the aisles about the article asking the town to agree to pay $10,000 as a penalty for past pollution, after hearing the facts about the summary judgments the Attorney General had gotten from other communities — voters put on a stiff upper lip and voted to pay.

Also voted 216-27 was a $295,000 supplement for working plans for Phase I of the sewer plan for the town. A total of $560,000 has been appropriated for the plans to date.

Sewer commissioners said the financing article will not commit the town to either a one million or a half million gallon plant at this time and that size will be determined at a later town meeting.

Voters chose the Jones conservation land on a 325-69 vote — a two thirds vote being required to pass the article. A second article to petition the General Court to enact legislation to transfer the land to the town passed easily on a voice vote.

William Montuori, chairman of the sewer commission, withdrew the school facility land and the Whale Meadow sites after voters decided on the Jones land.

Voters defeated an amendment to the sewer financing article offered by Charles Langmaid on a voice vote. That motion would have stipulated that the use of the financing funds be under the control of the newly elected

HAPPY BIRTHDAY complete with cake finds Frances Marone lighting the candles for Gilbert Tower to blow out on occasion of his 95th birthday.

Civil Service In Throes Of Change

At annual town meeting this year voters will be asked by selectmen to vote the police department out of Civil Service.

The selectmen's request comes at a time when Civil Service is in the process of impending change.

According to Patricia Facey, a member of the Governor's Task Force on Civil Service, (CS), that commission has held seven hearings across the state and heard 22 hours of testimony in which local officials have discussed the difficulty of dismissal of a man from the police force, cumbersome CS examination procedures, the CS appeals system and more.

At a recent Cohasset League of Women Voters meeting on the same issue, Ms. Facey said the commission is actively looking at change.

"Many people feel it is inappropriate for CS to make rules and review — and feel review should be handled by a personnel administrator, with only appeals going to CS," Ms. Facey said.

The Governor's Task Force is recommending that communities of 20,000 or more set up their own personnel system, while smaller communities can contract with municipalities for personnel administration assistance.

Tenure is also being examined, with the possibility of instituting a longer probationary period than six months. Ms. Facey said it has been suggested that five-year contracts be offered, and not tenure.

The commission also feels that CS should institute a performance evaluation procedure. According to Ms. Facey, Hancock Bank is presently helping to train state people in the method of employee performance.

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark, a speaker at the League-sponsored meeting, spoke in terms of Civil Service as being one of the most frustrating and costly to the town.

"We '(selectmen) believe the majority of people want the selectmen to properly manage those departments which come under our jurisdiction. We want to decentralize the delegation of authority to a certain extent," Clark said, adding that it recently took over a year to replace a secretary and a laborer.

"We feel we can do a better job than they can."

Clark said he was distressed at having to have a reason to dismiss a man from the police force. "If it (the reason) is put in writing it becomes a public document and you can have a lawsuit on your hands."

Reagan's Coming To Cohasset

Late Monday afternoon, Phil Murray got the word — Republican Presidential Candidate Ronald Reagan will be on the Cohasset Common for a South Shore Rally Sunday afternoon, March 2 at a time to be announced.

Phil said he hopes to have Mr. Reagan speak from the town hall steps. Mary Jeanette said she's seen Reagan several times in person "And he looks as great without his make-up as he does with it."

Gilbert's Week

By Karin Bartow

Not many of us can claim to have cut into our own 95th birthday cake. And if we could, we would hardly be humble enough to remark to our friends that we didn't know what the fuss was all about!

He can't see, doesn't hear too well, walks with a cane, but he's as vital and active as anyone half his years. His memory is clear, mind sharp, humor alive and is as productive in community participation as ever.

Gilbert S. Tower was born on February 15, 1885. On the night before his 95th birthday, he received a standing ovation at the Special Town Meeting after an unprecedented, unanimous vote for a resolution in honor of him, "Cohasset's honorary town engineer and lifelong resident." The resolution wished him "continued good health and a keen mind in years to come."

After sitting through all of the Valentine's night meeting, Gilbert was in fine shape the next day for a birthday luncheon. It was his day, February 15, 1980, at the regularly scheduled gathering of the "Old Goats."

The twice a month meetings, held strictly for the sociability and conviviality of it's men-only members, are held at Hugo's Restaurant. Champagne glasses were raised and a toast was made by Ted Vallis to another Girl Scout Cadette Troop 300 is sponsoring a talk on Japan to be given by Scout Susan Wisialko of Westwood, who recently spent three weeks in Japan. The talk will be held Tuesday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. Cohasset Jr. and Sr. Scout Troops will be in attendance.

Stamp Sets

The U.S. Postal Service is observing National Letter-Writing Week Feb. 24-March 1. As part of the observance a set of three pairs of U.S. Postage Stamps will be issued focusing attention on the importance of National Letter-Writing Week.

Riding Lecture

The Cohasset Riding Club is sponsoring a lecture on conditioning by Mary L. "Razzi" Syberts on Wed. Feb. 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset Community Center.

Fees for her lecture will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for kids. Refreshments will be served.

Energy Guidelines

James A. Litchfield, the town's building inspector, has detailed new energy guidelines that will help state business reduce their fuel consumption levels and save an estimated 1.3 million barrels of oil in the Commonwealth. This represents enough home heating oil to heat 11,000 homes for the entire heating season.

Safety Films

Thanks to the follow-through of Cohasset Safety Officer, Sgt. John Rhodes, III — next year New England school children will have a winter safety film, perhaps two, regarding precautions to take while sledding, skating, and walking to school.

Rhodes got the ball rolling for the film when he brought the subject of winter safety films before the South Shore Safety Officer's League. It was discovered there were no such films available.

He then contacted the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau and various film companies. Film Fair Communications, a film company located in Studio City, California, recently corresponded with Sgt. Rhodes, saying they were interested in making the film and asked for his technical advice on several matters.

In the meantime, the Governor's Bureau is also looking into producing its own film. On advice from Rhodes, the Bureau will concentrate on a film emphasizing safety for the child pedestrian, while Film Fair will emphasize ice safety.

Rhodes said this week the Governor's Bureau has been instrumental in getting the Cohasset Police Department photography equipment and films over the past two years.

"SPACES" Begins This Month At S.S. Art Center

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, will sponsor "SPACES," a three person show in which spaces are defined both in two dimensional photography and in three dimensional photography and baskets. The show will be on view from Feb. 25 - March 20 with an opening reception Saturday, Feb. 29 from 6 to 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend this reception where they will have the opportunity to meet the artists and to view their work.

The artists are three women each with a distinctive style and perception of the spaces we inhabit. Gail Bryan, whose works deal primarily with people, is a free-lance photographer from Cohasset. A graduate of the School of the MFA, Brandeis and Duke University, Bryan presently does work for numerous publishing houses such as Houghton Mifflin and Random House. She is working on two photograph books: one on the Boston Red Sox and another on Nepal where she lived and worked in a remote jungle village. Exhibits include the Pratt Institute in N.Y.C., Photographers' Gallery in London and Boston City Hall.

Amy Cain, a native of Hingham, is now a resident of Jamaica Plain. Cain studied at the School of the MFA and is a graduate of the New England School of Photography in Boston. She has taught photography at the New England School of Photography and is presently working with the Mass. Department of Youth Services. Another of Amy's activites is a photo essay on the life style of individual students at the Perkins School for the Blind in Watertown. Exhibits include SSAC and the Bare Cove Gallery.

Joy Augenstern-Stuart is a Fibre Artist who lives in Hull. Joy works in "creating comfortable spaces in basketry between people and in the world around her." Joy will be exhibiting reed baskets and coiled basket sculptures. She has exhibited previously at the Hull Harbor Festival and at the Clemens Gallery in the Hingham Public Library.

All three of these artists are concerned with spaces and the ways in which individuals adapt to their unique environments, and this collection of art works results in being a highly interesting study of textures and compositions. For further information on this most recent accomplishment of the South Shore Art Center call 383-9548.

Where Beechwood Starts

By Peter Barnicle

The area has no set boundaries, but most people feel that once they turn west from 3A onto Beechwood St. and pass the A&P they are in Beechwood.

Old-timers, however, insist that Beechwood starts once Bound Brook is crossed.

In looking back we found that "the village of Beechwood lies in the southwest corner of the township of Cohasset on the borders of Scituate, Hingham and South Scituate." That's the way a resident pin-pointed it back in 1880. Since then, of course, South Scituate has become Norwell.

Up until recent years most of the land was devoted to farming. Now the sub-dividing developers have moved in and new homes are proliferating all over the place. There are new homes along Doane St., a major development on the north slope of Souther's Hill and another nearing completion in the Joy's Hill area, just west of the Congregational Church, overlooking the new Cohasset Reservoir. Word is others are on the drawing board.

Most Cohasseters see the village only when they take the "back road" on their way to the Hanover Mall. It may not be on the foliage tour lists, but anybody who has driven through the section and along Summer St. in the fall can testify to the wonder of the golds and reds of autumnal colors in a truly rural setting.

Looking Back

Beechwood was first settled around the beginning of the 18th century when Mordecai Lincoln built an iron smelter and forge on Turtle Island on Bound Brook. Utilizing the available water power the industrious ancestor of Abraham Lincoln also erected a sawmill on the island.

As more people came into the village — the Bates and the Pratts were among the earliest settlers — the need for a highway became apparent. At the time, according to history, the only access to the village was a cart track impassable to any vehicle wider than a wheelbarrow.

Being true Cohasseters they set up a committee. The first group came up with a plan in 1717 but there was all sorts of opposition to it. So another committee was formed and it struggled with the problem for a couple of years. Finally in 1726 agreement was reached and six years later Beechwood St. as we know it now was accepted.

One hundred years ago, according to my source, the village contained "about seventy dwellings, a church, a cemetery, a school house, four grocery stores, a sawmill, two shoe factories, a small railroad station and that most necessary adjunct to any New England village — a cider mill.

The Congregational Church ..anding on the rise at the top of Church St. was built in 1866 after it was found that altogether too many residents of Beechwood were finding it too much of a task to attend the two churches "on the plain" — known to us as Cohasset Common.

Rev. Joseph Osgood of the First Parish and other ministers occasionally held services in the schoolhouse. Then in 1862, the Rev. Cyrus Stone, a retired foreign missionary, started regular services and four years later the white steepled church was erected.

The grocery stores were operated by H.L. Brown and W.W. Bates. The sawmill on Turtle Island was run by a Timothy Burbank, and the cider mill was owned by George C. Lincoln.

When the chronicler of a hundred years ago said the Old Colony Railroad was "small" he was being painfully accurate. The station measured 23 feet by seven feet. It was strictly for passengers, all freight had to be picked up in Cohasset.

The law office was that of Aaron Pratt, Esq., Justice of the Peace. Pratt was one of the wealthiest and most influential men in the village. He was active in many civic affairs and on occasion donated some of his land for town purposes.

His office was a landmark in the village as attested to in this little verse:

"A little way from Herbert's
A dozen rods or more
You'll come to a little office
With Aaron on the door."

Gilbert's Week

unanimous chorus of "hear-hear's."

"Old Goats," Carl Ferguson, Ozzie Ingram, Al Hunt, Fred Peterson, Edward Tower, Amby Cray, Arthur Nilsson, Herb Sherbrooke, Roland Crampton, Bob James, Norm Megathlin, Fred Howe, John Mullett, Bob Knowles, Paul Blackmur, Ray Remick, Ed Otis, Sam Wakeman, Arnold Weeks, Jack Wilson, Pete Cumner, Dan Campbell and John Campbell presented him with a silver dollar (admonishing not to sell it for a buck!), a handwon three-piece nail grooming set, and a year's subscription to the Cohasset Mariner. After receiving his gifts, Gilbert remarked, "I don't know why you're making such a fuss over a birthday." "You've never been 95 before," someone shot back!

Mrs. Frances Maroni, Gilbert's daughter who is visiting from the Washington, D.C. area, came to the luncheon, but out of respect for her father's sense of propriety concerning "Old Goat" protocol, she did not sit with the gentlemen. She was joined at the table by Mariner photographer, Greg Derr, and me (we had a wonderful time!).

Mrs. Maroni said her father was thoroughly enjoying the "fuss" over his birthday and was touched by the birthday resolution at Town Meeting.

A beautifully decorated cake, befitting a 95th birthday, was presented to Gilbert and everyone sang "Happy Birthday" and "He's A Jolly Good Fellow" loudly and exuberantly.

In typical straight-forward fashion, Gilbert responded to Bob James' biographical remarks with: "It sounded a bit like an obituary. Well, I'm not dead yet!" He went on to share some reminiscences from his career at the time he was Mechanical Engineer of the Panama Canal.

In a life career that has included teaching, industry, service in two wars, community involvement and an active retirement (only since the age of 75!), Gilbert Tower has combined his interests in engineering and architecture and been successful at them all.

Gilbert Tower took his 95th birthday in stride, although he did admit that he was a bit overwhelmed by the whole celebration. No one could deserve it more.

He Reports Like A Professional

Letter

To the Editor:

I was quite surprised to read in last week's paper that a new sports columnist was added to the staff. I am sure Mr. Finocchiaro is a good columnist but I hope he doesn't replace Mr. Robert Tis.

Tis has an ingenious style, that I feel a big time sportswriter cannot match. I am sure that everyone will agree with me that the "Tis Quiz" is one of the most enjoyable portions of the paper. His unique style in reporting the facts in a question, answer type form is much better than just reading the names and facts.

Although Rob is not the jock that Mr. Finocchiaro was, he still supports the athletic events better than anyone I know. During the fall sports season I'd see Rob with pad and pencil writing down facts and interviewing players.

He gave every sport a fair shake. This winter season Rob reports, as well as plays on the CHS basketball team. You'd think that would be hard enough but he still reports like a professional on wrestling, girls basketball and gymnastics. That is some undertaking for a young guy.

In conclusion I'd just like to say that I hope to see more of Rob's column as well as Ed's column. You know, a sort of side-by-side relationship where one writer does not overshadow the other.

Sincerely Yours,
J.T. Price
S. Main St.

(ED.'S NOTE: Not to worry, J.T. NO ONE could ever replace Tis. Even though he never gave the answers to his last quiz.)

board of sewer commissioners to be elected April 12, 1980.

Although the advisory committee recommended Ms. Langmaid's motion, town officials said if the town had to wait for a new board of sewer commissioners to act, the town's May 15 deadline for entering into an agreement with consultants could not be made.

In response to Ms. Langmaid's motion, Rene Chiasson said: "If I weren't afraid we're going to hell in a basket I'd leave here in disgust. Let's vote the amendment down and vote the question — and let's go home." And voters did just that.

A substitute amendment offered by Richard Avery was ruled an illegal amendment by Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. Avery's amendment sought to create an eight-person sewer design committee to control sewer funds.

Thaxter said it was illegal to take away the power of an elected board.

Civil Service

Clark said selectmen once unknowingly hired an alcoholic, adding CS knew the man was an alcoholic.

Lieut. Charles Stockbridge of the Cohasset Police Department said even if the town should vote CS out of the department, the men presently in the department would be under CS until their retirement from the force.

He said future appointments to a non CS force would create contract problems. "If examinations are not conducted by Civil Service a man would have to leave CS to take that promotion."

While Stockbridge said he sympathized with selectmen in dealing with the CS bureaucracy, he felt that taking the department out of CS at this time would be opening a can of worms.

"King's proposing a new deal — the modernization of the system. Maybe selectmen have a better alternative, but I have not heard of their proposal as of this day. It's my feeling that the devil we know is better than the devil we don't know."

Drawing Session

Saturday, March 1, from 10-3:30 will be a full day of figure drawing at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

Those interested whether Beginner, Intermediate or advanced, come prepared for an intensive session of drawing.

A Prime Time Performance At Ye Olde Town Hall

By Tanna Kasperowicz

For the past five years Cohasset has been telling me . . . "You've got to meet Diane Gallagher . . . you've simply got to meet her!"

Now . . . when I am told for too long that I've simply got to meet anyone I build up a certain reservation about meeting that person and am, in fact, prepared to dislike them.

Having always must missed meeting the elusive Ms. Gallagher everywhere . . . I finally caught up with her on the Town Hall stage in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie.

And I liked her, her character, and the well-balanced, swift-moving action of the production which had many soul-satisfying sounds. No crow diet this performance.

Diane, as Jean Brodie, has a Vanessa Redgrave quality about her which is not confined to looks alone. Her character called for a rich diversity of feelings to be displayed, moods to be mooded over and expression to be exhibited. And whomever Diane Gallagher might really be in everyday life . . . she certainly was Miss Brodie for me last week.

Although Diane is a very large presence on stage, she is not a dominating one. Possibly she has learned to share her scenes in order to make her own performance more illuminating. If so — then she is also a technician.

All the Brodie people operated from a highly-polished surface — the set itself. The action was staged in several onstage and offstage locations, with the audience following the actors and their aides from place to place.

In this production there was no evil, only natural forces leading to natural results. And out of the production emerges more than a little wisdom.

To say the audience was kept on the edge of its chairs is not exaggeration. Theatergoer John Martin was so much on the edge of his that at the end of the first scene when Miss Brodie said she felt Jenny would be famous for sex — John's two-seater collapsed and captured him in the front row. He said he wouldn't sue. But this should give Jack Worley's request for more modern chairs a little push to the foreground. Indeed — those same chairs, which Humphrey Bogart, Oscar Wilde, whoever sat in over the years also collapsed and captured Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Henry Ainslie at a recent meeting of the Harbor Study Committee.

Snatches of adult dialogue were artfully blurred . . . throughout the play adolescence was present and along with it — its crisis of identity — captured by swaggering teenagers who are mostly women, mostly children.

The acerbic Sandy, played with genuine hauter by Julie Bearce, made one want to tend to take sides, which is a mistake. A striking, attractive girl, Julie went from barrettes to the artist's loft and his arms with the ambition her role demanded.

It was at first difficult to guess that her breathless dash through a gay youth would have a dark side. Her role was difficult but she made it seem easy.

Evelyn Schultz was quite at home as Miss Mackay . . . headmistress of this girls' school. And David Barrett and Chuck Sullivan pitched in with strong supporting role performances. It's difficult to not be upstaged by a bevy of young beauties such as Susan Douglas, Jennifer Sharp, Samantha Barrett.

The young school girl cast, which matures somewhere between acts, conducts quiet but fierce rebellions, becoming poignant in its delicate struggle to make meaning out of the events which assail it.

The girls are frustrated to find they cannot easily shed their self-doubts.

Clover O'Toole and Teri Finegan were added to the cast after the printing of the program, so we thought we'd print their names here.

They Fell In Love At The Greenhouse

A Real Valentine's Love Story: Valentine's Day is a special day for lovers, but it will always be extra special for Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan.

Michael Sullivan and Nancy Sexton met "on the job" about a year ago at the Greenhouse Restaurant. They knew each other before, but working side by side (he is a bartender, and now lounge manager; she is a waitress and sometimes bartender), love bloomed over the last twelve months. They developed a great understanding of one another and decided to make the relationship permanent.

Nancy and Michael were married on Valentine's Day night.

The simple ceremony took place, most appropriately, before the fireplace in the upstairs lounge of the Greenhouse. Marion Brown, Justice of the Peace from Scituate, officiated the romantic wedding with family and close friends standing close by.

Nancy was attended by her sister, Sheila Donohue of Scituate and Phil Gianetti of Marshfield was best man. Nancy is the daughter of Robert D. and Kathleen Donohue of Scituate; her sister and brothers, Gael, Kevin and Jackie were also there.

A buffet was served in the upstairs dining room and music was provided by a local, country rock group, the Zachiarah.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, who live in Marshfield, are planning to take a skiing honeymoon in New Hampshire later on. They will continue working together at the Greenhouse.

Congratulations!

☐If you read the story in last week's Mariner on Christopher Bursk and his book of poems, Standing Watch, you may not have realized that the sketch of the mustached man in the upper right-hand corner of page 13 was of Bursk. Unfortunately, it looked more like an ad for men's jackets (at quick glance). It is a fine rendition of Bursk taken from the jacket of his book.

The artist, Sonja Benson, lives in Hingham and is a free lance portrait artist. She has worked in the courtroom for Channel 2 and more recently, for Channel 7 and for NBC.

☐We know the Selectmen would have thought of it anyway, but credit for the idea of presenting a resolution in honor of Gilbert Tower on the eve of his 95th birthday, must be given to Fred Hansen of WATD radio. Thanks Fred!

Around Town

☐Last summer the McCarthy brothers, Sean, 8, and Brendon, 6, visited the ice hockey rink at the Olympic Village in Lake Placid, New York where they met some of the U.S. Hockey Team players. Their mother, Alice McCarthy, recognized one of them as a former fourth grade student of hers when she taught in Scituate. He name is David Silk.

David and the other players were very nice to the McCarthy boys, as well as other children who came that day to watch them practice. They gave their autographs and flicked each boy a puck from the ice to take home as a souvenir.

Sean and Brendon wrote Davie a postcard wishing him and the U.S. Hockey Team good luck in the Olympics. Last week they got a personal, hand-written reply from David. To small boys with an idol and big dreams of their own, there couldn't be a bigger thrill!

In his letter, David Silk wrote: "The Village is exciting with all the different nationalities and the living quarters, despite what has been written in the news, are very comfortable. We played the Russians yesterday and they beat us 10-3 (pre-Olympic game). They are, without a doubt, the best hockey team that I've ever seen." He went on to wish the boys well in their ice hockey and school work.

With young men on the U.S. hockey team like David Silk, no wonder they are doing so well. We'll be rooting right along with you Sean and Brendon! (He's #8.)

It is important that every shareholder and friend of the Rockland Credit Union understand that this is a financial cooperative.

Savings are the only source of funds for lending.

The Rockland Credit Union would like to do a better job in 1980.

Another $1 a week saved in each of our active accounts will provide more than an additional $3,000,000 this year to lend out to our neighbors.

All of our funds enrich our community.

In true New England tradition, all roads have led to the nearest ice-covered pond these past few weeks. Tumbling off the school bus, it's a question of minutes before youngsters are trudging down the road with skates slung over their shoulder, the older boys armed with hockey sticks. Last week's dusting of snow transformed each pond into a Currier and Ives scene and each child into a rosy-cheeked picture. It also works wonders with their appetites, leaving them hungry for treats such as Leila Imbrogna's fresh, hot

APPLE CARROT CAKE

2¾ c. flour
3 tsp. soda
1 tsp. salt
3 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg
4 eggs
3/4 c. oil
2 c. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
2 c. grated, unpeeled apples, core removed
3 c. shredded unpeeled carrots
1 c. raisins
1 c. walnuts

Bake in 350 degree oven for at least 1 to 1¼ hours in a tube or bundt pan. Leila says this makes a large cake, very nourishing. By increasing the amount of oil to one cup and adding 1 cup uncooked oatmeal, it's even more so.

Tradition has it that we should all be fattening up on cherry pie in honor of George Washington's birthday, but I don't think there's anyone who wouldn't forego custom to substitute instead these delectable cookies. This being vacation week, youngsters will be happy to find the cookie jar filled with these

FORGOTTEN COOKIES

Beat together:
3 egg whites
Pinch of cream of tartar
Pinch of salt
Gradually add, while beating:
1½ c. sugar
Fold in:
1 small package Nestles chocolate bits
1 tsp. vanilla
4 c. Rice Crispies

While preparing, heat oven to 350 degrees. Turn off oven when cookie sheets are inserted. Do not open oven door for eight or nine hours. This is a recipe Hope Poor shares with us, quickly adding that it originated with Bobby Lake. They usually prepare the meringues in the evening and by the next morning they're ready for the cookie jar. Drop the cookies by teaspoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet, being sure to include at least one chocolate bit in each of the 40 cookies.

All New Englanders always know how to stretch out and use up leftovers. Hash browned potatoes for breakfast from last night's dinner, bean sandwiches from Saturday's traditional frankfurter and beans, a hearty pea soup from last week's hambone. Yankees still abide by the old jingle: "Eat it up, wear it out, make it do." Here is Anna Bartlett's way of using up your left-over chopped ham in

HAM CAKES

2 c. left-over chopped ham
1/2 c. dry bread crumbs
2 eggs
1 tsp. prepared mustard
2 tsp. minced onion
1/8 tsp. salt
6 slices canned pineapple

Mix ham, crumbs, eggs, mustard, onion and salt. Shape into six flat patties. Melt shortening in skillet. First brown pineapple rings. Remove pineapple, then brown the patties. Place a ham patty on each pineapple ring.

YOUTH HOCKEY: Alive And Well In Cohasset

By Eddie Finocchiaro

Call him a pioneer and he scoffs. Tell him he's fighting windmills. He just smiles.

But whatever you say to him, do it nicely.

Because James Griffin is fighting in the face of adversity (and double-digit inflation) to keep youth hockey alive on the South Shore.

Griffin, president of the Seahawks youth hockey program, including Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset, took 135 Seahawks into this season, and don't be surprised if they come away with some rather large trophies.

Last year, the 67-4 Squirt A's took first place in all their tournaments but one, the states. They took first in Lake Placid, the Lobster Pot and the Kiwanis tourneys, only to lose to South Boston, a team they beat three times in the regular season, in the state tilt.

So, the ability is there, with three towns worth of talent to draw from. But what about the money?

"Do you know how much that cost me?" said Griffin of a non-league 11-1 win by his Pee Wee A's over Dedham's Pee Wee A's, Saturday. "Between ice time, officials and a timekeeper, upwards of a hundred bucks."

Consider these facts: Ice time ten years ago cost about $40-50 per hour at a private rink, $20-25 at an MDC rink. Now, it goes for $70-80 private, $55 for MDC. Hockey sticks, which went for $3-5 ten years ago, now go for $8-12.

Include gas to get to and from rinks, and other incidentals, such as tape and equipment (it cost about three times as much to outfit a hockey player as it did in 1970), and one is presented with an investment of gargantuan proportions.

Griffin, who spends enough hours at various rinks on the South Shore to qualify for the purple heart (frostbite), thanks the parents.

"We've got a great group of parents here," said Griffin. It's a real effort on their part."

"People are being priced out of the market," said Griffin. "You look at how much it costs to have your kid play hockey, and then the heating bills come in. You've got to set your priorities. This is what's discouraging the younger couples."

But Griffin, who also is president of Scituate Majors Baseball, isn't easily discouraged. No, Sir.

ATTENTION BOATERS

If you are considering an intelligent and exciting alternative to the high cost of boating, or just appreciate handsomely crafted small traditional boats then I urge you to visit our display (A-20) at the Commonwealth Pier Boat Show in Boston Feb. 23 to March 2. Also offered are two very special dinghys, 7' and 10', for the cruising yachtsman who appreciates style and performance.

A 15' Gunning Dory that has been tested and refined for two years will be introduced for the first time. This stylish and sleek new rowing boat is fast, seakindly, light and car toppable! Our workmanship is of the highest standards, production very limited, and prices reasonable.

Enjoy the tidal and open waters of our scenic boating area in classic style with minimum energy expense. See you at the show!

Torin's Tale: Victory In Tourney

By Bob Tis

It was a week of anticipation — and disappointment — for the Cohasset basketball team.

Knowing full well that they had to win both of their remaining games to get to the playoffs, the Skippers overpowered Norwell, 67-45, Tuesday night, but were taken to the hoop in Friday night's game against Duxbury, 65-45.

In Tuesday's game, Cohasset took control before the half and after a cold first quarter, streaking to a 32-21 halftime lead. From then on, the Skippers continued to dominate. Playmaking guard Mark Goff led the Skippers with 18, and Bill Kurtz popped in 17. Bill Taylor and Pat Duffy also hit double figures in the game, leaving only one more obstacle — the Duxbury game — between the Skippers and the playoffs.

But the tables were turned in the Duxbury game.

That second quarter, which was like a gust of wind to the broad-reaching Skippers Tuesday was like a dead calm during Race week for them Friday.

The Skippers ran the Spinnaker up the mast in the first quarter, and led by one with three quarters to go. But Dragon Gordon Cushing stole Cohasset's wind in the second, tearing up the sails on his way to a 30-point night.

The Skippers remained down by margins of eight to 12 points for the rest of the game, but were highlighted by the last hurrah of Goff, who had 16, and 13 by the returning Kurtz.

The Skipper's last trip uptown, so to speak, will be a non-league tilt against Roxbury Thursday.

Wrestling

Torin Sweeny has done Cohasset proud.

In a qualifying tournament where only the most elite of the very elite (four in each weight class) are picked to go to the state tournament, Sweeny proved he's one of the best grapplers in Eastern Massachusetts.

Sweeny won his first match, but then lost to Terry Fitzgerald of Dedham, putting him into the consolation round. Still, with the chance to go to more post-season competition, he beat John Harrington of Duxbury, a wrestler who pinned him earlier in the season, in the first consolation.

"This match gave me all the confidence I needed, as well as the momentum for the finals," said Sweeny, and confidence and momentum he needed. Because his next match would be against Fitzgerald, the man who knocked him to the consolation round in the first place.

And the pressure gave Sweeny added momentum, as his take-down ability helped him clinch the match to take third place in the meet.

Where Are You, Bob Tis?

Perhaps you're wondering why the answers to Tis' Quiz didn't run last week. But then again, perhaps you aren't.

Well, if you are, there's nothing we can do. All indications are that Tis skipped town and went to Bermuda or something for vacation. He sent his copy by carrier pigeon.

We'll try to get the answers from him next week.

A Cold Draft

By Lois Martin

Perhaps I misunderstood. Surely Uncle Sam doesn't want me. But last week during a conversation about the proposed draft, a man was saying he might be included in the service group and he pointed directly at me and said, "You, too!"

Now I'm here to tell you the day America's safety is dependent on the likes of me to keep the enemies away from our shores, we're in trouble.

The draft might well be a necessary act of preparation, readiness. And that's an unpleasant thought in and of itself. Most of us are eyeing our children and hoping we get to wave them off to college instead of to war.

But the truth is, if they start coming after me, if the enlistment posters start featuring a woman dressed up in patriotic red, white and blue, pointing at me, saying "Aunt Ruth wants you," we've got a lot of adapting to do.

Let me say this. Women are different from men. And older women who've been housewives and mothers and workers are not the same as the 20 year olds without stretch marks.

For one thing the Army doesn't know what 4-F is till they've run me through their physicals. But if they take me, they're taking a 4-F person. Most of my crowd would be willing to exercise for the sake of the country. But unless you put it on a patriotic basis, we won't go more than three sit-ups at a time.

And we're not going without our aprons. A good old-fashioned woman puts that apron on when she means business. Which leads us to another facet of the armed forces. Where do you get your uniforms? The very thought of a fieldful of women wearing the same outfits is appalling. And we prefer to pick from sale items, reduced, irregulars left over from non combatant units in the 40s.

What would Army pantyhose look like? Would be do better to enlist for smarter styling with the Navy or the Marines?

And what about boot camp? They're giving older women college credits based on life experiences. Would we be allowed to skip boot camp on the basis of 20 years confrontation in the kitchen?

Women are used to volunteering, you know. That'll be no problem. But on committees we're in the habit of rotating leadership, taking turns at responsibilities. Would the Pentagon officials be willing to set up colonelships on that basis? I suppose those military career people are set on their type of discipline, the saluting, clicking of heels, quick, unquestioning response to orders.

We'll have none of that. We've been quick as a wink to put a sick person to bed, to make special lunches, and to drive carpools of queasy children to summer camp. But that was natural instinctive response to need.

Some of us have been inclined to react stubbornly to outright orders. We have to know why we're asked to do something. We must believe in it, that it's morally and legally acceptable as well as the most efficient way to get the job done. That considered, one can see the problems that might arise when I am ordered to jump from an airplane, told to hurl a hand grenade the length of a football field, or commanded to launch a torpedo.

The suggestion that we'd pout or sulk when things didn't go our way is unfair. We're amenable to an apology from any sargeant and we make forgiving overtures ourselves if we've been to blame in any way for a misunderstanding.

The weapons will be a problem. We don't like violence. We've been after our children not to fight all their lives. Perhaps recruiters would do better to allow us to land on beaches with brooms and wooden spoons. Smartmouths have said we'd talk the enemy to death. That's not so. We'd reason with them, that's all. And if it's women from other countries we'd meet on the battlefield, we'd be interested in their way of life, their customs. And we know we'd learn they're not much different from us. They too would rather be home, merging their efforts at homemaking with abilities on the job.

In fact the most difficult task the Pentagon will have will be making us want to fight, to kill. In our history only one thing has done that — an unkind word about our husbands or our children. We can take the taunts about ourselves. Say one word about those we love, and we're fighting mad.

If they're determined to get us on land, sea and sky, it's possible some of us will be there with men left home to keep the homefires burning because of flat feet and waning vision. We'll write to them from fox holes fearing a 'Dear Jane' letter with every mail call. And we won't stand for inferior cooking the from the mess hall, let alone eat food out of those boring little tin cans.

A word, though, of resistance. If Uncle Sam needs me to fight wars, to protect this country that enables the best possible life on this earth, does he not need me to prevent war? Men have power, resolve; women have strength, sensitivity. And the day all attributes are put to work in the Pentagon, yea, the White House, the day the advice is asked of people who will defend but not provoke, we're more than ready.

Women in America are indeed a tremendous resource. But if the service is to remain 'selective,' those in power will think twice about drafting matrons for violence in behalf of the country.

And frankly, the notion of America's battleships womanned by people in midi blouses is unsettling. May our aprons always have flour on them, not gunpowder.

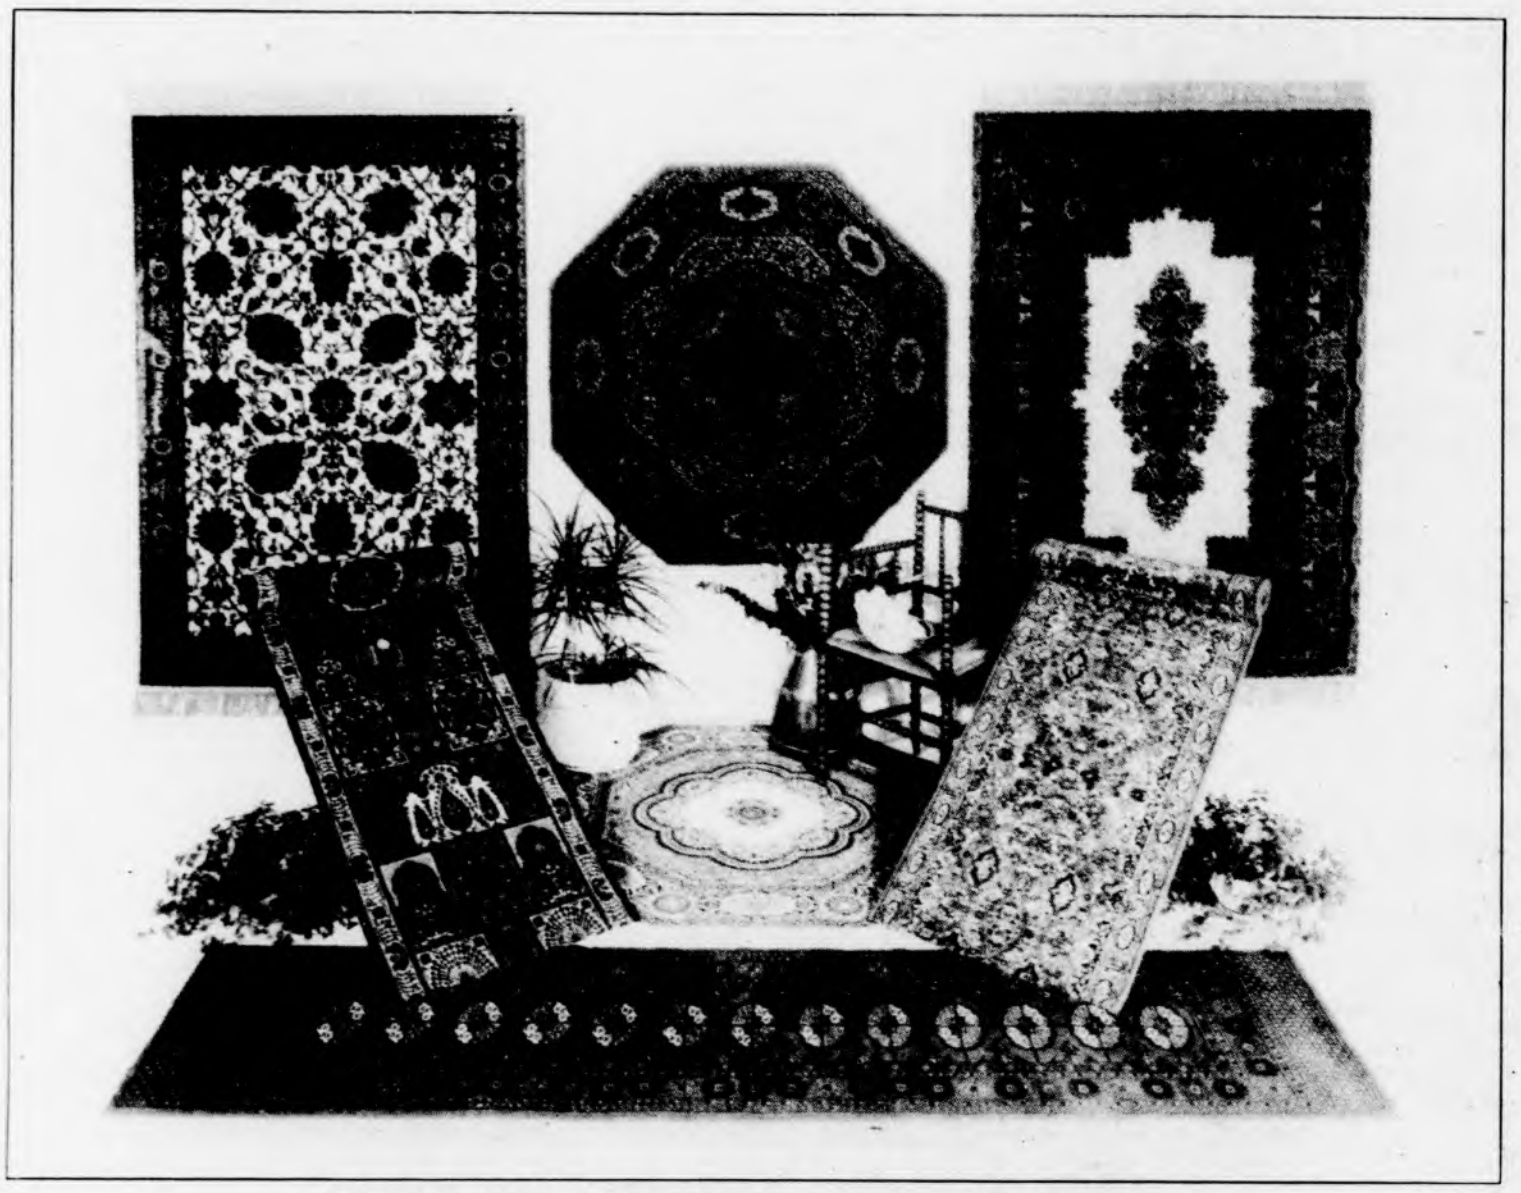
America's most extensive and best-selling collection of Oriental Design Rugs from Couristan



SEMI-ANNUAL SALE

NOT ALL RUGS ARE BORN EQUAL . . .
Read why Couristan's Oriental Design Rugs are the finest available today.

Locked-In-Weave

Each yarn is securely anchored and woven clear through to the back. This means that the thousands of tufts in every square yard of a Couristan are looped "under and over" the cross-threads and pulled tight so the face of the rug stands erect and firm. The process is exclusive and patented by Couristan.

Crystal-Point Finish

The tip of the yarn is finished with a crystal-like point — not cut "straight across" as in ordinary rugs. This adds greater definition to the design and a shimmer-like finish to the entire rug. "Crystal Point" is another exclusive Couristan feature.

Hand-Knotted Fringe

The crowning touch in the making of many Couristans is the fringe trim. Each strand of the fringe is individually hand-knotted. Ordinary rugs may be finished with sewn on strips of machine-made fringe. Hand insertion of each strand into the edge of the rug and hand-knotting one fringe at a time achieves a distinctive touch of elegance.

Delineated Design

Another feature of Couristan oriental design rugs is the unique manner in which the outline of each flower, figure or abstract design is clearly delineated. The accentuation enriches the rug-coloration.

Deep, luxury pile

The wool used in the looming of a Couristan rug is carefully selected and woven into a long-fibred yarn by an exclusive process that makes the pile extremely thick, deep and resilient. Twisting of each individual yarn strengthens its durability and resistance to wear.

100% Worsted Wool

The famous Woolmark is sewn in back of Couristar all-wool rugs, certifying that the quality and weight of the wool conforms to rigid quality standards. Wool wears better — is "lively" and resilient, holds color brilliance, cleans easily, and has greater fire-resistance.

For a limited time only...Couristan's largest collection of Oriental design rugs are specially priced. Choose from the greatest selection of sizes, patterns and styles available, including the shapes of today. All are re-created of 100% pure worsted wool for extraordinary durability and luxury. Power-loomed in Belgium with Couristan's patented weaving techniques, Kashimar is intricately detailed with rich "come-alive" colorations. Fringes knotted entirely by hand add that final touch of elegance to each Kashimar Oriental Design Rug, a jewel to be cherished for years to come.

Naturally it's a...

Informational Meetings On Plant Size - Area

By Tanna Kasperowicz

At the Valentine's Night meeting on the wastewater treatment plant site everybody more or less figured the town would have the final say on what size plant it wished to be built.

As late as last week Town Counsel Blake Thaxter wrote a letter to selectmen saying in his legal opinion town meeting will decide the issue of plant size.

However, William Montuori, chairman of the sewer commission, said recently the present board of commissioners will in fact have to make that decision after all.

"What you learn very quickly in this business is that you can make the right decision, you can make the wrong decision, or you can make an indecision. The problem arises when you make no decision and you don't know what you've got," Montuori said.

He doesn't feel the size of the plant will be or really is the issue some citizen groups are making it.

At a series of information meetings to be held in the near future, the first one to be held Monday, March 10 at the CHS auditorium, sewer commissioners will present two separate sets of statistics to the town: the economics of and operating costs of the size of the plant (whether 0.4 MGD, 0.5 MDG or a 1 MDG plant. The same number of engineers would be required to operate any size plant).

The second set of facts will relate to the area(s) of the town to be sewered.

Last week Metcalf & Eddy Engineers were instructed by commissioners to prepare some basic information regarding the above for the impending informational sessions.

Although Montuori doesn't have the Metcalf & Eddy facts in hand, an engineer himself, he has few doubts as to what the facts will produce. "To a certain extent, the numbers are already there."

He also has little doubt that once citizens see the

Something For Everyone On Cohasset Common Sunday

The rumor that Ronald Reagan, hopeful GOP candidate for president, is coming to Cohasset Common Sunday at 2 p.m. to try out for a part in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's "My Sister Eileen" Spring production is not true (try-outs are 2-5 at Town Hall).

Good grief. Who ever started that one? Reagan most assuredly will be on the common at 2 p.m., but he will be the honored guest of a South Shore rally being held on his behalf.

Drama Club officials are hoping they can get the actor-turned-politician to say a few inspiring words to the try-out cast. Perhaps he can even offer some assistance with lines (a good photo session).

Ron Massa, president of the club, said, however...that should things crumble for Reagan Tuesday...tryouts will be held again March 9 from 2-5 p.m..."And there are 35 parts for people of all ages."

Providing the tepid temperatures turn out along with the anticipated crowds...Sunday on Cohasset Common might well resemble the week-before-Christmas.

Not a few merchants are planning to open their shops to catch some spinoff from the Reagan Rally. Serious Reagan supporters will follow him to Hugo's for a $25 per person fundraiser (call 383-0304 to pre-register, drop-ins will not be greeted with enthusiasm).

People with carriages and kids and dogs trialing behind can continue on to the Cohasset Community Center's open house which is being held from 4-8 p.m. The attractions there are shelter, wine, cheese and a view of some of the major renovations done in the kitchen and the function room.

An alternative to the CCC is the Rev. John Benbow's talk at the Unitarian Parish House at 4 p.m. Entitled "The Overdue Crystal Ball," it's about the recent conference he attended as one of 13 Massachusetts delegates at the White House on the future of libraries.

In the meantime...the local press corps, thanks to Phil Murray, our state rep.'s right-hand man, is being set-up with security clearances. And Republicans and even some Democrats are wondering what to wear to the common, Sunday.

The Incredible Shrinking Cohasset Football Team

As the eight other towns in the South Shore League get larger and larger . . . Cohasset gets smaller and smaller.

The sewering of the town could change the unfair proportions at a later date. But presently school officials and the school committee feel the smaller Cohasset football team exposes itself to greater injury as a result of over-tired players, and then the consistent "no-win" situation isn't that great for the morale.

At Monday's meeting, the school committee agreed to pursue the possibility of pulling football only out of the South Shore League.

School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said if pulling only football out of the league is possible, Cohasset would look into an independent schedule.

Clark Chatterton, athletic director, said eight years ago w henWest Bridgewater pulled out of the league it had to drop out of all league sports. Cohasset wants to continue in the league in all other areas.

There's no doubt about it, Chatterton said. "We've definitely got a problem. We're the smallest school in the league by far. We've got 600 students in grades 9-12. Our next closest school has 750 and that goes up to 1,000.

When the Cohasset team plays ball it does so with a 13-14 man squad as opposed to another team's 22-man squad — and that larger squad is comprised of "older men," — seniors and juniors. The Cohasset team plays with scrappy sophs . . . and has no town youth program pumping experienced players onto the squad.

It may be great for Cohasset kids . . . but the alternative sports offered at Cohasset also draws a lot of potential gridsters into soccer . . . track. . . while larger schools appear to offer less alternatives and get stronger teams.

At present, the school committee is appealing to the South Shore League for a release. The next stop would be an appeal to the State MIAA Board.

Fighting It Out Over Energy

On a motion by Vice Chairman Frank England, the school committee voted 5-1 to submit its budget to the town for a 3.9 per cent increase over this year's budget of $3.53 M. But that increase does not include a projected increase in energy costs of approximately $129,000 — a conservative estimate according to School Supt. Dr. John Maloney.

England's motion was voted only after school committeewoman Diana Kornet's motion for a seven per cent budget increase, including energy, ended in the familiar 3-3 (no action) vote.

England feels the school department should offer its own recommendation on how to save $129,000 in the budget. Thus far the school department has been given no direction (i.e. votes).

Chairman Jack Langmaid said in a phone interview Tuesday morning: "We've got to fight it out."

Presumably the great energy debate will begin at the committee's next scheduled budget session — Monday, March 3 and Tuesday, March 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the home economics room.

Langmaid doesn't think England's philosophy on having the school department make its own cuts is realistic.

Cohasset's Week

Primary Data

A total of 4,584 Cohasset residents are registered to vote Tuesday, March 4 in the primary.

Assistant Town Clerk Frances Marks said there have been a large number of persons switching their party to independent this year so they can choose which primary in which to cast their vote.

While Ms. Marks wouldn't even guess as to what the turn-out might be for the primary, she felt it would be a "large one."

Voting will take place at the Town Hall auditorium from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at which time the polls will close.

The breakdown of parties in the town is as follows: Independents, 2,080; Democrats, 1,201; Republicans, 1,303.

Registration

The board of registrars will be in session at the town hall on the following dates to register voters prior to the April 5 town meeting.

Tuesday, March 4 from 7:30 p.m.-9 p.m.

Saturday, March 15 from noon-8 p.m.

Monday, March 17 from noon-10 p.m.

Old Salt House

Charles Fink, chairman of the board of trustees to the Cohasset Conservation Trust, has announced that work will begin shortly to restore Cohasset's Old Salt House Pier. The pier is located on Border Street between the Town Landing and Hugo's restaurant.

Formerly known as Bates Wharf, the pier was severely damaged in 1978 by the February storm and has been deteriorating ever since due to ice floe abrasion and tidal incursion.

The pier walls will be rebuilt and grouted, and new fill and blacktop will be put in.

In addition, two new fuel tanks and pumps for both gasoline and diesel will be installed to replace the existing units broken up by the storm.

Gaffey Yachts, Inc. of Cohasset, will lease the pier and the Old Salt House from the Trust and will provide year round fuel service and marine supplies to both private and commercial boats.

The work is expected to be completed in time for summer boating.

Ambrose Land

All along the press has mistakenly referred to the now new location of the town's wastewater facility as the Jones Conservation Land.

Selectmen received a letter last week from Paul Jones, former owner of the land, stating that while he has no reservations at all about the town's using the land for its treatment plant, he said he wished the press would stop referring to it as the "Jones" property.

That's because Jones said Ambrose Realty Co. was formerly located on that land. The realty company was named after a horse named Ambrose. And in the future he would like the press and the public to refer to the location as "Ambrose Unit No. 1."

We stand corrected.

Public Hearing

A public hearing will be held at Town Hall at 8 p.m. to act upon a request from a variance from Patricia and Edward Siskin of 1 Forest Avenue.

The applicants seek relief from the by-law which requires existing structure to be located 15 feet from the side lot. The structure is located 14.26 feet from the side lot.

Story-Telling

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will sponsor a Storyteller's Workshop on Thursday, March 6 at 1 p.m. to acquaint adults with techniques in sharing literature with pre-school age children.

The intent of the series is to prepare volunteers to lead pre-school story hour programs at the library under the direction of the children's librarians. The program whas been a great success for several years.

There is no cost or obligation involved for any participant. To register or for further information, please call JoAnn Mitchell or Marily Pope in the children's room at 383-1348 any afternoon after 2 p.m.

Correction

Two weeks ago we ran what we thought were the current desires of town employees regarding a pay increase and benefits. It has been brought to our attention that we printed last year's request.

This week the Cohasset Public Works Department employees will send a letter to the personnel board requesting that selectmen adopt a resolution at the next special town meetng to disband the existing personnel board (a recommending board) and create a three-member committee consisting of the following:

—One member of the board of selectmen

—One member of the existing personnel board

—One professional negotiator.

Insurance

Vice Chairman Frank England and John Raftery, business manager, were elected a committee of two to investigate the school's business practices and insurance.

England and Raftery will report their findings to the school committee at a later date. Areas to be investigated are the school department's liability protection, and insured contents of school buildings.

The investigation came about as a result of the committee's having received a letter from Frederic Wood of Petersen Realtors and Insurance Agency.

X-ing Civil Service

...Selectmen certainly do seem to have problems with Civil Service as it relates to the police department. Even Civil Service admits it is cumbersome, fossilized...and needs lots of attention in all areas.

But unless selectmen come up with a solid alternative to Civil Service (and figures on what the proposed divorce would cost) we're not going to give their annual town meeting article on the same our editorial blessing.

Other towns have pulled their police departments out of Civil Service and have presumably survived the separation. But what did it cost those communities? What additional problems cropped up? Did the benefits outweigh the problems?

Voting to eliminate this system will not necessarily save money or solve problems.

The peace of mind selectmen may gain from the separation may be well worth it to them and to the town in the long run. But we still want to hear the details in 1980. We don't want to be surprised in 1981 with a generous financing article detailing the money we will now need to support another system with its administrators, secretaries, file clerks, psychologists, typewriters, testing room, paper clips.

Here's A Lot Of Boosting!

By Chet Ellis

"Gimme a boost, will ya" is a typical kids request to his buddies when a fence needs to be scaled or a tree climbed.

And so it is with Cohasset High School Sports, an activity that can use a boost if anything can. At least that was the opinion of several high spirited citizens back in 1977, when Cohasset Boosters, Inc. was formed.

Apparently, a suitable tribal ritual was needed to present the amateur atheletes with the usual accoutrements of success: varsity letters, trophies, etc. The Friday morning assembly just wouldn't do.

Too many unappreciative jokesters and not enough spirit to provide the right atmosphere. To correct this situation, the Boosters then took on the task of providing three "sports award dinners" per year.

Coincidentally, the Winter sports dinner is coming up March 6th (next week!), at the high school cafeteria. Any parent who plans to go should get his (or her) three-fifty into CBI's steely-eyed, tight-fisted treasurer, Nancy Sladen, Box 511, Cohasset. The kids go free. Next week's dinner will cover all teams; basketball, hockey, wrestling, gymnastics, and, of course, the cheerleaders.

Cohasset Boosters, Inc. is not the only such organization to make felt its support in the land of the large rock.

The Cohasset Hockey Boosters, a group of team players parents, hockey buffs, and over-the-hill pucksters, organized in the early seventies, provides intra-team boosting for our yearly group of budding Bobby Orrs. Jackets, trophies (MVP, Scholar-Athlete, etc.) and an annual dinner trip to Polcari's are featured.

Probably the best known sports booster group in town is the Gridiron Club. I say best known since all of us at one time or another have been approached to buy a raffle ticket, have bought a hot dog at a football game, or have gone to a Gridiron dance at Hugo's.

Organized in 1970, and by far the wealthiest of all the booster groups, the Gridiron Club provides scholarships to scholar-atheletes in not only football but other sports as well. Last year for instance, the Club dispensed $2500 to college bound seniors.

In addition to the usual jackets, special awards, kick-off breakfasts and post season dinners, the Gridiron Club provides announcing at football games (remember old velvet throat Bob Walls?), programs and a snack bar. That's a lot of boosting for a fifteen member group.

To complement these existing "organized" boosters groups, there exists at least two other unofficial clusters wrapped around the sport with which they identify.

For example, there is the "Grappler Groupies," inspirationally led by Rod (Smiling Jack) Hobson and Marilyn ("go get-em T") Sweeney, parents of members of the Cohasset Wrestling Team. In addition to the inevitable jackets and T-shirts, the Groupies plan to send several promising body benders to a wrestling instructional camp this summer. Move over Gorgeous George!

Last but not least, we have the Gymnastic Team Mothers, a group of semi-professional nail biters who provide quiet encouragement and emergency medical attention to their talcum toed daughters on and off the mat.

In contrast to the Grappler Groupies, whose enthusiasm during a match is loud and vociferous, the Gymnastic Team Mothers must suffer in stoic silence as their girls do slow cart wheels on a four inch wide balance beam or double-flips on a pair of parallel bars six feet off the mat.

There's only one thing missing. How about a Boosters Club to boost the Boosters Clubs? We could have jackets, T-shirts, give special awards and . . .

No One's Mentioned The Plant Type

To the Editor:

What happens now?

Will the sewer commissioners interview other engineers?

Three other engineering firms should be interviewed or we should get proposals from others.

In other towns, in one week you can decide on a new firm. Interview Monday night, choose an engineer by Friday night — not the six weeks as quoted by the commissioners.

No one has mentioned the type of plant. Will the commissioners ask for citizen input?

Letters

The facilities report states bio-disk as the recommended type treatment.

Metcalf & Eddy has never built a bio-disk plant. Would you like to look out and see 12 big plastic Quonset huts? Well this is what Metcalf & Eddy has chosen for you.

You must make yourself known on this. Do you want to buy a type treatment no one else in Massachusetts has?

To the Editor:

It was so kind of Karin Bartow to write such a fine article about my son. I felt duly apologetic for not having yet renewed my subscription.

We enjoy the Mariner and Chet Ellis's column in particular.

Several Insurance Questions Raised

(ED.'S NOTE: Selectmen had no comment last week regarding the following points raised by Frederic Wood Jr. of the Petersen Realtors & Insurance Agency).

Members of the Board of Selectmen:

Thank you for your letter of December 31, 1979 with regard to the manner in which the Town of Cohasset is acquiring its insurance coverage.

While our continual correspondence with regard to this matter over the past numbers of years has failed to result in a reasonable or businesslike approach to insurance purchasing by the Town, I wished to make the following comments with regard to the abysmal manner in which the Town has been represented with regard to this activity:

(1) In 1977, the advisability of obtaining a published blanket fire insurance rate on town buildings was acknowledged by the Board of Selectmen and determined to be an appropriate future requirement in connection with the acquisition of insurance coverage. Nothing has been done about this, and the failure to obtain such a published rate makes it extremely difficult for the Town to effectively compete for low cost fire insurance.

(2) The failure to provide an accurate and complete list of Town properties makes it extremely difficult to obtain comprehensive insurance proposals.

(3) The package specifications requiring agreed amount, actual cash value, and 100% co-insurance and blanket coverage is an inaccurate specification and does not correctly describe insurance coverages available.

You have not defined which of these specifications should be used to provide the desired coverage. This could prove costly to the town if there is a loss.

(4) The time span allowed for submitting proposals is woefully inadequate and is perceived by me as an effort to chill any effort to obtain truly competitive proposals.

(5) The absence of a modern reporting and control system for claims does not permit the Town to provide accurate in-

It's Still 110 Degrees In Saudi Arabia

(ED.'S NOTE: This is the second letter the Mariner has received from the Johnston s, who are trapped in Saudi Arabia and who write funny, funny letters. They will be home in Cohasset for R & R for a few weeks early in March. If any of their friends are planning to hold a camel-soup dinner for them, please let us know! The mails are so slow, we'll probably see them at Kimball's before they see their article in the Mariner.).

VIEWS FROM SAUDI PART II

Thank you all for the little notes we have received on our first article in the Cohasset Mariner. We have yet to receive our copy of the Mariner but hear that you enjoyed it.

It's funny how we miss the small things like Fred Piepenbrink delivering the mail each morning, not that Fred's job is small, heaven knows the amount of magazines heusedto drop off at our house. You would think we were part of the Montgomery-Ward Company.

We must await the arrival of the courier from AlKhobar, 400 miles away, who makes the trip each day. We all gather outside our little Post Office and hope that we will be the lucky ones to receive mail from "the other side."

BEHEADINGS

News has been pretty well curtailed from us as to the World situation. We appear to be in no trouble as far as the Saudi government is concerned. They quickly take care of any problems, an example being the beheading of the 63 people who invaded Mecca last month.

They gave each of the large cities so many of the convicted men and the cities, in turn, held public viewing of the beheading. We declined the invitation to wate ..

I am enclosing a little article from our local Arab News concerning the punishment for stealing. You just don't fool around here.

Now to more pleasant things. We had our biggest rain storm the past two days. The largest in 37 years. Can you imagine, grass is even growing in the desert. The only problem is that there is no sewage in the cities for water drain-off. It just sits there in huge puddles. They do have large suction trucks that come along the main roads and remove some of it. Just image the field day the Cohasset sewage commission would have over here . . .

Our closest town is named Ras Al Khafji. It is about 30 minutes North of us and about 30 minutes North of it is the Kuwait Border. Marie does all her shopping there.

Picture if you can Cohasset, Main Street. Remove the paved street, substitute sand and pot holes and you have Ras Al Khafji. Take places like Figueiredo's Fish Market, Cook Works, Wee Spinnaker and In-Stitches; knock out all the windows, place corregated sheet metal around the buildings, remove the front doors and have Larry Fone, Ann Hublitz, Bobbi Cox and Linda Halloran standing outside the storefront beseeching you to enter their little boutique. Of course ladies, don't forget the complete black gown and veil you must wear at all times.

To cap it off, drop 30-40 donkeys, sheep and camels walking around and you have our Saudi Cohasset. See what all of you are missing . . .

MACKENZIE LEFT

We didn't mention in our first newsletter but there were five of us here from Cohasset. Besides the Johnston's, we had Tod MacKenzie, also from Fairoaks Lane.

Tod made the mistake of saying he wouldn't mind coming to Saudi as we were lying at Sandy Beach last year. Tod's best comment about Saudi, which he told me each day was, "What are we doing here?" Tod returned home in January and has decided not to return here. We will miss him greatly and wish him luck in his new adventures.

What do you think of the price of gold? We had thought that we would be able to get some "goodies" at a reasonable price but the gold souks (shops) are empty of customers. People over here are just not buying; like the South Shore Plaza, you just do a lot of looking.

We are completely disgusted to hear that your weather is almost as good as here at Ras Al Mishab. Here we move 8,000 miles to get away from the cold and you folks have the mildest winter in recent history. We assume that when we arrive March 4 you will welcome us with the proverbial winter blizzard with five feet of snow. Please don't do us any favors . . .

MORE CAMEL

Eating is still an adventure for us. We have learned to eat what is placed in front of us and then ask what it is. Saves a lot of embarrassment especially when you find that good piece of roast beef was really camel. It is going to be great to go into the Red Lion and look at a menu without someone saying it is upside down and you have just ordered the owner a la king.

Jeff and Susan continue to do well in school. They are really picking up all types of different words (sometimes I wonder what they are saying to me) in various languages. We have quite a mixture of nationalities here. We go from British, Dutch, Greek, Turkish, Korean, Pakistani, Thailanders and Philippinos to us few Americans. It is very nice to participate in the native customs and ceremonies. You should have seen Tod MacKenzie and myself dancing at the Thai New Years Party. No women allowed . . . They really appreciate our joining in.

Celebrated Marie's BIG birthday last week (am sworn to secrecy as to date and age) with many of our new friends. With an international group of people invited to the party, it was a festive and unusual time.

RELIGIOUS POLICEMEN

We made our monthly trip to Al Khobar this week. The three hour ride went by very fast; probably we started at 0530 in the morning. ALL Saudi stores must close from 1200 noon to 1600 (4 p.m. for you landlubbers) to observe the Holy period. They have men called "Matowars" who go up and down the streets carring long wooden poles. If they catch you in a store after 1200, you can expect a swift whack on the ankles and told to get out of the store. The Matowars are actually "Religious Policemen" and have very broad powers to apprehend anyone who defies the Koran. This means from dress codes to taking pictures of the women, etc.

One of our big events is counting the number of days before we come home for our R & R (Rest and Relaxation). Right now we are pretty positive that we will be back in Cohasset the first week in March for a couple of weeks and then back here to RAM via a couple of stop-overs in Europe. We would like to see some of the historic cities particularly Vienna and Geneva.

We are sure that you have been waiting with bated breath and we are happy to inform you that this is the time when the camels start having little camels. We have seen numerous babies running beside their mothers. They are really cute (if you can call a camel cute). We hear that if you get close enough to a camel to upset him/her (see ladies, I am still trying), the first indication they will give up is to spit at you. I can't imagine (and won't even try) to think of what kind of mess you would be in in that state . . .

The weather has turned a little cooler though the days are getting longer. Before we know it, it will be back up to 110 degrees. Can hardly wait.

Well, we will end for now. We hope you are all well and getting over the winter colds, wet shoes and lost gloves. Only problem we have is keeping the sand out of our sandals. Want to swap??????

Best regards,
The Johnston's

Thieves' Hands Amputated

TWO men found guilty of stealing, had their right hands amputated following Friday prayers in Jeddah.

The accused, Ahmed Salib Yafie and Muhammed Ali Najee Yemeni, who were caught breaking open a safe which they had stolen from a grocery store, admitted their guilt.

An Interior Ministry statement warned all would-be offenders that the law would be strictly applied and that those who abuse legislation, will be dealt with "most severely."

Bosom Buddies March 14

"Bosom Buddies" will be one of the many songs to be sung by Beth Goff and Marge Ritter on Friday, March 14, 8 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Auditorium during the "Evening of Entertainment and Fashion" sponsored by the Cohasset High School cheerleaders as a fund-raiser for new cheerleading uniforms.

The girls along with some professional models will be showing outfits from Nottinghams of Hingham, the Good Sport shop and Classics of Cohasset.

Grandparents are Mrs. Ann Watts of Scituate and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Figueiredo of Cohasset.

□J. Michael and Julia Wieland of Elm Street are equally as proud of their new offspring, a 7 lb. 7 oz. son, Russell Taylor, born on Feb. 15 at the South Shore Hospital.

Grandparents are Loretta Kibler Wieland, John M. Wieland Jr., Elspeth Banker Wheeler and Robert G. Wheeler, all of Baltimore.

Great grandparents are John M. Wieland Sr. and Alfretta Wilcox Banker, both of Baltimore.

MY REGISTRATION? I'm registered at the Carriage House Nursery School — Adam Reid, age 4.

These eager "Helpers" also made Valentines for the residents of the Ripley Road Nursing Home which they hand-delivered. They sang their "Valentines" at the nursing home, a Valentine day song too.

Troop leaders, Penny Redfield and Jane Russell, provided assistance and enthusiasm.

□It's hard to imagine that any of us could become saturated with euphoric prose about the U.S. Hockey Team's achievement at the XIII Winter Olympics, but, guaranteed in two weeks, we will be drowning in it.

So, for the present, I plan to add printed congratulations to that remarkable team of young men (yea! #8, and the other outstanding Mass. players) for an exciting series of games.

Thank you U.S. Hockey Team, for an underdog win. It's an unmeasurable boost for national pride!!

Energy Debate

He feels the school department needs guidelines. "The fact of the matter is we've always given them guidelines. There will have to be a strategy. At the present time I don't see how we can get anything other than the energy increase in the budget."

While Langmaid said it may well be possible to scrape up as much as $25,000-$30,000 from the budget . . . he didn't feel the entire $129,000 could be salvaged from it.

"I don't know where Frank thinks it's (the energy money) going to come from . . . some of the members of the committee think it's going to fly down from somewhere."

On the other hand, England feels the school department has been getting budget-cutting suggestions from the school committee throughout budget deliberations.

Maloney disagreed. "I need the vote of the committee. I only hear one voice out of six," he said.

England wants the school department to consider cutting music and art programs, a photography course. He feels the entire school department is oversubscribed in various areas.

Maloney presented the committee with additional considerations to the proposed 1980-81 school budget as being increased school registrations expected as a result of 40-60 units of new homes in the town, an inflation rate of 18 per cent which will effect taxtbooks, supplies. And the possibility of additional transportation costs.

Maloney recommended the committee look into hiring a federal, state and grantsmanship writer at a salary of $16,000 as a means of preventing the school department from being faced with sharp increases and being "A way to stay level." The committee did not discuss the request for the grant writer.

Plant Size

facts before them, they will make the right decision regarding the size of the plant — that being the 1 MGD plant.

No town meeting vote is necessary on plant size (afterall), or the design area. But the immediate design area will be confined to Phase I of the plan.

"Town meeting can override us at a later time — or the new sewer commissioners may terminate our contracts — they can do whatever they want. But we have to select new consultants and we have to make our decisions on design area and the size of the plant before town meeting," Montuori said.

Asked why citizens should go along with a 1 MGD plant, Montuori said basically because it will only cost the town $100,000 more to construct a one million gallon tank. In addition, there may be no federal funding available in the future to rennovate a smaller plant.

"The area to be sewered has nothing to do with the size of the plant at this time. Areas to be sewered will be decided independently, and the town will have control over those areas."

Although Montuori didn't say so, at the rate of growth the town is experiencing even without sewerage, by the time the town has constructed a 0.5 MGD plant in 1984 it might find itself again in violation of its discharge permit.

Montuori said the 1 MGD plant is important in other areas also. Since initially it would only be used half time, it would be available as back-up equipment.

Regarding the sewering of the town, he said of the three alternatives offered, the capital cost to the town does not increase appreciably, as 90 per cent of the costs will be picked up by the federal government.

What will be expensive to residents is the operating costs of the Jones land site over a period of years. "Pumping costs, electricity costs, will get bigger and bigger."

Montuori doesn't envy the soon-to-be elected, entirely new board of sewer commissioners their jobs. "They'll have one helluva problem. They'll have to determine betterments to be charged for people on the system. They'll also have to determine if the people in the present area who are already paying betterments should be required to pay additional betterments.

"The total cost of sewerage to the town is not the true cost to the town. The town could charge anywhere from 0-100 per cent betterment charges, recouping all or most of its money by charging back to people on the system."

Of course the more people who share in the costs, the less expensive betterment costs would be.

It hasn't been a great year for any of the sewer commissioners . . . all of whom lost many hours of personal and business time while about the town's businesss.

Montuori feels in spite of some citizens' strong feelings against the commissioners' initial choice of the school lands site abutting the Music Circus for a plant site, before the Jones site became available, "All our judgments turned out to be somewhat correct."

Still Cheating After All These Years. . .

By Yoanna Zotos

Over the centuries man has learned that "honesty is the best policy." However, today's generation of young people accepts cheating as a very practical way of passing a course.

On the high school level, one can not simply point out who cheats and who does not cheat; for whether the crime was large or small, most students have cheated at some time during their education. Even so, there are basically two types of students that resort to cheating on a frequent basis: the actively involved student who has high aims for college and the lazy, apathetic student who relies on everyone else's efforts to graduate except his own.

The former finds that his many areas of interest demand too much attention from him at one time; consequently, the time concentrated on his academics lessens, and cheating is the convenient way to make up for the negligence of his studies.

The latter, on the other hand, cheats just for the sake of cheating. Whenever the opportunity arises, he cheats regardless of the fact that he can do the work or not. His reasons for acting in this way stem from an addiction to cheating and not just from being in a forced situation.

Despite the circumstances involved, it is still not wise to become a habitual cheater; for if a person continually adopts a mode of cheating during his formative years, he will undoubtedly carry this action into adulthood.

As Marvin Stone, magazine editor, indicates: "How can we ignore the thought that a military officer may come to a crucial combat command not knowing something he is certified to know through passing an exam — on which he cheated?" Or, as Jerry Green, a university official, points out: "If a student spits into someone else's test tube (to eliminate competition), he could become the physician who just says he performed some diagnostic test on a patient, but actually didn't."

Granted, the circumstances have to be improved. But if we continually emphasize that students are justified to cheat in certain stituations, then we can be sure to see cheating reaching epidemic proportions.

One might then ask, "Can cheating ever be stopped?" Some argue that the human impulse to cheat will always overpower the desire not to. Others reason that the pressure to keep up with academic competition forces the student to act in no other way.

The remainder claim that so many students cheat is becomes impossible to succeed by following another path.

But according to Lyle M. Nelson, Chairman of Stanford's Department of Communication, "What does it matter if all other students cheat? Isn't there room for one honest person whose standards won't permit him to do so? What happens to a democratic form of society if all citizens say, 'I have no obligations to rules and standards of decency and honesty'?"

Let us hope there are still some students who value an honest approach to their school work and refuse to conform to the standards of the majority. Otherwise, the word "honor" will lose its significance not only in the school system but also in every other stage of a person's life.

High School Poll Shows Exams Worthwhile

By Jim Carey

John's head was ready to burst but not from a headache. The cause of his tension was the hours he had spent cramming his brain with mountainous amounts of information for his exams.

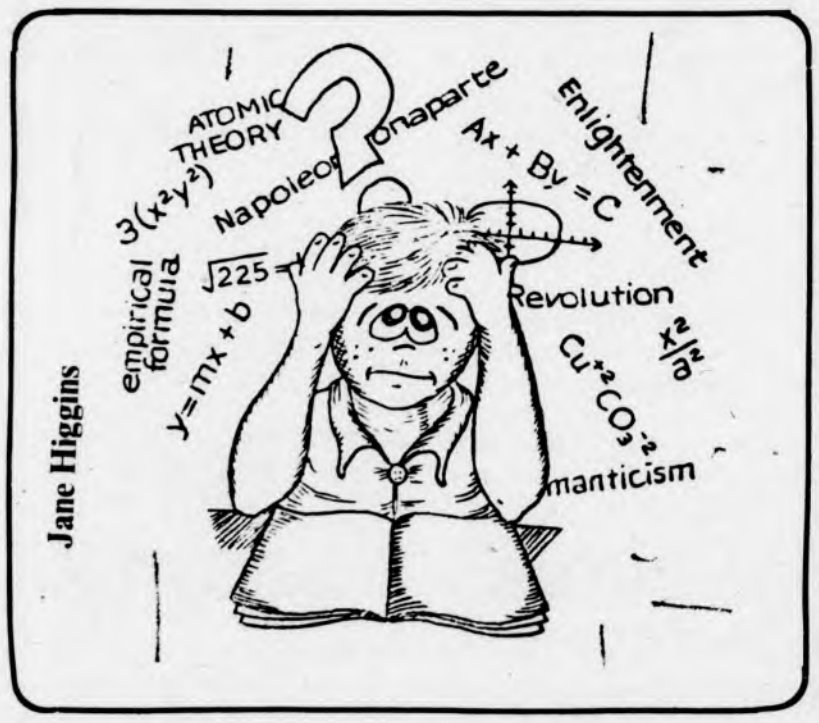
Is this sort of intellectual panic worthwhile? Are midterms and finals really necessary? A recent poll in Cohasset High School says YES! Students voted over two to one in favor of exams; 69% Pro, and 31% Con.

When asked why, students proclaimed, "The tests review the half year; you might forget the stuff if you didn't take the exams." Another student said, "I think they (the exams) are worthwhile. A test on everything learned during the first two terms forces the student to review and thereby relearn the material. Without the midyears and finals, students would not be working toward an ultimate goal and therefore would not work as hard during the term."

On the other hand, students believed "The exams scare us too much." Also, "They count so much and if you do bad on one, then there goes your average, and if you have two exams on the same day you have to choose which one you want to do better on."

Other than students, teachers were asked their opinion on the exams. They unanimously supported the exams. One said, "Juniors and seniors, whether headed for college or not, must have the experience and practice of taking a long, comprehensive test that demands long term preparation, not just a quick glance at notes. It's the same kind of situation as we take PSAT's before SAT's: practice, familiarity, etc."

Another view was: "They tie together the whole semester, they boost students' confidence in their own knowledge, they prepare you for college exams, and they've done more to improve the quality of academics than any other single policy.



Health Ed. Debate

Health education, a controversial subject in Cohasset, is being studied by a citizens committee composed of parents, faculty, and students. At a recent meeting of this committee John Creamer, Principal of the Osgood School, described health education there as "incidental and accidental."

Somewhere around the end of February or the beginning of March, this committee will sponsor an open forum for parents, students, and faculty to air their feelings on the matter.

Pat Wunschel, an instructor at the High School, described health education at that school as "crisis education."

The subject is apparently controversial seeing as it has been debated and avoided in this town since 1972. The purpose of this committee, the third to study the problem, is to find the health needs of students in Cohasset and to make a recommendation to the School Committee regarding those needs.

Possible topics to be dealt with in a health education curriculum might be: personal hygiene, diet, thanatology, alcohol and drug abuse, suicide, first aid, emotional development, venereal disease, and sexuality.

The controversy surrounding health education may be that people feel in that dealing with sex it will encourage teenagers to explore their own sexuality. However, in this day and age it is all important that adolescents be informed of the risks involved.

Caroline Will Marry You, Burt Reynolds!

By Caroline Wampole

It is becoming increasingly hard to objectively review movies concerning divorces and break-ups, for the pure reason that they do not project a realistic picture of 20th century married life.

Why does it seem that in all of the recent movies about breaking up (An Unmarried Woman, Starting Over, Kramer versus Kramer) the couples involved are either rich or gorgeous or both? O.K., so Jill Clayburgh gets jilted by her husband (Unmarried Woman) and has to find a "new life," but with her money and face and figure I can't feel too sorry for her.

And Burt Reynolds, in Starting Over, has to find a new woman after being jilted by his wife, but I think that his trouble and effort would be minimal, don't you? For Heaven's sake, Burt, I'll marry you!

And Kramer versus Kramer, though an excellent movie in all other respects, is shrouded by the unrealistic picture of city living for a young couple. I know it's terrible that Ted Kramer makes only $28,000 dollars a year, but I can't really arouse much sympathy for him. Some people with ten children make less than that, and they manage to survive!

Aren't movies supposed to capture real episodes in life, and just project them onto a larger-than-life screen? Or is "real life" so shocking and horrible that it can only be portrayed in violence and pornography? Can't art be an extension of life rather than a deformation of it?

Are we forever going to be subjected to glamourous pictures of glamourous people leading glamourous lives in glamourous houses or are we going to see real people leading real lives? I would hope that the movie industry will open their silver-lined eyes and make some movies with situations that are applicable to all people, regardless of fame, face, or fortune.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

And now, but for Leap Year, February draws to an end. For many of us, it's the dreariest time of the year, but it's not all bad. It does have its good times as well. All would agree that the gourmet luncheon prepared by Ginny Gill and Phyllis Dane did much to brighten our spirits and send us scurrying home to our kitchen. League members and guests enjoyed Cabbage Soup, Vegetable Chowder, Ox-Tail Soup and Baked Fish Chowder, Spinach Salad, Corn Bread and Pineapple Upside-Down Cake. I'm sure we all had our favorites, but I thought Sue Freeman's chowder was very special. It's one which she gleaned from her mother-in-law and when halved, serves Sue and Warren and their two youngsters.

BAKED FISH CHOWDER
2 lbs. skinned haddock
4 potatoes, cut small
2 onions, cut small
1/2 c. butter
2½ tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. dill weed
1 small bud garlic, or powder
Celery tops
1 oz. vermouth, or white wine
2 c. boiling water
2 c. light cream, or evap. milk

Put everything except cream in large deep casserole. Cover and bake at 375 degrees for 1 hours. Remove from oven and add warmed cream, stir.

One stormy Saturday morning this month was good for only one thing as far as I could see. It was made to be spent in the kitchen and as a result, we had homemade turkey soup for lunch, several cheeses and Beer Bread, hot out of the oven. Now this is a recipe which Virginia Fisher shared with us some time ago and I had been meaning to try. I'm repeating it because someone asked if I had ever made it and once again I explained that there aren't enough hours in the day to try all the recipes that are sent in. Also, having been married lo these many years, I know better than to try some of the recipes on my family. I must say that when I opened the oven door at the end of 45 minutes, I thought something was very wrong, for the loaves looked pale and flat, but when another five minutes had gone by, they were golden brown and fragrant. When one loaf disappeared at lunch, I wasn't too surprised.

BEER BREAD
12 oz. can beer
3 c. self-rising flour, mixed with
2 T sugar

Add beer 1/3 at a time. Turn batter into two loaf pans and drizzle with 1/2 c. melted butter before cooking for 50 min. in a 350 degree oven. If self-rising flour isn't on your shelf, add 3¾ tsp. baking powder and ¾ tsp. salt to regular flour.

February was far from a total loss for those who studied the Finegold Diet with Donna Frugoli at the Marshfield YWCA classes. Donna told her group that her family began the diet three years ago when then 2½-year-old Kimberly couldn't sleep and cried away the day. After reading of the Finegold Diet, they eliminated all artificial coloring, flavorings and preservatives from their meals and their hyperactive daughter quieted down within three days. Now the entire family has eliminated foods with chemicals from their diet such as puddings, cake mixes, luncheon meats, processed cheeses, bleached flour and Donna makes everything from scratch. The difference in the way they all feel is like night and day, says Donna. Here is a recipe even the children enjoy helping her make.

PEANUT BUTTER BALLS
1/2 c. peanut butter
1/3 c. non-fat dry milk
1/4 c. honey
1 tsp. vanilla
1/4 c. cocoa, sesame seeds, or chopped nuts

Mix together. Shape into balls and roll in one of the above ingredients. They freeze beautifully and are great for the school lunch box, says Donna.

Skipper Hoopsters End Season On a Sour Note

By Bob Tis

The Cohasset Skipper varsity basketball team suffered a tough loss to a hustling Roxbury club team Thursday to cap a season which had ended the week before when all hopes of a tournament bid were thrashed by Duxbury.

The Skippers were missing the enthusiasm that brought them so close to the states (not to mention playmaking senior guard Mark Goff, who was tanning on the beach in Florida).

The loss left the Skippers with a 12-8 record, two wins short of last year's semi-finalist team's 14-6 slate. That team set the standard for this year's team.

Hopes were quite high all season, especially after the Skippers beat last year's league champion Middleboro Sachems, and the goal was stated many times throughout the season.

"We gotta make the states again."

The soul of this year's team was Goff and Bill Kurtz. The big surprise of this team was the 6-5 fusillage of Bill Taylor, who used his big frame to spark the Skipper offense and dominate the boards.

Goff, Taylor, McCarthy, Steve Baden and Jim O'Brien will be graduating, leaving Kurtz to run the offense, with Pat Duffy and Dean Brown returning at forward, Keith (Ice Man) Ross and Greg Raffa at wings, and Tim Libby, Jeff Lyons and T.J. O'Brine to complement a promising crop of sophomores.

Rest assured that the cry of each and every player on the Skipper Club next season will be "We gotta make the states."

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The girls' hoop record, in retrospect, did in no way represent the great individual talent on the club.

And although the Skippers won the first game of the season and stumbled to a 4-12 finale, they kept their unmarred enthusiasm throughout the season.

But bad luck seemed prevalent on this club, which ended the season on a good note, upsetting a powerful Duxbury club. That game, no doubt, will be omnipresent in the minds of the graduating seniors.

And those seniors, co-captains Jodi Sandblom and Ellen McCarthy, will depart from the Pond St. Palace, along with Lorraine Carrol and Jill Rosano. This leaves forwards Lindsey Gilmore, Caroline Wampole, Donna Chisolm and Madeline Roy to assume key positions.

Also returning for the Skippers will be Katie Salerno, Hannah Clinton and Karen Froio, who, under coach Walter Brennan's strict fundamental coaching regimen, will show some quality basketball next season.

TORIN'S TALE

You're probably all wondering how Torris Sweeny did in the state tournament.

Well, Torin went into the meet seeded 11th and that's exactly where he ended up. Sweeny faced tough competition in the early rounds and lost to the third and fifth seed.

But Torin, who put Cohasset on the wrestling map and captured 11th place in the 114-pound class, put it best, saying:

"I got two more years to wrestle. This shows me the kind of competition I'm up against."

Tailgunner Kelly Props Pee Wees

Jamie Kelly's itchy trigger finger brought the Seahawk Pee Wee A's very far this week in the Kiwanis Tournament in Quincy.

Kelly scored four goals in a stunning, 8-4 win over Pembroke in the first round Monday and in Tuesday's game, he came back to score two more in the second round Seahawk win over Melrose, 6-2.

In chapter three of "What I did on my vacation," Kelly scored two more to help the Seahawks nip Natick, 3-2, in the third round Wednesday.

But in the semi-final round Sunday, Don Mills of Toronot, Ontario bumped the Seahawks 4-3, as Mills scored in the final three seconds to break the deadlock. Steve Remedis and Chris Tatum shined on defense and Kelly got two more goals in a game in which the Seahawks were outscored, 30-9.

The Squirt A's, on the other hand, badly decimated by spring break from school and the prospect of skiing on gravel and rocks in New Hampshire and Maine and Vermont, won the Cherry Tree Tourney at Rockland in a style that would even make George Washington and Martha proud (mind the candy store, Martha — I'm off to the rink).

Coach Tim Flaherty's Squirts had to count on a hat trick by Ned Flaherty (no relation) and four assists from Joe Downey to drown Hanover 7-1, in the first round.

Tuesday's game was tougher, though, as the Seahawks deadlocked Hingham, 2-2, at the end of the regulation time, and needed a 5 minute overtime and a five minute shootout to beat the Hinghamers, 5-4. Kyle Hublitz gave an inspirational performance in net for the Hawks.

And that performance was all the Seahawks needed, as they went wild on another great Hublitz performance and chomped on Sandwich, 4-1, in the final round to win the tourney.

The Pee Wee B's, in the Cranberry Tournament at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke, beat Plymouth in the first round, 5-3, but were eliminated in the second, 4-3, by Newton.

The Bantam B's, in the same tournament, got a shutout from David Connolly as they blanked the Duxburys, 3-0, but were eliminated in the second round Wednesday by Woburn, 6-2.

Tis' Answers, Finally!!!

Well, folks, we finally found Bob Tis (who was secretly in training for the double Luge for the 1984 Olympics in Yugoslavia), and got the answers for the last quiz.

Here they are:

3. A, C
4. A
5. Janet England, Laura Durkin.
6. The Buckley family from Forest Notch Rd.

A Dear Policy

By Lois Martin

A column in last week's Boston Globe put me in mind of a man, a VIP of sorts, from Ellsworth, Maine. Ellen Goodman wrote Valentine's Day about a fellow whose marriage was solid because every morning he took one look at himself in the mirror and said, "You're no bargain."

That is indeed a Yankee conviction held by many New Englanders. We've seldom thought ourselves to be a prize and that lack of foolish pride may have spared us a lot of falls.

Well, Arthur Abram, so far as I know, never made that nifty remark. But he is a legend because of a different statement.

PATCHES

Mr. Abram was the janitor in Ellsworth High School. That was before my time but during the years my brothers (much older of course) were in high school. And the older one, Fred, was a friend in good standing with Mr. Abram.

Camaraderie between the janior and the students was the norm. Back then janitors were called just that. They hadn't gone in for the "custodian," "sanitary engineer" title. And for people who knew Arthur Abram, 'janitor' connoted a position of service, necessity and importance in the school.

But he extended far beyond the reaches of his broom. He had a wing ding of a sense of humor and was quick enough to swap wit with anyone who passed him in the hall.

I remember him as being shortish, dressed in gray work clothes, and comfortably portly.

I called Fred, my brother, last week when I couldn't for the life of me come up with Arthur Abram's name. He knew right off the bat. He had worked with him one summer before he went in the Navy, a while after graduation.

Asked what he remembered about Arthur, Fred admitted he'd once paid some boys to fill Arthur's lunch pail with bees. But Fred said there'd been a good reason for that. Apparently the day he was to go for his Navy physical, Arthur came upon an old bottle of perfume in the school confines. He dumped the contents on his young janitorial apprentice just before he left for the physical. Fred said he appeared before the U.S. Navy smelling to high heavens with the dregs from that bottle that he couldn't get off before his appointment time.

But that wasn't what I remembered about Arthur Abram. Instead I remember Fred shortly before his wedding telling me a bit of advice he'd gleaned from Arthur.

Arthur had told him that no matter how tough a day he and his wife had, never mind an old-fashioned, word-throwing disagreement, he always concluded the day by saying, "Good Night, Dear."

That stuck in Fred's mind and did the same in mine. But thus far it's had a greater apparent influence on Fred than on me. He's been married about 27 years now and has one good wife.

When Arthur was to retire from the Ellsworth School Department, he was feted with high honors. It was an occasion. Perhaps with Arthur or shortly thereafter, the true meaning of the word 'janitor' retired or lost its impact for those who did the job. Arthur brought prestige to it as he would have to other positions. He'd have made a marvelous milkman, mailman, druggist, whatever.

The thing is, with his kind of philosophy, he made a good man. And he made good men of those he knew.

Open House At CCC Sunday

Regina Schultz said she's on all the Cohasset Community Center committees. When asked why — she said "I'm just dumb."

But the accomplishments of the community center people over the past two years has hardly been dumb . . . and people like Regina and Jerry Schultz, Peggy and Rocky Laugelle . . . the Dohertys, Nancy Clapp, Claudia Story, the Wing Engineer Squadron 47 Marines of South Weymouth made it all happen.

All the above and a smart CPA — namely Jack Conroy.

From 4-8 p.m. Sunday the community center will hold an open house for all of those who have and who continue to make the center a lively, attractive place to have fun in the middle of town.

Two years ago there were only 75 people who belonged to the center. Now it has over 1,000 members, including 600 family memberships.

Regina said in the center's real heydays there were 2,000 members — so the present board is shooting for double its present figure.

The programs the center offers reads like Pope Paul's Treaties. And program coordinators use not a little business savy in trying to determine what you'll buy. When the only health spa in town recently shut down the center immediately added more exercise programs, aerobic dance. It was rewarded for its efforts with increased resident turnout.

This Sunday the center will celebrate the opening of its new, stainless steel kitchen and function room. Wine and cheese will be provided . . . along with a tour of the facilities. Refurbishing of the two rooms cost a staggering sum of $24,000.

Town organizations such as the South Shore Music Circus and the JC's contributed $5,000 and $2,500 respectively. The Marine Corps did most of the grubby, constructional work as volunteers. And the $60,000 SBA loan that Conroy helped to get for the center certainly helped out.

The three apartments upstairs have been rented. The nursery school has a full enrollment . . . and programs are bringing in memberships weekly.

This year the center will pay off its 25-year mortgage as it points to a new roof, complete rewiring, a new fire alarm system, new oil burner, storm windows, insulation . . . and it feels pretty snug about its achievements.

YES, I'm a member of the Cohasset Community Center — Andrea Mercurio, 2.

Plans for the future include a senior citizen drop-in center and an on-going social security counseling program by Fall 1980. Summer plans call for the revitalization of a day camp for preschoolers (3-5) which will be run by the nursery school program.

High school students who wish to receive their Counselor-in-Training certificates (which are held in esteem by larger summer camps) should volunteer their summer services to the center in early spring. Camp details will follow in future issues of the Mariner.

"Everybody on the board and in the community had something to offer. And even if it was small, it counted," Regina said.

formation with regard to its experience and further chills competitive proposals.

(6) Your determination that the School Committee has provided for coverage in the event of a suit brought against the Town, or any town employee or official for an injury resulting from student participation in athletics or gym classes is inaccurate and leaves the Town uninsured for this type of claim.

This is potentially an extremely serious matter and should be attended to by the Board. In this regard, I am forwarding a copy of this letter to the School Committee to bring the absence of such coverage to their attention.

I agree with your letter of December 31, 1979 that steps must be taken to prevent continued oversights on your part with regard to the Town's insurance needs, and on that basis, would conclude that the existing insurance contracts should be awarded for a period of only one year and the Town should go about obtaining this coverage in a more businesslike manner.

I make these suggestions to you both as a competitor who would like a fair opportunity to provide insurance coverage to the Town and as a citizen who, being experienced with regard to matters of insurance, recognizes that the manner in which you are handling this matter does not represent the economic interests of the Town of Cohasset.

Respectfully submitted,
Frederic H. Wood, Jr.

BUSH & KENNEDY BIG VOTE GETTERS at the Deer Hill Primary Tuesday. Raymond Levine's 5th grade acted as election officials [it was their idea] for the primary which resulted in the following: GOP CANDIDATES: Bush 62 percent; Reagan 24 percent, Ford [a write-in] 5.5 percent, Anderson 5 percent, Baker 3 percent. DEMOCRATS: Kennedy 63 percent, Carter 26 percent and Brown 11 percent. [Derr photo]

Kennedy, Bush Are Cohasset Winners In Tuesday's Primary

Senator Edward Kennedy and Ambassador George Bush were Cohasset's high vote getters in Tuesday's Massachusetts Presidential Primary.

Kennedy led President Jimmy Carter 592 votes to 357. California Gov. Jerry Brown was a distant third with 47 votes, and Republican John Anderson received nine write-in votes on the Democratic ballot.

On the Republican side, Bush received 550 votes to 421 for Ronald Regan and 348 for Anderson. Trailing behind were Howard Baker with 33 votes, John Connally with 18, Robert Dole with two, Benjamin Fernandez with one, Philip Crane with 18 and Harold Stassen who received no votes.

Former President Gerald Ford received 12 write-in votes, and one voter wrote in the name of Barry Goldwater.

Election officials described the turnout -- at 55 per cent -- as exceptional. One registered Democrat claimed she was inadvertantly given a GOP ballot, so she quietly voted for Anderson, her favorite all along.

Four years ago, 39 per cent of Cohasset's electorate voted in the Presidential Primary. On Tuesday there were 1456 Republican votes cast and 1049 Democrats. There were also 77 blanks, 33 by Democrats and 44 by Republicans.

Incumbents John Delehanty and Norma Fenochietti, Democratic candidates for state committee man and woman were unchallenged and received 632 and 624 votes respectively.

On the Republican side, incumbent Thomas Barry was the top vote getter with 502 votes. Second was Alan MacKay with 497 votes, Samuel Spencer with 78 and Vincent Mina with 22 votes.

Incumbent Paula Logan was and easy winner for the GOP woman's state committee seat, receiving 814 votes to 490 for second place finisher Nancy O'Toole. Jean Robinson received 53 votes.

All Republican and Democratic town committee seats went uncontested.

Cagebirds Looking For State Win

It's quite possible CHS Drama Coach Ron Emmons has another state winner this year in the Boston Globe Drama Competition.

The Cagebirds is a 35-minute British play which utilizes the allegorical talents of eight CHS women — six of them seniors. It was one of three productions (and three schools) which placed at the regionals held in Hingham last week. Notre Dame and Brockton also were selected to compete in the semi-finals.

Last year the Emmons-coached group won the state finals with Storybook Theater. If Cagebirds wins the semi-finals to be held March 15 at the CHS auditorium, it will go on to compete in the state finals at John Hancock Hall in Boston on March 28 and March 29.

Emmons said at the semi-finals in Cohasset Cagebirds' most talented competitor will be from the Falmouth Drama group which is producing Interview, a social commentary not unlike the CHS production. Scouts who have seen the Falmouth group in action say it's a good cast, but not overly impressive. All the same, the Cagebirds are both nervous and excited over the next talent bout.

At the Hingham regionals last week, Disa Pratt, Meri Fink and Alexandre Mullen — all seniors — received individual acting awards. While Meri Fink got an incredible reception. "The whole house stood up to compliment her range of performance," Emmons said.

Also in the Cagebird cast are seniors Gina Froio, Lisa O'Toole, Ellen Hanlon and juniors Susanna Mastroubuono and Gail Smart. Susan Buckley and Leslie Collins are

Pompeo Resigns From Health Board

Early this week Dr. Roger Pompeo submitted a letter of resignation to the town clerk and the board of health, effective immediately.

In the second year of a second three-year term, Pompeo said he has been considering resignation since early last Fall when Town Counsel Blake Thaxter told him that under present conflict of interest laws, Pompeo would be "totally useless" on the board 90 per cent of the time.

Pompeo may be the first of many casualties to come over the conflict of interest laws and the impending financial disclosure laws which the legislature has yet to act upon.

Although the petition before the legislative body for financial disclosure has been somewhat watered down, Pompeo said he would not be willing to serve as a town official under any version of the same.

"Thaxter told me I would be in conflict of interest in any matters involving patients, friends, relatives or business associates." He added that as he will have site plans going before the health board this year, he opted for resignation.

"I have a strong sense of obligation to my country and town . . . but I'm approaching my 40's now . . . and I feel I've done my share. Seven years ago I was a founding member of the drug education committee. I've coached Pony League teams (Pompeo has three daughters) and have been a coach in the Youth Athletic Association."

However, he said his foremost reason for resigning is over the conflict of interest law and more personal reasons. "It's hard to see a patient in my office at 3 p.m. when my presence is there for his benefit; and then at 8 p.m. I sit in judgment of his plan, which does not comply with Title V."

Pompeo noted at a recent hearing three developers who had a plan before the board were patients while a lot owner was "a protegee." His role at that hearing was as a moderator.

Pompeo said he feels the individual who replaces him should be either an attorney or a civil engineer. "Five years ago one member of the board of health always had been a practicing physician . . . the problems which the board of health now encounter require different abilities."

Pompeo's term expires in 1981. Persons wishing to run for his unexpired term must take out nomination papers before Friday, March 7. If no one should apply for election to the position, selectmen can appoint an individual to fill the unexpired term.

Cohasset's Week

Auto Guide

Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Weymouth), Senate chairman of the Legislature's Committee on Insurance, has announced that the 1980 consumer's guide for buying auto insurance is now available.

The consumer's guide includes helpful information to assist auto insurance buyers in choosing coverage which best suits their needs. The booklet also suggests ways for consumers to save money on their 1980 auto insurance.

"Massachusetts auto insurance rates are high, but by using this helpful guide, many consumers will find that they can save money," said McKinnon.

Variance Denied

The board of appeals has refused Kimball's By The Sea Motor Inn's request to use its existing restaurant/lounge at 124 Elm Street for the general public and off-street parking for same purposes in the parking lot across Elm Street.

The appeals board determined the building inspector was correct in his denial of such application dated Nov. 9, 1979.

Police Pact

The Cohasset Police Association has ratified a two-year police contract calling for a 7.5 percent wage hike July 1 and another 7.5 percent July 1, 1981. The contract provides for an 11 percent difference between ranks.

Under the new contract, patrolmen at maximum will get $15,587, sergeants $17,302 and a lieutenant $19,205. In the second year those maximum figures will be respectively, $16,756, $18,513 and $20,542.

In addition, policemen will get a paid holiday for any special holiday established by the legislature, such as the one called when the Pope visited Boston in October.

Appointment

At a recent meeting of the appointing authority, John Mullett of Beach Street was appointed to the fire station study committee.

Hearing

The planning board will hold a hearing at 8 p.m. on proposed revision to the zoning by-law.

McKinnon

State Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) or a member of his staff will be available to speak to constituents at Cohasset Town Hall Wednesday, March 12, at 8 p.m.

Scituate's Dreamworld Focus Of Society Dinner

By O.F. Ingram

The fascinating story of "Dreamwold," the once-magnificent estate of Thomas Lawson in Scituate, will be the subject of a dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society on Thursday evening, March 27, in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House, Cohasset.

A catered dinner will be served at 6:30 and the meeting is open to the public through reservations with Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, 383-0773.

Carl and Jane Chessia of Scituate, who have made a hobby of collecting data about the estate of the fabled "Copper King," will take the group on an illustrated tour through the grounds, showing the farm with its miles of white 'Kentucky fence,' the rosecovered cottages and stables, as well as the famous Lawson Tower and Dreamwold itself, the palatial manor house.

The Dreamwold estate in the Egypt section of Scituate was created by Lawson at the height of his fortune at the turn of the century, when the rapid development of electricity sent stocks of copper companies soaring.

As the bubble burst, his fortune slipped away and by 1920 the Dreamwold estate was being dismantled, although some of the principal buildings still remain.

Students Display Art At Hancock Building

Three Cohasset students are among those with artwork displayed in "The Art of Our Children," an exhibition of the works of elementary school students from throughout Massachusetts in the lobby of the John Hancock Tower, Copley Square, Boston, through March 14.

The students are Kristen Alessi, Leah Burbank and Cynthia Conklin, all six graders at the Deer Hill School.

The exhibit of over 300 pieces representing 107 communities in the state is included in the observance of Youth Art Month (YAM) sponsored by the Massachusetts Art Education Association. These works range from drawing, stitchery and weaving to painting and graphics.

Books' Future Deemed Secure

Even though "throw away" books are already on the market, the future of the book is deemed secure by Reverend John Benbow, who reported last Sunday on the White House Conference for Library and Information Service which he attended.

Rev. Benbow's remarks, titled "The Overdue Crystal Ball," revealed his insights gained through five days of intensive talks with 52 lay and professional conference delegates who, like him, are concerned with libraries.

There was agreed concern among the delegates that citizens need to get involved in the future of their libraries. Benbow found the exchange of information helpful and hopeful of raising the national awareness of the importance of information and access to it.

Mansur Johnson Announces Candidacy

Mansur Johnson, a Hull energy activist, announced his candidacy this week for the state senate seat held by Sen. Allan McKinnon of Weymouth.

Johnson, 38, a Democrat and a former college English teacher, now works as an energy consultant, film maker and lecturer. The chief focus of his campaign is energy conservation and economic problems in the district.

In announcing his candidacy, Johnson accused McKinnon of being a caretaker senator. "We need an actor, an initiator who will lead the way," he said.

Johnson, who heated his home this winter by burning driftwood in a pot-bellied stove, said his candidacy will stress the need for renewable energy sources and energy conservation. It will also focus on health risks associated with nuclear power.

Last summer Johnson founded the Hull Light Plant Shareholders Coalition to protest the light board's planned investment in the Seabrook Power plant.

The group unsuccessfully tried to get a court injunction to halt the light board's vote, but was able to convince voters at an October town meeting not to invest any more money in Seabrook.

Sen. McKinnon, a fifth term legislator serving a district that stretches from Weymouth to Marshfield is also expected to be challenged by another candidate, Edward Collagan of Weymouth, in the Democratic Primary. And at least one Republican has announced for the general election in November.

stage managers, and there is a lot of male support behind the scenes.

Unfortunately, Emmons said Cagebirds drew a number one for the semi-finals at CHS and will appear first on the program at 10 a.m. Although it isn't considered "lucky" to get a number one, as judges are usually just warming up for their job and tend to score a performance either too high or too low (usually the later). Emmons feels these girls will take Cagebirds to the state finals without very much fuss at all.

According to Emmons, who is probably rightfully prejudiced about his women, "In my opinion this play's the most effective thing we've done."

Cohasset residents who wish to see collectively superior CHS talent in rare form should arrive at the CHS auditorium promptly at 9:45 a.m. Saturday March 15 with their $2 in hand (that small entrance fee barely pays for the police detail or the custodian).

Late-comers will not be allowed in the theater after the play is in progress. Picture-taking is not allowed unless you work for the Boston Globe (it's their contest).

Judges for the CHS semi-finals will be Nancy Stone from Boston University, Peter Kates from Norwell and Dian Purdy from the Patriot Ledger.

Reagan In Cohasset

We don't know if anyone has or will publically thank Phil Murray for getting us a real, live candidate for a national office to look at up close.

But we would like to offer our public thanks here.

Hosting a national candidate with all his security people, bomb-sniffers . . . and the national and state press to boot can't have been an easy assignment.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette and Phil Murray and others who staved up all Saturday night decorating the gym for Reagan's appearance might have had second thoughts about what they had gotten themselves into.

Was it worth it? Definitely.

It was fast and it was furious and we were all neophytes about this first time — since when? The Murrays had also planned a press conference for the local press at a private meeting room at Kimball's. But only the little Hull Nantasket Times showed up. We heard its editor and reporter asked some probing questions. Good for them.

We were also invited, but we thought it was to be a national press conference with all the big cameras and reporters and figured we'd get squeezed out. After a CBS cameraman almost dropped his tripod on our reporter she, shaken, went off to do her routine police log.

While we're sure Ronald Reagan didn't miss us — we certainly missed him. We beg the Murray's used mercies for our error.

It might be appropriate to mention here that the opinions of some members of the Cohasset School Committee are not ours — regarding the CHS cheerleaders having worn their uniforms to the Reagan Rally.

A cheer for a man's fortitude in having the pep and vigor to run for a national office is not a vote.

Maybe a tarp should have been thrown on the gym floor . . . maybe this, maybe that. We're sad that we never heard one comment from the school committee about how exciting it was for everyone that he came. Instead, the school committee zeroed in on all the little nitty gritties.

NEVER. NOT FOR ONE MOMENT . . . did we think the Cohasset School Committee was supporting Reagan because the cheerleaders wore their uniforms to the Rally.

The Reagan cheers were delightful . . . a token of respect for a candidate who has miles to go before the Republican Convention.

This editorial is not an endorsement for Ronald Reagan. This is an endorsement of all the men and women who run for political office.

Town Budget 23M In 1883

Looking Back

By Peter Barnicle

Until recent years the first week in March was traditionally town meeting time. Our forefathers found that the heavy snows had melted enough to permit travel, but the fields were still too wet to be worked.

It was a quiet period between the rigors of winter and the plowing season. At town meeting time the womenfolk got together to exchange gossip and the menfolk gathered to take care of the town business before getting down to the more serious task of planting — and hereabouts preparing nets and gear for fishing.

Cohasset now hold its meeting in April — before the golf courses are generally back in shape.

In looking back we found that some things were the same in 1883 as they are today. For one thing less than half the town's voters turned out for the annual meeting.

The successful candidates for the one year term as selectmen were Caleb Nichols with 252 votes; Philander Bates with 176, and J.Q.A. Lothrop with 172. Lothrop was also elected town moderator; but in that contest he got only 125 votes to beat Philander Bates who polled 86.

Apparently there wasn't much interest in the town treasurer's job. A.H. Tower swept to victory with 23 votes, defeating William Eddy by 22 votes. We can only assume that Eddy voted for himself. One ballot was also cast to name Tower town collector.

The meeting wearied when it came to filling the positions of field drivers, surveyors of lumber, measurers of wood and bark, culler of hoops and staves, and pound keeper. They were all elected by acclamation.

Total appropriations for the year were $23,500. Even in those days before school committee autonomy the largest item in the budget was $6,500 for the schools. Second largest item was $5,500 for support of the poor.

As an afterthought the school committee tagged on Article 27 requesting $100 to "expend in furnishing books for scholars." It "was passed over."

Article 5 contained a provision that a lot of taxpayers would like to see revived. It called for taxes to be paid in the same manner as previous years and that the same discounts be allowed.

Discounts? Every taxpayer who paid up before Sept. 1 got a five percent discount and those who paid before Nov. 1 received a one percent discount.

The meeting voted $2,500 for highway repairs. This included $500 for special repairs on the hill at the corner of Forest Ave. and Jerusalem Rd. Apparently a problem a hundred years ago.

Article 10 approved the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquor by a vote of 110 to 69. It was also voted that funds for enforcing the liquor law be increased to $200.

And, just to prove the continuity in Cohasset's history, Article 21 instructed the selectmen to have a report ready for the next annual meeting on proposed improvements at town hall.

Business Programs

Registration is now underway at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, for a series of programs on Art as Business which will take place during the month of March.

The three-part workshop is aimed primarily at the visual artist; however, anyone dealing with art either in a non-profit or commercial setting will find a wealth of information pertains to them as well.

Sunday, March 9 from 1-5 p.m. Dan Kane will give a step-by-step introduction to basic bookkeeping for the visual artist including tips on preparing the income tax return.

Sunday, March 16 from 1-5 p.m. Attorney Herbert Gatewood will speak about the artist's right to copyright and what that can mean.

Finally, on Sunday, March 30 from 2-5 p.m. there will be a panel discussion on the Art Market. The panel will consist of Helen Shlein, Director of the Helen Shlein Gallery in Boston and Jean Cain, Anne Szep, and Diane Gallagher, owners of Business Impressions, an art leasing firm. The panel will discuss its criteria for selecting art and their procedures and contracts with the artists.

GOP CANDIDATE RONALD REAGAN pulled out all stops and chatted with residents and reporters easily and effortlessly about the various issues of his campaign. He spent approximately three hours in the town. After a rally at the CHS auditorium he went on to Hugo's for a fund-raiser. The crowd at CHS was estimated at 1,200 by Cohasset police, and included residents from throughout the South Shore. Cheerleaders Lily Carbone and Kerry Gruber got kisses from Reagan. Lucky for them.

Mariner Easter Contest

We desperately need pictures of rabbits and lots of ideas for things to do with eggs for our April 3 issue.

A first, second and third prize will be given in both Osgood and Deer Hill schools and there will probably be lots of honorable mentions.

Neither the judges or the prizes have been selected, but they will all be wonderful.

2. Draw a rabbit — confine him to a 4 inch (horizontal) 6 inch (vertical) box. Use BLACK pen only — no crayon, no pencil, no anything else. Felt tip is fine.
3. Write a poem about an egg.
4. Write an essay about an egg.
5. Submit a unique egg recipe.

7. Answer the age-old question which came first (you know, the bunny or the egg).
8. Do a consumer story on eggs.

Baseball Parents Are Warming Up!

It's time to start again. Bring those gloves and cleats out of the closet, get the bats out of the cellar, pull out the old "Property of Boston Red Sox" T-shirts, and pull the old chappeau over the bean.

It's time for the horsehide to hit the hickory again, chuck that pea around the horn. Play a little pepper.

And while the scarlet-legged choke artists suck up the warm Winter Haven sun, another whole breed of person truly part and parcel to the baseball world is warming up in kitchens and living rooms around the South Shore, New England and the nation.

It's the baseball mother/father (parent).

And as the kids warm up the arms and legs and get the old mitt limbered up, the moms and dads are thinking of new ways to harrass anyone who they feel deserves it — be it the manager, the umpire, or another parent who always thinks his kids is better than theirs, in whatever they do.

Pity the poor manager. He's the guy who lugs the bats and balls out of the field, the guy who thinks of a different excuse every week to get out of work early so he can hit just a few more fungoes to his gladiators before they go out to the field of battle against the most noble of adversary — the other team — and the guy who donates his time to give the kids another reason to forget about rising prime interest rates, sinking gold prices and diplomatic tension in the middle east.

He's also the guy who puts up with enough crap in just one season of contending with baseball parents to fill three semi-trailer trucks. And he's the guy that buys the sodas, win or lose.

Why should the ump put up with the same stuff? He's probably a father of one of the kids on one of the teams, anyway (why show up otherwise) and however the games turn out, he's going to get the business no matter who wins.

You can see the baseball parent on the first day of practice.

"You mean baseball starts already?" Popski says while sitting in the living room making love to his Old Frothingslosh Ale. "Well, have fun."

What Pop doesn't realize is that he could be out with the team hitting flies, pitching batting practice or coaching the infield.

"I got too much to do," said Pop, taking another pull off the brewski and flipping the channel on Telly to Bowling for Dollars.

But as soon as the season starts, old Pop is out there with a whole new slew of insults for the umps.

"Hey, ump, why didn't we send you to the Ayatollah in exchange for the hostages?" will probably be one of the big ones this year.

And Mom, after seeing Gertrude or Penelope down the street's kid make three glaring errors in a row at third, will yell, "We want Ralphie, we want Ralphie."

And little Ralphie will go in, make three glaring errors at third, and his mom will feel vindicated because her kid did no worse than Gertrude or Penelope down the street's kid did.

What these baseball moms and dads don't know is that they're actually desecrating the very essence of what, as Sartre would say, is "Little-League-Baseball-as-a-being-unto-itself.

If you want to be able to scream at your kid's manager, then become his agent and land him a contract with the Red Sox. Zimmer is used to it by now. He's already got Ken Harrelson.

But if you want to become more involved, call his manager or the president of the league. Ask if there is anything you could do — help in practices, pick some kids up for ballgames, help manage, help fund raise, help sell hot dogs at the games — anything. If you're not part of the solution, in the words of somebody famous (I forgot who), you're part of the problem.

There are no words to describe the sheer joy in a kid's heart when he bloops a single up the middle, steals second or catches a long fly ball with his back to the fence. Don't screw it up for him by creating animosity or ill feelings.

Get involved positively — not negatively.

It always used to bother me when my mother (oh, yes, she was a baseball mom, too) screamed at the manager to put me in the game (they called me all glove — no hit).

"You scream one more time," the manager yelled at her, "and your son will have so many bench splinters, he could sell his butt to Weyerhauser." I couldn't understand it.

My father was the manager.

☐The National Merit Scholar designation is the highest academic honor that can be awarded to a high school student.

Three Cohasset High School seniors — David Zobel, Chris William and Edward Bear — were notified last week that they had been chosen as Finalists. They are now eligible for college scholarships.

The arduous qualifying process begins in October of their junior year when they take the PSAT/NMSQT exam (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test). The highest one-half of one per cent scores on a state by state basis, are selected for semi-final status.

Semi-finalists are rated on the above test score, plus their school record, the recommendations of school personnel and a second set of SAT scores taken in the fall of their senior year.

As finalists, these serious students qualify for two types of scholarships. The first, the national scholarship, is awarded purely on the basis of the student's qualifications and accomplishments, and is an outright grant of $1,000. The second type, the corporate-sponsored scholarship, is given for four years in amounts ranging from $250 to $2,000 for each year; financial need does enter into these.

Chris Williams is getting accustomed to winning competitions. He was recently named the 1980 winner of the Hingham Civic Orchestra student competition. Chris plays the saxophone and studies at the South Shore Conservatory of Music under Ken Radnofsky's direction.

He is a member of the Conservatory's Wind Ensemble and plays in the Cohasset High School Ensemble and Jazz Combo. He also sings and is a member of the Math League.

He has gained early acceptance at Yale University where he plans a combined study of computer science and music.

David Zobel is also a musician, math whiz (and he writes nice poetry too!). David is the drummer and bass player in the high school ensemble and jazz combo and also stays sharp through further musical sessions in a local rock band, Czar. He hopes to attend MIT (his second choice is Cal Tech) after graduation where he'll study computer science.

Edward Bear (he's called Ed) is very interested in biology and wants to be a doctor — either an internist or nephrologist (kidney specialist). He hopes to attend either Brown or Cornell. Between studies and a part-time job, he's a busy guy.

Congratulations to all and success in the years ahead.

☐Results of last weekend's competition at the University of New Hampshire Jazz Ensemble Festival are in:

The Junior Jazz Band (7,8,9 grades) placed 2nd, in their 1st competition!

The High School Ensemble and Jazz Combo finished 4th.

Good Work!

☐The "Math League," which has once a month meets, was knocked out of their first place standing last week by Weymouth. We're confident they'll regain their top ranking!

☐Ford Division of the Ford Motor Company has announced that A.J. Antoine, Jr. recently attained membership in the prestigious Ford Society of Professional Sales Counselors for 1979.

Membership in the Ford Sales Society can be attained only by those qualifying Ford salespersons who display outstanding achievement during the calendar year.

Geoffrey Nothnagle, chairman of the American Red Cross March campaign.

A.J. is currently employed with Cohasset Motors, Inc., and has been a professional salesperson there since 1961. The Society of Professional Sales Counselors is a professional organization created by the Ford Motor Company to honor top automotive salespersons.

Mr. Antoine and his wife Marjorie live at 17 Elm Court.

☐Geoffrey E. Nothnagle, vice president, Shawmut Bank of Boston, has been named Chairman of the 1980 March campaign for the Greater Boston Chapter of the American Red Cross. His appointment was recently announced by the Chapter Chairman, Samuel L. Batchelder, Jr.

Nothnagle also serves as chairman of the Financial Development Committee for the Greater Boston Chapter.

☐Ruth and Harry Goodwin, parents of the man who gave birth to FAT CITY, recently returned from a month-long visit in California where they were visiting their daughter Ruthie, son-in-law Chuck and grandchildren Chuckie and Jennifer.

They visited Palm Springs before the floods, saw Bob Hope's house and also visited with Ruth's sister.

☐Eddie Andressia, who lives in Scituate but acts like he lives in Cohasset, has until Easter to get the weight off or goodby to a cool $100 in cash!

☐Another one of those whirlwind vacations took place recently when Tom and Leslie Chamberlain, Ziggy and Ellie Pozatek, Dick and Maggie Tibbits, Frank and Betty Collerton chartered a plane from Boston to Montreal, flew to Puerto Rico where they spent a weekend gambling, then chartered a boat for a week and cruised around St. Thomas.

☐"The drinks were strong but it (the pajama party) was very tastefully done," an eyewitness said of the P.J. party on J. Road said of the party held recently.

☐We're sure you were all wondering . . . Woodridge Builders of Duxbury recently poured the foundation for Chick Pyle's new home on the former Bigelow property.

☐Marilyn and Peter Mazza recently took a very interesting and different vacation abroad. During a two-and-a-half week visit to Africa, they went on a seven day "safari" in Kenya and East Africa, traveling a total of 1,200 miles "out in the bush." They went by vehicle with 11 other people (roughing it would be hiking all the way) and stopped at a different "lodge" each night.

The bush is wild, but the lodges are quite modern and even sumptuous. They are built high up on stilts to allow the animals head room below (its not unusual to look out your window and see an elephant strolling by!).

Their safari brought them through E. Kenya and E. Africa, both dry, arrid and with little vegetation. As they headed north, up past Narobi, the landscape looked more like a jungle. Lions, zebras, giraffes and leopards live free and wild in Africa; they have no fear of man.

The most startling sight to our American neighbors was the Maasai tribe, one of the oldest and poorest, in full tribal uniform. The Maasai are steadfast in their resistance to change; they have witch doctors and are very superstitious. The test of manhood is the first lion kill! There is no money exchange and they still live by their cattle, whose blood is part of their diet.

The people in Narobi, however, are very modern and friendly. Peter is a civil engineer working there on building new roads.

☐"Aliens for Reagan" are not from outer space, but from outer Greater Britain and there are two that we know of . . . its okay with me for non-voters to support him!

Local Businesses Hold Energy Clinic

Several local businessmen did more than just beat their chests over the dastardly state of business last week.

They put their collective heads together and offered the public (over 80 persons were in attendance from throughout the South Shore) some really good information about conserving home energy through do-it-yourself and contracted measures.

Local businessmen involved in the energy program held at Kimball's Motor Inn were Wayne Sawchuk of Century 21 Minot Realty; Rand Gleason of DMB Hardware Co. (a division of Towle Electrical Co., Inc.) Edward F. Goff of the (Cohasset) Goff Co. by the same name.

Also involved in the program were Bruce Monroe and Mike Caufield of Con-serv — a division of Bay State Gas Co. and Tony Petrocelli of Panelair Corporation in Raynham.

Sawchuck moderated the program, which lasted a little over an hour . . . stressing that while wood stoves are a fantastic alternative to oil, homeowners should be aware of other energy-saving measures so that all the wood heat generated doesn't go out the windows, up through the attic or through the cracks in doors.

Monroe explained the home applicatin of various insulation materials and explained how to get a free energy audit of your home. Namely — by asking for one.

"In the near future (May 31) the legislature will mandate all utilities to provide energy audits for customers through the Federal Energy Act," Monroe said. In the meantime, Bay State is already providing energy audits for businesses, residents and even non-gas customers at no cost.

"We'll also provide an estimate on heat-loss efficiency in the home and suggest self-help projects," Monroe said.

Contractor credibility continues to be a problems in the insulation profession, which has attracted various individuals to it as a result of the energy crisis.

Bay State has an "infrared" policeman program (about a year old) which can check on a contractor's insulation work one or two years after the work has been done to see if insulation has been applied properly.

If the insulation has not been properly installed, Bay State calls the contractor back to do the proper insulation density work for the customer (no charge to the customer).

Bay State also has a listing of certified, trained contractors it works with . . . "We teach contractors certain standards to be maintained by the industry," Monroe said.

According to the experts, air infiltration is the highest contributor to heat loss. Caulking of cracks is important.

Weatherstripping of doors can save meaningful heat loss, and turning the water heater down also helps.

Mike Caufield of Con-serv said "You can save 40 per cent of your home energy bill be shopping locally and by expending as little as $100 and investing some time. You don't need us and you don't need a contractor."

Ed Goff displayed storm windows and the proper types for modern homes and older Cohasset homes. Samplings of doors and other equipment was also arranged in an attractive display.

Lobbying For Olympics

By Lois Martin

Someone down here should suggest the Summer Olympics be held on the South Shore before the North Shore beats us to the punch.

What with all this chatter about alternative sites for the games, we can see the potential for magnificent athletic events in our area, and I don't mean the Revere dog track.

We who live on the South Shore are sports, often good ones. There are scant statistics to prove our motorists offer fewer obscene gestures than those in other sections of the state, but for the most part we have the demeanor vital to residents of an Olympic village.

Not to mention the makings. I don't have a list of all the sports events inherent in the summer games. But common sense says there'd be the routine fun competitions. We've got the accommodations.

Take your diving contests, for example. We could hold those on the Humarock bridge. There've been some pretty keen challenges there in the past as divers tried to hit the water instead of boats passing under. Judges could sit comfortably along the shores, watching the fishermen go out between dives.

And for the track events I suggest Rte. 3. The Expressway often has hurdles and construction signs anyway. Those obstacles would merely be part of the course. And for shorter events runners could circle back around the off ramp.

I wouldn't hold the field contests there though. We've got plenty of sand pits that would handle the crowds and the competition.

For open bicycling there's Rte. 3A, unless the treatment plants could be altered to include the big round tracks I hear they use.

Now take your white water canoeing. We've got the North & South rivers and an occasional good breeze to whip the water into the color they want. As for sailing, there's Green Harbor, Scituate Harbor, whatever. Swimmers couldn't have a better place to prove their speed and endurance. They can head out from any of our beaches, due east, and keep right on going till they feel they've won.

Scullers can do their thing parallel to the shores like the tankers that go by. And there's no limit to the spots suitable for gymnastics what with all our high schools and gyms.

Housing should be no problem. I'm willing to feed a few athletes. A number of sports have survived my high cholesterol cooking. And New England baked beans might mean the difference between the bronze and gold medal for Olympians from Sweden.

We could take care of the visitors as far as our clean sheets would allow. Then there's Wompatuck and Myles Standish Parks for camping near the archery and shooting events.

The South Shore's open spaces would hold spectators. Though I admit transportation could be limited. The Plymouth-Brockton bus line might have to add on a few routes. We could get the school buses going.

Maybe just for this summer we could get the services of the MBTA. We've chipped in on it. Now's the time we could use it. But if we pay now not to have it, I wonder how much it would cost to have it.

No matter. These are small hurdles.It would do us good to have the likes of an Eric Heiden around, not to mention the athletic caliber of the hockey crowd, who might choose to enter the discus throw or something.

They're welcome here. So long as residents of the Olympic Village aren't required to wear outfits like Eric did in his speed skating, I'll join other lobbyists to bring the summer games to the South Shore.

We'd like to meet you.

Appearances & Reality

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Deadline time is either feast or famine. Too much space . . . .or too little.

Last week we talked to the co-editors of the CHS Cohasset Lamplight page which appears in the Mariner bi-weekly. Basically it was just a social chat. We wanted to see how things were going — how we could help to fix a few production snags.

After two publications, the CHS page certainly looks slick, well thought out, quite professional. With 700 students writers at CHS to draw upon, they must have a wealth of talent at their disposal.

Caroline Wampole and David McCarthy both agreed the talent's there. But deadline's still panic time for Lamplighters.

DAVID: What have two pages taught me? They've taught me about people. You ask people to do something. You say, can I count on you? They say, sure. Then the day before deadline they say — "Oh, I haven't done it."

The more we do this the more we find out.

CAROLINE: When I ask people about the article they've promised, they talk to me like a kid would talk to a teacher.

DAVID: I'd rather they'd be blunt and just say they didn't do it. I can certainly understand about not being able to find the time. But over a period of time, I know who will and who won't have an article for me.

CAROLINE: I know there are people who write much better than I do. I'd like to hear from them. But I can't reach them.

SOCIAL CHANGES

CAROLINE: There are some problems with writing about changes at CHS. In many cases the people we'd be writing about have POWER over us. Also, we've been taught to not argue, to not object. We're dealing with our peers — and our teachers.

Caroline said the first responses she received about an article she wrote for the first edition of the Lamplighter, an eight-page tab which came out early in January, were all positive ones.

The article was entitled Preppism — and she took some shots at the fad. Undoubtedly, some of the more colorful species of Prep were personally hurt by her remarks. But in reality, she stung everybody at CHS wearing anything. Including herself.

"The groupies, who were in grades 7-10 said: "What does she know? That came to me through the grapevine, no one ever came directly to me. Hey, I say if you're comfortable the way you are — why get upset?" Caroline said.

DAVID: One girl who was wearing a corduroy skirt with bright shiny squares said to me the other day: "Don't tell Caroline what I was wearing.

"I saw Caroline's article as entertainment," David said, but both editors agreed it had some impact they hadn't expected.

After Caroline (David has done some writing but is more involved in layout and page planning) wrote her divorce commentary she received cracks from students and teachers. "My French teacher said he read something similar to my article in the Boston Globe. But I hadn't seen the piece and I hadn't copied it!"

David and Caroline would both like to enter into news reporting. David would like to do something on the proposed health curriculum.

But they agree news writing isn't as simplistic as it may look in the newspaper. News and commentary come from unexpected sources, always. Any preconceived opinions a reporter might have on any subject are usually blown at the interview or when the reporter actually attends the meeting.

CAROLINE: I feel doing this makes you more confused about people. Before writing about anything you can just have your own opinions. After you start investigating an issue you start realizing there are other ways to look at it.

I attended a school committee meeting recently after which I realized there was more to it than I had believed.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

How to get from Monday to Friday without spending too much time in the kitchen is the aim of every busy woman. Whether it's errands, chauffering, or a busy day at the office, it's no fun to come dragging in the door to be greeted by a family clamoring to be fed. Those of us who have to cook each and every day, have learned from bitter experience that planning is half the battle. Nothing could be easier than reaching into the freezer for a casserole you've prepared ahead of time and while it's bubbling away in the oven, you can make a big bowl of salad and some garlic bread to serve with this

CHICKEN CREOLE

1 frying chicken, 2½ lbs., cut up
2 T flour
2 T margarine, or other fat
1 large onion, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 small green pepper, chopped
1/2 c. chopped celery
1¼ tsp. salt, dash of pepper
1 bay leaf, crumbled
Dash of hot pepper sauce
1 28 oz. can tomatoes

Dredge chicken pieces with flour and brown lightly in hot margarine. Remove chicken and add next four ingredients to skillet. Cook slowly five min. Add remaining ingredients, breaking up tomatoes with spoon. Bring to boil and add chicken. Cover tightly and simmer approx. 40 min. Serves four and about 400 calories per serving!

What a rare occasion it is when we step out of the car and into the house without bringing something home with us. Seldom do we come back empty-handed and quite often it's a purchase made at the nearest store because we've run out of some ingredient crucial to the recipe we're trying. To be halfway through a cake and find there's no vanilla on the shelf can try one's soul, so it's best to assemble everything called for in the recipe before starting this Weight-Watchers

PINEAPPLE CHEESE PIE

1 8 oz. can pineapple in its own juice
2 T juice
12 oz. cottage cheese
1 tsp. vanilla
4 pkgs. sweetener [or equal to 8 tsp. sugar]
2 pkg. unflavored gelatine
4 T juice

Put gelatine and 4T of juice in saucepan and heat slowly until dissolved. Put everything in blender and blend until creamy. Pour into pie plate and refrigerate until set. Sprinkle cinnamon over top, if desired.

Just around Christmas time we reviewed the Marshfield Newcomers Club cookbook called "Delectable Collectibles." Now it's nice to know that some of the proceeds from the books you bought have resulted in the club's donating $500 to the Gary Gunther Fund to help pay medical costs for this fine young high school student's fight against leukemia. Call Carole Ellis to see if any books are left. She tells me there'll be no second printing.

When you hate to cook, your main idea is to get in and out of the kitchen with incredible speed. Here is Jean Reynolds' snack which will enable you to do just that, while at the same time providing your family with a healthful snack.

STUFFED DATES

2 c. pitted dates
1 c. orange juice
1 3 oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
Slivered candied pineapple, candied ginger and nuts

Soak dates in the orange juice in small bowl, stirring occasionally, about 30 min. Darin dates, slit lengthwise and lay sides flat. Spread with a little cream cheese, add a sliver of pineapple, ginger, or nut and close. Makes about 4½ doz.

Olympic Sidelights...Cohasset At Lake Placid

By Eddie Finocchiaro

Sylvester Stallone would be proud of David Infusino and Clark Chatterton.

They may not have gone the distance with Apollo Creed, but they adopted Sly's "Go For It" attitude and ended up with the experience of a lifetime and a slew of funny stories.

It all started just before the Lake Placid Olympic games when Infusino and Chatterton, Cohasset high school AD, decided to invade the tiny bedroom suburb of Mt. Van Hoevenberg.

You see, Chatterton's sister Ann was working as a volunteer and his brother-in-law, Roger Pompeo, was working as a physician.

"My sister called (Cohasset) and said she had four tickets for the Friday five o'clock hockey game," said Chatterton. "On the way up in the car, we heard the seeds, and the US-USSR game was scheduled for five. We got lucky."

But rumors were circulating like mud through a fan that ABC was trying to bully the International Olympic Committee to change the US-USSR game to 8 p.m. so they could show it live. According to Chatterton, it was a good thing the IOC didn't budge.

"There would have probably been a riot," said Chatterton.

But the two went to the game, and Chatterton called it the "biggest, biggest upset I ever saw. It was emotionally draining. The Russians outplayed the Americans, and even after they lost, they were perfect gentlemen and sportsmen."

But before the game, there was the ticket dichotomy. Ann had sold one of the tickets to another member of the support staff, and the supposed user of the third ticket, Bob Magner, had to pull a Houdini. So, there was nothing to do with the leftover ducat (fact value $67.50) but sell.

And while selling, Chatterton felt like he was in a wild Moroccan street market/den of thieves.

"Everybody knew who else had what tickets, and how many were circulating, and how much the going price was," said Chatterton. "We were all acting as agents for each other."

Until, of course, the photographer from the Syracuse Post-Standard popped by and caught the two musketeers in the act.

"Kiddingly," said Chatterton, "I told the doctors we were staying with that we were going to be on the front page of the newspaper. How was I to know?"

And they were. And that's when another caper came up.

"We'd go into stores, and I'd tell people, 'Hey, this guy here, he's a celebrity,'" said Chatterton. "Then, they'd see the paper. The caption was below the fold, and David resembles Eric Heiden. Next thing I know, he's signing autographs. I had to get out of the store, I was laughing so hard."

And all day Saturday, he signed autographs.

But on Sunday, it was the hockey game. And no more needs to be said on that tangent.

"The feeling was great — it drew us all together," said Chatterton. "You could see grumpy old people in the street who hadn't smiled in 20 years and they were smiling and dancing."

And between Cohasset and Lake Placid, only one bad experience.

"The only time I got ripped off," said Chatterton, "was the time I had to pay a buck-seven for a cuppa coffee."

Harris Takes Silver On Cape

Kristin Harris, 16-year old sophomore at Cohasset High School, won a Silver Medal recently in the 1980 Yarmouth Open Freestyle Ice Skating competition, held at the Cape Cod Coliseum.

Kristin is a member of the Silver Blades Skating Club of Cohasset, and the Boston Skating Club. She is coached by professionals Marcia Breen of Scituate, and Tom McGinnis of Newton.

The Silver Blades Club is proud to announce that their precision team, the Eaglettes, also skated to a 2nd place victory, and took home the silver medal and trophy. The precision team of 16 skaters includes three Cohasset residents: Cheryl Adams, Tricia Geary, and Kirsten Rauhauser.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Cohasset Needs A Team To Support On Saturday Afternoons

By Bob Tis

Due to the shrinking size of Cohasset compared to other South Shore League schools, the School Committee is considering pulling the football team out of the league.

Many think that this is the first step in the complete phase-out of football in Cohasset, and some advocate the idea due to the rising cost of outfitting a team.

In no way is this miserly attitude prevalent inside the walls of the Pond Street Palace.

"This is totally ridiculous and out of the question," said Skipper lineman Paul Buckley. "There is no way this town can go without a high school football team."

This opinion, predjudiced as it may seem, is found among a large part of the CHS student body. The gridsters receive the biggest crowds, and pull in the largest gate of any sport in Cohasset, with the possible exception of the tennis team.

"Football should never be cut," soccer player Matt Packard said. "It's a character-building sport, and as long as 11 players want to suit up, they should have the chance."

To shine a light on reality for a moment, the chances of a football team being placed in a less competitive league, possibly an independent league, would be jumped upon by any true Las Vegas oddsman. This alternative to the present 'hard work, no win, low morale' system has many good points. It will give Cohasset a chance to have a winning team, and along with that, the pride that goes with a winner. It also would possibly reduce injury due to playing towns bigger than Cohasset.

Surprisingly, the reaction to this by present team members is adverse.

Sandy Ayer, Skipper co-captain, summed it up, saying: "We've been working very hard and I feel we can compete in the South Shore League this year. We have a building team and I think we'll show marked improvement over the years."

The question of phasing out football is still on hand. This idea is shunned by all students and most townspeople but there are still some tightfisted townspeople who feel that the whooping $16,000 allowed for football in the budget could be used in other ways.

This 'knothead attitude,' in the words of graduating noseguard Dave Turner, is "ridiculous." Cohasset needs a team to support on fall Saturday afternoons no matter how much the team loses by.

Some say soccer (the upcoming sport) is the answer, a drop in the bucket compared to the football budget and a fairly exciting sport. Seriously, though, crowds larger than the normal soccer groupies can not be expected.

Football, like no other sport, brings the town together, brings in large gates and gives the town something to be excited about.

Clark Chatterton, Cohasset High School Athletic Director, pointed out that if the move was made, the Skippers would go into an independent league. If the football team made the logical move to the Mayflower League, then all the other teams would have to play in this less competitive league. The Mayflower League does not have girls' competition in most sports and this would be tragic for girl athletes.

As Clark said, "football is the center of many activities, and without it the band, cheerleaders and gridiron club would probably be extinct."

The switch to an independent league is a possibility within the next 2 to 3 years, and, in this journalist's opinion, is a good move. Because the eventual phasing-out of football is not reality and as long as 11 guys want to suit up, there should be a Cohasset football team. No matter how much they lose by.

Energy's Back On the School Budget

By Karin Bartow

The school committee continued to juggle their decimals in the hardball game of budgetry as they approach the final seconds of the period.

The original proposed budget, presented by the Superintendent on Dec. 17, of $3.7 million, was reduced last week by $22,000, but went up again this week by $141,700.

Monday night's vote was 3-2 in favor of amending the budget for these costs, with Walsh and Gjesteby again opposed.

The soaring costs of fuel and energy which are making the game of budgeting under the Massachusetts 4 per cent spending cap difficult, were voted into the fiscal 80-81 budget as adjusted recently by Superintendent Maloney.

The total increase to date amounts to 7.36 per cent, of which 3.50 per cent is energy related. Maloney pointed out that if the bill before the Massachusetts legislature, which would exclude increased energy costs from the tax cap, is passed, Cohasset would be within the 4 per cent cap on all matters not relating to energy.

The price of playing the 4 per cent game last year has been a cruel call for Cohasset as lights, heat and gasoline eat up the allowance this year. Supt. Maloney finds this all "frightening, but it's also a reality," he said. "When I look at the programs that we're trying to contain and I look at energy, all we're doing is staying in business and not adding to programs."

The energy vote was to add $123,500 into the energy account to cover anticipated further increases. The increase was adjusted down by $6,000 that will be earned from a $8,000 capital outlay (approved by the committee 5-0) for controls on heating ventilators in the high school.

The controls will adjust the 160 units so that they are not blowing air all the time.

Additions to the budget were also made in the following areas: $5,200 was voted (4-1 with Langmaid opposed) for lunchroom/activity aide salary for personnel to "pa-

Health Post To Be Appointed

It didn't seem quite fair.

Marilyn Sweeney, senior member of the board of health and its acting chairman contacted Atty. David Sullivan, in the electioins division of the Secretary of State's office, and he and others at the state level agreed that it wasn't fair.

The position on the board of health recently vacated by Dr. Roger Pompeo is not eligible to be placed on the ballot. Pompeo resigned his position last Wednesday, the last day for nomination papers to be taken out for town offices was last Friday.

Sullivan told Mrs. Sweeney Tuesday of this week that it was the general feeling at the state level that a position for annual elections had to be publicized for at least a week.

Mrs. Sweeney said her concern was not with Pompeo's resignation itself. "I just didn't feel a one-day opening made for a good, open election process.

"Until I read the Mariner last Friday I hadn't realized the opening would be filled by election."

She feels in this instance timing would have disenfranchised a lot of people in the town who might have run for the office.

"People have not been necessarily sophisticated about town government. The board of health itself has been under a lot of fire in recent years and I couldn't take this position casually. Government is here to serve the people, act for the people. A lot of times that doesn't happen. When a last-minute resignation occurs a difficult situation arises and every voter in town is put at risk."

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. was on vacation

School Comm. Makes Cuts

By Karin Bartow
and Tanna Kasperowicz

Last Tuesday (March 4) the school committee cut $23,000 from its budget in an attempt to stay under a four percent tax cap including energy . . . the most expensive cut being $4,000 from the foreign language capital outlay budget (for tapes and cassettes).

But all indicators are that the committee will start playing hardball in future sessions by suggesting teacher cuts from throughout the system.

An attempt by Committeewoman Diana Kornet to add energy overrides of $129,782 to the present four percent budget, reducing it by the approximate $25,000 the committee had already made in cuts at that session failed to pass on a 3-3 no-action vote. Voting in favor of Ms. Kornet's motion were Chairman Jack Langmaid, Irene Brown and Ms. Kornet. Voting no were Frank England, Patricia Walsh and Martha Gjesteby.

Frank England said he would still like the superintendent to find another $100,000 to cut out of the proposed $3.67 million 1980-81 school budget.

School Supt. John Maloney gave the committee the order of his priorities for budget cuts as follows: $12,500 from main-

Guys...On the Softball Team?

By Eddie Finocchiaro

David Turner, Lance Norris and Mike Thornton are attempting to break a barrier and sound a call for men's rights at Cohasset high.

(Men's rights?)

OHHH . . . Come on, you say. Balderdash and falderal, for lack of a better term. But these guys are doing something they never could have done before — play on the girls' softball team.

"Why is it necessarily a girls' team?" said Thornton, a regular male Gloria Steinem.

Thornton and his compadres got the green light last July, when the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Assoc. handed down decision #78-392, which requires boys to be allowed to participate on what were formerly girls' teams.

The wording of the rule is sketchy, though, and has a clause that provides for schools to make separate teams for each sex, if enough

Cohasset's Week

Budgets Scrutinized. . .More C.S. Debate

C.S. Debate

On a vote of 5-zip with two abstentions, the advisory committee opted last week to not recommend the selectmen's town meeting article asking that the police department be removed from Civil Service.

But Advisory Chairman Jean Cotton said later in the week the committee was having second thoughts on the matter, and could reconsider its vote when it learns more about selectmen's plans for an in-house program.

Police Officers David Pomarico, president of the police association, Gerald Doyle and Brian Noonan stated their objections to being removed from Civil Service:

—The cost to the town of maintaining two systems: Civil Service and its own system — and the complexity of dealing with two systems simultaneously.

—The need for police officers to act independently of political influence.

Officer Doyle said Civil Service had been operating smoothly in the town up until recently. "The problems have only arisen since selectmen started interviewing men for jobs on the police force."

Egg Hunt

Saturday, April 5 the Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct its annual Easter egg hunt. Details will follow in future issues of the Mariner.

Each year the recreation department has requested donations of toys, books, records, games, gift certificates from merchants to use as prizes for children participating in the hunt. Merchants wishing to make a prize donation should call the recreation department office at 383-6791. Arrangements will be made to pick up the merchandise.

Transfers Voted

At a recent meeting the advisory committee voted transfers from the reserve fund totalling $1,000 — reducing the current reserve to $11,202.

Transfers voted were as follows; $125 for the conservation commission for secretarial services; $875 for the fire department for educational credits (per contract).

Water Budget

The advisory committee has recommended a $118,246 water budget for 1980-81, recommending only that $10 for out-of-state travel be deleted. Members noted that as a result of the recent drought throughout the state, the merchandising of water may become a real possibility of the town.

Also recommended was $6,300 for water capital outlay; $27,925 for retirement; $121,072 for interest on loans and $86,000 for maturing debt.

Bikeway Project?

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R), Third Plymouth District, attended the Hingham Board of Selectmen's regular weekly meeting last week.

Mary Jeanette informed the Board that federal funds may be available to further encourage the use of Commuter Boat transportation.

Collagan, Daley and Murray are hopeful that this money will be approved. Future plans would be to extend the bikeway to Cohasset and Hull. If all fares well for the project, Mr. Collagan and Rep. Murray will approach the Cohasset and Hull Selectmen for their approval of a bikeway project.

S.A.T. Course

Project Prepare, Inc., an educational test preparation service, has established residence at the Hingham Community Center for an eight session S.A.T. preparation course for high school juniors taking the May 3rd exam.

The course will begin on March 19th from 6-10 p.m.

Project Prepare's primary objective is to provide quality instruction by certified, experienced secondary English and Math teachers who will focus on the specific kinds of verbal and mathematical reasoning skills needed to succeed on the S.A.T.

The instructional format incorporates lecture, practice testing, review, and test taking strategies. A simulated S.A.T. will be given toward the end of the program.

Harbor Workshop

The Cohasset Harbor Study Committee has announced plans for a public workshop to be held on Wednesday, March 19th, 8 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Charles G. Fink, Chairman of the Harbor Study Committee, explained that this is the third in a series of scheduled workshops. The workshops are designed to involve Town residents and interested persons in the Harbor Master Plan Program which began this past November.

Representatives of local boards, and Federal and State officials have been invited to attend.

The Harbor Study Committee is utilizing a grant from the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management Program to carry out the study.

Monorail Bill

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray and Representative Elizabeth N. Metayer have filed a bill providing for an investigation and study relative to the feasibility of building a monorail system from the city of Boston to the town of Plymouth.

The study by a special commission of which three members would be appointed by the governor would also include three members of the senate, five members of the house and the Secretary of Transportation & Construction or his designee.

The special commission would recommend the design and construction of a monorail system beginning in Boston at the South Station and would run along the Southeast Expressway to Route 3 and continuing on to Plymouth.

Highlights Of CCC Bowling

By Bill O'Connell
CCC Bowling Manager

March 4 marked the end of another bowling season for the "Roaring Twenties." The season ended with the championship being decided on the final day, when the Razzmataz team, captained by Eleanor Barrie, over-bowled the Katydids, captained by Kay Lincoln to eke out the victory.

The highlight of the season was a fine three-string total of 353, including a high single of 135, by Harriet Benedict.

The Roaring Twenties, a group of women bowlers, was originally started by Aleste Churchill. This year they returned to bowl at our reopened alleys.

A new feature at the alleys will be unlimited bowling on Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights from 8-10 p.m. for only $2 per person (parties of two or more).

In the meantime, two residents did see the Mariner in time to take out nomination papers. At presstime Tuesday, it was too late to ask Lester Hiltz of Cushing Road and Paula Knowles of Border Street if they would seek appointment to the position.

According to Mrs. Sweeney, she and Health Board Member Lynne Buckley will meet with selctmen in the near future to make a joint-board appointment for a one-year term on the board of health.

Residents Concerned Over Plant Size

In the next few weeks or days it is expected sewer commissioners will sign a contract with Metcalf & Eddy Engineers for the design of a 1.0 MGD (million gallon per day) wastewater treatment plant which will service the town's needs over the next 20-30 years.

This last action of the lame duck board, which will be out of office as a group after the April 12 elections, is necessary, the commissioners said, in order for the town to meet the terms of the consent agreement which a Feb. 14 special town meeting voted to sign with the Attorney General's office.

At Monday's meeting commissioners never formally asked the 30-40 persons who attended the session for a consensus of opinion on the facts presented, but it appeared from questions asked that a majority of residents were concerned about building a larger capacity plant as opposed to a smaller plant . . . which some residents felt might better retard growth in the town.

Under a unique situation, the town is eligible to borrow for the sewer project through the Department of Agriculture at 6.5 percent for bonds. The town will have to make short-term borrowings to catch up to the anticipation of grant money, but betterments will be returned to the town.

According to Metcalf & Eddy Engineers, betterments can be based on frontage or the average per area, although the front-foot method (former method) is the most popular method used.

The non-user benefits by getting a place to take septage wastes (to the plant) and the capacity is built in for future use.

In the user chart shown, 20 per cent is recooped to the town through betterment charges, but sewer commissioners (a newly elected board) will determine the exact betterments (through town meeting) to be charged.

In Phase I of the project, the veteran's area, Hillside, schools and a portion of 3-A from the A & P just past Pond Street on 3-A are scheduled to be sewered. But the exact streets to be sewered can be controlled through town meeting vote.

With the 1.0 MGD plant 50 per cent of the town could eventually be sewered over a period of 20-30 years.

Metcalf & Eddy Engineers said areas to be sewered are already densely developed. . . "We don't see any significant growth changes," Engineer Terry Driscoll said.

Edwin Young, chairman of the citizens' advisory committee on site selection, said his figures showed 1,876 people over the age of 17 live in Phase I of the design area. "There are 104 approved lots in Phase I, and 136 plots of vacant land for a total of 240 lots."

Over a 20-year period Young said 700 additional people could live in Phase I of the project area. "But there isn't space for a 50-lot subdivision."

When Jan Daggett, candidate for a one-year term as sewer commissioner and a member of the citizens' advisory committee on site asked how much growth would be allowed before the town reached capacity in Phase I, Driscoll said M & E had made allowances for additional filling in of vacant land.

Driscoll said the board of health could determine that some areas be required to be sewered . . . extensions in some areas could be made.

Although Driscoll said M & E had not noticed a move for development in sewered areas of Scituate or Hingham, Patricia Facey, chairman of the planning board, said her information was to the contrary regarding the North sewered district in Hingham.

Regarding Cohasset, Mrs. Facey said "Almost every bit of vacant land is under consideration or proposed to be developed. We know of areas developers would like to develop with sewers."

While Mrs. Facey said the planning board cannot legally stop growth in the town, it can plan for growth.

Young, a registered engineer, said his figures showed that 640,000 gallons a day would come out of Phase I. Accordingly, he said the town's proposing a 0.4 MGD plant would be "stupid."

He suggested the real control of growth in the town would come through town boards and town meeting itself.

He added that some control and financial costs should be maintained by making developers sewer their entire developments before selling their very first lot.

A 1.0 MGD plant could service a maximum need of 10,000 people — Cohasset's saturation population is estimated at 15,000. But with controls, that population is unlikely, M & E Engineers said.

Young said with the sewering of Phase I, with a 1.0 MGD plant, the town would have a 300,000 MGD reserve. Mrs. Daggett said there might be some pressure put on that reserve by developers.

William Montuori, sewer commission chairman, said there could be pressures put on a too-small plant, as well.

Odd Man In

In an election when two candidates come up with the same number of votes, a recount is ordered, and if that doesn't result in a solution, a new election is called to determine the winner. There is a way out. Invariably, in a new election the exact same number of people won't vote the exact same way again.

When the Cohasset School Committee comes up with a 3-3 vote (no action), education reaches a standstill until somebody gives in. A two-thirds vote is required for any action on that committee.

The school committee may well be the only committee on the South Shore with an even-numbered board (six). One school committee member recently noted there were 12 disciples. Yes, there were. But they were appointed by one man and they could be fired.

The school committee is not working.

The health curriculum issue is still being debated. Half of the committee feels another $100,000 can come out of the proposed 1980-81 budget, the other half doesn't.

Debate on small issues is prolonged. Five, six, seven (or is it really as many as nine?) school committee secretaries have terminated their association with the committee since last September.

School Supt. John Maloney is one of three finalists for a job in the Sharon School Department.

Need we say more?

The odd man is needed to give direction to a school department that gets precious little direction from the committee's 3-3 (no action) votes and attitudes.

The worst decision is indecision. When a wrong decision is made everyone knows pretty quickly that it was wrong. It can be revoted. Hardly any school issues we know of are life and death issues.

In spite of all we've said, there's really only one issue here... the impossibility of an even-numbered committee's ability to deal with others or with itself.

Elect A Plumber, He Said

By Chet Ellis

Every four years our democratic tradition requires us to do the impossible. We must elect a new leader. Picking the President of the United States from the usual line-up of candidates is like choosing the right eggplant at the market.

It can never be done to complete satisfaction, there's usually at least one thing wrong with all of them.

This year we're really up against it; those available are a seventy-year old actor, a sea-going peanut farmer, an over-aged preppie, a professional mouth, a Cape Cod channel swimmer, and now a former White House caretaker. What a crew! It's no wonder the country's in trouble.

There may, however, be a better way . . . Since the choices in this year's election look to be difficult and since I have always taken the selection of a President seriously, I decided, therefore, to get some expert advice before I cast my vote.

Now, advice is one of those commodities a person should take from someone older than themselves. Old people love to give good advice: it compensates them for their inability to set a bad example. Try it the other way, and you'll see what I mean.

In any case, last Tuesday, I took the afternoon off, and made the trek out the yellow brick road to visit my friend (and now confidant), old Bates Lincoln Pratt, the Hermit of Beechwood. He has moved by the way, from Whitney Woods to a hut on the banks of the new reservoir (he wanted a water view).

I thought he certainly should have formed an opinion by now, or at least could offer a few words of wisdom, as to which of this year's candidates would make the best choice. After all, he has observed all the presidential campaigns from Teddy Roosevelt to the present.

I tried the direct approach. "Say Bates, which of the harried hopefuls do you think would make a good chief executive; the actor, the peanut farmer, the preppie, or the channel swimmer?"

"None of em," he snorted, "there's only one way this country is going to survive the next four years."

"What's that?" I asked, expecting to hear about the virtues of Calvina Coolidge or what might have been had Wendell Wilkie made it to the White House.

"The country's goin down the pipe, so . . . elect a plumber!" he said simply.

"What! Elect a plumber? I don't understand, there aren't any plumbers running, as far as I know."

"Then run one," he added. "A plumber is exactly what this country needs. Government's too important to leave to the politicians. Plumbers have more common sense than most people, are hard workers, and besides, they're used to being knee deep in you know what and yet they always get the job done and come out smelling like a rose! You asked for my advice, there it is: elect a plumber."

"But what about all the complex economics problems, the fuel crisis, and foreign affairs? How would a plumber deal with those?" I asked, incredulous at his choice.

He smiled smugly. "I wouldn't worry about complex economics. Have you ever had a plumber explain his bill? Anyone of em could put them fancy pants economic advisors to shame. As to affairs, leave them to the milkman, most plumbers I know won't have anything to do with foreigners."

"Well, I don't know . . . even if you're right, and we could find a plumber who wants the job, how could he possibly be elected? Have you thought of that?" I asked with a smirk. I had him this time, or so I thought.

"Easy as freezin a water pipe" he said. "Just create a crisis that only he can solve. Presidential candidates have been crises creatin to get elected since George Washington tweaked the British Governor's nose. You don't think the Revolutionary War just happened, do you? Remember the Maine! And how about Iran for gosh sake?"

"But what sort of crisis could a small town plumber create which would have enough impact to get him elected President of the United States? " I asked.

"You ain't much of a politician are ya?" he grunted. "Do I have to do all the heavy thinkin around here? All ya do is wait until the Republican convention deadlocks between the actor, the preppie, and the mouth; then, when frustration, indignation, and consternation all reach their peak, you plug up all the toilets. The rest you can figure out for yourself . . . "

Next week . . . "FLUSHED WITH VICTORY," the story of how Cromwell the Plumber wins the Republican nomination for President of the United States by pulling out all the stops . . .

Advisory Comm. Wants 2 Budgets

Letters

(ED.'S NOTE: The school committee received the following letter dated March 3 from the advisory committee].

Mr. John Langmaid,
Chairman
Cohasset School Committee

Dear John,

At the last meeting of the Advisory Board on March 1st, it was voted to ask the School Committee to submit an alternate budget including all anticipated expenses that would not exceed 4 per cent of the 1980 appropriations.

We are most concerned not only with the tax cap but with the final tax rate. It is our feeling that it may be wise to offer the Town Meeting a choice, if the overall requests increase substantially due to energy costs and rising inflation.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Very truly,
John B. Cotton
Chairman
Advisory Committee

Honorable mention prizes are still being negotiated.

Deadline Is March 29

We desperately need pictures of rabbits and lots of ideas for things to do with eggs for our April 3 issue.

A first, second and third prize will be given in both Osgood and Deer Hill schools and there will probably be lots of honorable mentions.

Here are the rules:

1. Only one entry per student in any category. Students may team up but they will share the prize.
2. Draw a rabbit — confine him to a 4 inch (horizontal) 6 inch (vertical) box. Use BLACK pen only — no crayon, no pencil, no anything else. Felt tip is fine.

4. Write an essay about an egg.
5. Submit a unique egg recipe.

Makes Cuts

tenance projects in three buildings; $19,000 for energy conservation projects; $15,000 from cafeteria remodeling grants; $3,000 from the transportation budget (maintenance and repair); $9,800 from student activities and $89,000 from atheltics for a total of $148,698 in cuts.

Maloney said: "It's my job to provide strong academic programs for our youngsters — I'll trade off any other item for staff and programs."

However, Ms. Walsh said she could come up with $100,000 in cuts without touching athletics.

"The superintendent told you what his priorities are. If you don't like these things, then you've got to find the areas that you want to cut yourself."

When England said he felt class sizes should increase, Langmaid responded:

"Frank, you're talking about 6-7 teachers . . . where are you going to get them from?"

England said he would find it difficult to go to the town and ask for $130,000 over the four percent increase. "I look at the budget sheet and it doesn't add up."

"What you're saying is if you were superintendent you'd do it differently, but you're not. We're not really spending enough on energy conservation. We blow cold air in the school from 3 p.m. to 7 a.m. to keep the heat on! We should be insulating ceilings (the cost to correct heating problems would be about $8,200 — the saving the first year would be a minimum of $5,600)."

Cuts of $23,000 were made as follows:

—Music for Grades 7 and 8 will no longer be a required course.

—$6,000 for rugs at Deer Hill School.

—Art instruction at Osgood and Deer Hill will be reduced by one tenth — equivalent to $1,956.

—The athletic director's salary was reduced by $1,000.

—A total of $1,000 was eliminated from the capital outlay budget at Deer Hill and Osgood, for a video tape deck.

—$2,700 was eliminated from the high school library budget.

—The guidance budget for MOIS was reduced by $2,500.

—$1,000 was taken from football coaches' salaries.

—$2,000 from the maintenance painting account for the high school auditorium.

—$4,000 from the foreign language capital outlay budget (for tapes and cassettes).

—$1,000 from the CHS music capital outlay and/or replacement of equipment accounts, at the department's discretion.

—ADD $1,000 to the kindergarten aide salary, raising that to half-time teacher salary.

trol" the bathrooms and locker rooms during the lunch hours when students have mobility and teachers are otherwise occupied.

Mrs. Walsh, who made the motion, said that "this is a response to a definite problem that concerns the junior/senior high parents."

Apparently, there is a lot of pot smoking going on in the school during the lunch hours. Teachers are not required to monitor the lunchroom or bathrooms, as per their contracts.

Voted (5-0) to add $5,000 to the special needs transportation account.

The committee did not finalize a budget figure at Monday's meeting, even after almost three months budget sessions.

The deadline the school committee has to meet for a final budget figure is Monday, March 17 at 8 p.m. when they are scheduled to meet with the Advisory Committee.

The game will have to wind down that night. The open budget hearing for the town is on the calendar for Thursday, March 20.

☐The "voter" turnout was heavy in last week's primary election held at Deer Hill School — out of 377 registered "voters," 88% cast their vote either as Rep. or Democrat (write-in's were allowed too) for the candidates of their choice.

Election sponsors and officials, were Raymond Levine's 5th grade class who researched candidates and gave students information on each one. They registered the voters (who had to choose a party — a couple of knowledgable 4th grade "voters" said that party differences were pretty much the differences between candidates). . . Booths were set up in the cafeteria where students picked up their ballots from election officials and voted. The 5th graders did a very efficient job. The results were in (no early percentage projections) by 2 p.m.

Just about now, a party is called for and, presto, along comes St. Patrick's Day, when "Irish Eyes are Smiling." Even those who lay no claim to the "Wearing of the Green" are swept up in the merry mood of the day. So, call in your friends, get the table silver out of the vault (the only safe place these days) and rather than serve the traditional corned beef and cabbage, let's plan a party that's a little bit different. Here, for instance, is a recipe for

TAM O'SHANTER COCKTAILS

1/2 c. Bacardi light rum
1/2 c. Italian vermouth
2 strips orange peel
Shaved ice

In shaker, combine rum and vermouth. Run orange peel around edge of two cocktail glasses. Add ice to liquors. Shake well. Pour over orange peel in glasses. Makes two drinks.

"The Irish aren't great, great cooks," says Mary Bailey who knows whereof she speaks, having been to Erin. Ann Valair agrees and says that the food they had in the Emerald Isle was very simple. "They do a lot of boiling," says Mary. "Mostly root vegetables." We all know of their fondness for potatoes (mostly mashed, says Ann) and they have stews and lots of mutton. The food is meant to stick to your ribs and lunches are apt to be hearty soups, such as oxtail, with hot, crusty bread. Breakfast often features slabs of smoked ham and desserts aren't exactly dainty either, with trifle a favorite and pie cut in squares and smothered in clotted cream. This is a sample of what they do with vegetables and though it's a simple recipe, Mary says you'll be surprised at the flavor, almost a taste of pineapple. Featured at a little Irish inn they found along the way in their travels, here is the recipe for a casserole of

PARSNIPS & CARROTS

Cook carrots, peel and mash in processor. Cook parsnips separately, peel and mash. Combine two with butter, salt and pepper and sour cream. And that's it!

Irish bread is a family favorite with the Joe Linskeys. The wife of Marshfield's amiable selectman says she sometimes substitutes caraway seeds for raisins and makes a round loaf by baking her bread in a heavy black skillet.

IRISH BREAD

2½ c. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1/4 c. butter
1/2 c. sugar
1 egg
1½ c. buttermilk
1 c. raisins
1/2 c. currants

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, soda. Set aside. Cream butter and sugar. Add beaten egg, buttermilk; blend well. Add liquid mixture to dry ingredients; mix by hand only until dry ingredients are well-moistened. Fold in raisins, currants, caraway seeds (if desired). Pour into greased 1½ qt. glass casserole. Brush top with melted butter and sprinkle with a little sugar (if desired). Bake at 375 for 30 min., then reduce to 325 for about 30 more min. Test in middle of loaf before removing from oven. A long bar pan, 13x4x2" may be used, or an iron skillet.

Shamrocks and green beer, parfaits or ice cream and green creme de menthe, and Irish coffee to complete the meal; colorful, but food that probably never graced too many tables in Ireland. Ethel Page suggests another dessert, easily made from a chocolate wafer pie crust already prepared and offered at Angelos. While putting away your grocery shopping, leave vanilla ice cream on the counter to soften. Fill shell with ice cream and freeze. Just before serving, top with shaved chocolate and green creme de menthe. There are many variations, one being peppermint stick ice cream, or layers of coffee and chocolate, but for the holiday, think green.

Will Women Weaken The Fighting Forces??

By Gwen Smith

"Hell, no, we won't go! We won't fight for Texaco!" The chant rises as anti-draft movements on college campuses get underway again. What started this revival? In his State of the Union Address President Carter proposed having 19- and 20-year-olds, both male and female, register for the draft.

This radical proposal raises an important issue: should women, the protected and supposedly weak half of the human race, have to register for military service?

The simple answer: why not? The reasons are many. Females are more likely to have a high school diploma, and they present fewer drug and discipline problems. Because there are not enough jobs for those who want them, women are easier to recruit than men. Tending to stay in service longer, women are promoted faster than their male counterparts.

Generally, women in the armed services are of higher mental aptitude, and have better dexterity and perceptual skills. Excepting jobs that require upper body strength, women can perform virtually all the jobs the same as men.

In reality, the overlap between the sexes in terms of physical strength is great. Besides, the military needs well-educated troops to handle sophisticated machinery, not musclemen (musclewomen?).

Despite all these good arguments, Carter's proposal is considered radical and unrealistic. What it all boils down to is just that Congress, the military, and other decision-makers are not ready to give women combat roles, such as infantrymen, fighter pilots, and tank drivers.

In the Navy and Air Force there are legal restrictions prohibiting women in combat roles. The Army also has a policy to that effect. Why do such obviously sex-discriminatory policies exist? Mainly they exist because many people are afraid that "women will weaken the fighting forces and crucify national defense."

According to The Army Research Institute Studies, the number of women in an army unit has no effect on the performance in field exercises. No real reason exists for not permitting women to perform combat roles in the military except the out-dated tradition of "men-only."

A good many of the people who do not want women to be included in the registration and draft are women. For decades women have demanded the same educational, job, and financial opportunities as men; they must now also accept the negative side of their supposed "equality." If women are not included in the registration (assuming it is passed), the government could be sued for sex discrimination.

Actually, however, women still are not completely equal before the law: the ERA has not been passed. Registration would probably help the potential amendment. Fighting against the ERA, Phyllis Schlafly's biggest argument was that the passing of the ERA would lead to drafting women.

If women had to register, regardless of the ERA, Schlafly's argument would obviously be weakened. In fact, feminists regard the registration of women as the biggest step towards equality in the last decade.

Congressman Gerry Studds views the issue this way: "I do believe that if peacetime registration is to be resumed, both men and women should be treated equally, just as they should be under every other law of this land."

But should there be peacetime registration? Even though this act would symbolize America's concern and willingness to do something to stop the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, it might be a step towards war, a definite show of militarism. Although registration would show readiness for a national emergency, it would still take more than a month to gather the draftees. According to a House representative, registration would only save two weeks in an eventual mobilization.

Since the Afghan revolt began when the Russian-supported regime tried to enforce women's rights, says Ellen Goodman of the Boston Globe, "There is some irony in thinking that our own young women could be drafted and sent to defend the rights of Afghan men to deny the rights of Afghan women."

If young people have to register, will there be a renewal of the unrest of the 60's? Certainly the government will have to come up with a better justification than "going to fight for Texaco."

Junior Jazz Takes Second

On March 1, the Junior Jazz Rock Ensemble took second place in the University of New Hampshire Jazz Festival. This was especially rewarding because this was their first public performance and competition ever! All the members did a fine job, including the many solosists. Their musical program included the songs "Straight Ahead," "Slow Roller," "Here's That Rainy Day," and "Swing Time," under the direction of Mr. Tony Hyde. Also, competing out of twenty groups, the Senior Jazz Rock Ensemble placed fourth. In addition, the Jazz Combo tied for fourth place. We all will look forward to their next performance at Berklee on April 19.

Bush And Carter Favored By CHS Students

By Cathy O'Brien

Lately teenagers have been described as indifferent towards politics, yet 87% of the high school seniors polled by the CHS Lamplight expressed an interest in the presidential primary. Also 74% of the juniors, and 63% of the sophomores thought that the primaries were important. In the lower grades the averages steadily declined.

Seniors agree that their high interest level was triggered by their eligibility to vote. Junior high students were unconcerned about candidates because they were powerless to vote, and just plain bored with political issues.

Out of 220 students participating in the poll, two-thirds voted Republican. Forty-seven percent of the republicans selected George Bush while 30 percent favored Ronald Reagan with John Anderson trailing slightly at 19 percent. Howard Baker obtained 4 per cent of the votes while Connally and Crane received zero percent.

On the Democratic ticket Jimmy Carter captured a strong margin over Edward Kennedy, 45 percent to 31 percent. Jerry Brown acquired 18 percent and Lyndon LaRoche finished with 1 percent.

In the junior high, Bush clinched a runaway victory on the Republican ballot with nearly 60 percent. When asked to explain the reason he backed the former senator, one twelve year old stated, "He's tuff and won't take guff from the Russians." Yet, another 13-year-old admitted that she chose Bush because, "My Dad told me he'd be good and I believe him."

Surprisingly it was revealed that an overwhelming majority of students do discuss politics with family and friends. However, in the tenth grade (the most apathetic of all the grades) 57 percent of the students do not include politics in their daily conversations. Explained one 16-year-old, "I would rather discuss baseball."

Overall, grades 11 and 12 favored John Anderson on the Republican ballot. According to one junior, "We need a new face with brains behind it in the office." George Bush claimed the tenth grade vote while Bush and Reagan matched vote for vote with the freshmen.

On the other hand Democrats in grades 9, 10 and 12 approved of Edward Kennedy who edged Carter by a slight margin. However, Carter obtained 50 percent of the junior ballots followed by Brown's 31 percent. Some of these students indicated support for the Californian Governor because he backed the decriminalization of marijuana.

Although many students did not fully understand why they endorsed a particular candidate, few refused to vote. Argued one freshman, "Even if it is boring and I don't understand it, I know the issue of the Presidency is important.

With this in mind, a junior added, "With the problems of today's world it is stupid not to be interested. Our next President is either going to save us or ruin us."

Show Biz

Show Biz apparently plays a whalloping role in education today. Time was the school play was just that, presented for parents, siblings and school mates. Now and then the high school actors might be asked to present a fine production to the church or Lions Club. But for the most part drama clubs were an in-house presentation.

I can tell you, based on my experience as one of the knitting chaperones who attended a regional drama festival in Hingham March 1, kids in plays today aren't getting ready first for the school stage. They have an eye for stages where state, New England competitions are held.

PATCHES

In short education, particularly in the arts, has come a long way since my father appeared in Brooksville, Maine with a first grade rendition of "Mighty Oaks from Little Acorns Grow."

My crowd filled me in on the rules on the way to Notre Dame Academy, where still-warm crullers and hot coffee awaited older mothers who need a lot of nourishment. "The Outcasts of Poker Flat" would be produced by a total of 50 students. Seven were cast members and the rest did everything in the world which resulted in an award for "designers and crew." One crew member was unable to help the show go on because of an old fiend, the chicken pox.

In earlier weeks parts of the crew had loitered near a pasture on Union Street to record the sounds of a horse whinneying. Little today is left to the imagination. No one was about to pretend a horse was whinneying and no cast member was assigned to imitate one. It was the real thing.

Same thing with the sound effects for a crackling fire. Some of the crew had gathered around a fireplace, forbidding other family members to speak, until they got the sound they wanted to go with the play.

Anyway we got to the room assigned to Marshfield, saw the paybill/program and headed to the auditorium to watch Hingham High School's "The Madwoman of Chaillot." Strangely enough the auditorium was heated to sauna temperatures. We, not knowing the thermostat there was off its rocker for the moment, arrived wearing most of what we owned.

After Hingham came Notre Dame's "The Member of the Wedding." A couple solid performances surfaced, we responded properly and waited for our show. For a brief moment, I ran back to The Room to check our cast. No sign of prima donnas there. No one falling apart at show time. Instead I saw a cluster of performers in western-type garb, ready to go. A "drunken bum" looked dreadful but he was supposed to. The girls were in long dresses, two saloon women and a sweet young thing to balance the plot.

We watched with prejudicial favor as the "outcasts" and crew did the job. And they did well. But there was no telling what the judges thought, what they were looking for specifically to name their winners.

After we finished off our assortment of bologna sandwiches, chips and brownies, we watched Scituate in "Those Damn Finals." Written by brothers in the cast, it was a light, light show with appeal for the peer group. Entertaining and pleasant. When they'd finished I spoke with the mother of the writers. She was a sensible woman who wasn't eyeing Broadway. Rather she was merely enjoying the product of her products. Later, when Scituate was named an alternate for further competition, she reminded her boys as they passed her in the aisle, to be "good sports." As I say, a sensible mother.

Cohasset did "The Cagebirds," and they did it well. As a competing school, one could have breathed sighs of relief if others failed to come up with good shows. That was not the case with Cohasset, specifically. Theirs was polished, well presented. And Brockton's was featured with pleasing scenery for the Old English Tale.

Still as we consumed more chips and coke while waiting for the judges' decision..."the envelope please," we were confident we'd be named among the winners.

But we were wrong. Though I maintain we were right to look for victory, it wasn't ours. We wondered why. I'm still not sure.

But we all appeared behind the school at 7:30 a.m. that bitter cold Saturday, armed with our lunches, and our knitting for between shows. The students were already there, loading the U-Haul with the scenery, handing out props and costumes. They knew what they were doing and they were doing it with gusto.

Spring Brings New Life To CHS

By Bob Tis

Monday marked the opening of the spring sports season at Cohasset high, and the baseball and softball teams will be inhabiting the two gymnasiums, sharpening fundamentals until the fields thaw proficiently.

Mariner Sports

The track team, led by coach Davis, is in the process of running the streets and will rely on strong performances by seniors Phil Tye, Scott Benbow and India Turner. Coach Davis will be exceptionally hungry this spring, after leading his junior high basketball team to an 0-10 season this winter.

The golf team's activities will be restricted to club polishing until the golf course dries up.

The clubsters, aided by returning veterans Scott Hurlbut, Mike Polito, Doug Dillon and the McNeil brothers, Jack and Jay, will once again put up a bold front in representing the Skippers.

You may have wondered why the tennis teams don't have uniforms and all the other teams do. In this reporter's opinion, this is a flagrant crime, and hopefully it can be corrected before the first game.

Once again, you can discount the rumors. CHS will not be sending a luge team to Zermatt for competition in the TIDL (Tournament Internazionale de Luge). Sorry, fans.

But in these next few weeks, starting positions will be won and lost, teams will be formed, muscles will ache, sweat socks will reek, arms will become sore, heads will roll and the cow will jump over the moon.

Most of all, though, hopes will soar, and sometimes crash, to accent the sound of students cheering, bats hitting balls and character being developed.

Yes, folks, it's spring again. (Next week — team profiles.)

WHO SAYS we can't play? Skipper Senior Dave turner tries pitching (above) as (above right) from left, Mike thornton and Lance Norris watch during their attempt to make the girls' softball team. (Derr Photo)

Trivia Quiz

The Mariner is starting a trivia quiz. Finally. And the first correct answer received at the Mariner, 541 Plain St., Marshfield, wins a mariner t-shirt.

And the first question is:

Everybody knows Bobby Thompson's famous home run in 1951. But who was on deck?

Softball Guys

players from each is willing to participate.

But alas, only three guys had the audacity to want to play softball.

"Equal is equal, right?" asked coach Marilyn Watson. "My opinion is that if the kids want to play, they should play. I asked them at the organizational meeting if they were serious, and they were. They just love the game."

Norris echoed the feelings.

"We play softball all summer, anyway," said the big, bearded bear who resembles a cross between your father and Jack Lambert of the Pittsburg Steelers. "Why not play it now?"

And as a lone male walked through the gym, addressed the three with the limp-wrist salute and a not-so-hearty "Hiya, fellath," Norris took the rip with a smile.

"They don't wanna play, the hell with them," he said. "Who cares what they think?"

And Thornton was a bit more myopically philosophic about the whole deal.

"The ball's too little in baseball," he said with a smile. "Besides, we don't care what the rest of the guys think. We're bigger than they are."

And it is that size which prompts Watson to add, "We'd be just as good without them, you know. We were second in the league last year, and most of the girls on last year's team came back."

But there is still the danger of parents getting mad at a boy making the team before little Jennifer, and don't think Watson didn't give it a lot of thought.

"I thought about it a lot," said Watson, "and I realized I had to go into it with an open mind. Cutting them before trying them out was something I definitely thought about, but I'd be discriminating against them. They've got the right to play."

But if the three musketeers make the team, they will give coach Watson added strength at the bat.

"But they're going to have to learn to take bunt signals," the coach said with a smile.

And the girls? Why, they're all for it, if it will help the team.

"I don't mind at all, if the team will be the better for it," said Lindsey Gilmore. "If these guys stick with it and make it through the season, they should be looked up to."

And Heather Fairchild, amazed that these guys would spend the end of their senior year playing softball, also wished them the best.

"I think it's great, as long as they're serious about it," said the blonde, smiling Fairchild. "I just hope our opponents don't start pointing the finger at us and saying we win because we have them, the guys."

And Thornton's Lady Fair, captain Gina Froio, will also be taking the field, but Watson anticipates no problems.

"I told them that if they break up during the season," said Watson, "they both have to stay on the team."

Meanwhile, Bob Tis is trying to get the rights to these guys, in order to act as their agent when the Womens' Professional Softball League comes calling. Turner thinks it's "a definite possibility," so Tis, the wiley entrepreneur and famous sportswriter, is working to get the book and movie rights immediately.

In the words of Fairchild, "I think it's going to be quite a funny year."

Dennis Kowal— Disciplined Artist Teacher

Dennis Kowal

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Sculpturer Dennis Kowal has been recognized as a pioneer in the use of carved acrylic and solid steel sculpture (studies, in a word) throughout the nation. He has won critical acclaim for exhibitions in New York, Boston and Chicago.

Recently he won a commission from the National Fire Protection Agency to create a 14-inch tall sculpture (Emmy-type award) exemplifying safety. "But I've never sold a piece of sculpture to anyone in this town in the nine years I've lived here."

Dennis and I come up with seven shared reasons why he hasn't been able to sell a study in town. We agree I won't publish any of them.

At 42, Dennis is making a renewed commitment to his own basic principles, an affirmation that he recognizes his kinship with others . . . but has reached a plateau at which he is making new vows to keep his artist's perspective, and is in the meantime paring away the non-essentials of his life.

"You reach a point in life where you don't give it up to a lot of bull "

Inside the artist's studio off Jerusalem Road there is a crow in a cage. Dennis' wife Mary saved it from sure death. But from a fate worse than?

After four weeks in a cage it has been determined the crow will never fly again. Admittedly selfish about his personal freedom, the crow represents a responsibility. We think it eats dog food. Funny papers line its prison.

A decision will soon have to be made. We wonder what will happen to the crow in coming weeks when Spring calls and it stumbles.

Sculpture is not used to explain words. And words can hardly explain sculpture. Art words are expansive, organic and exclusive. Dennis' self-confessed themes in acrylic and steel are imagery, symbolism, enlightment, beauty. Necessarily, we are visiting with the man, not the sculpture.

The artist has a phone and it rings several times during my visit . . . heralding the sounds of lives on the edges of disaster, rebirth . . . at one point Dennis sounds like a Bob Newhart record and we both giggle.

It's easy to see that one acrylic carving is the rolling ocean, polished into bubbling waves. It gathers lights like a prism and changes from one moment to the next . . . a living art. It needs the rest of the world to shine.

With the risk of sounding like Sonya Hamlin, we ask if he were to write a book what book would he have written? The Scarlet Letter, almost anything by Faulkner. His work is a ritual of celebration, totems, ikons, monoliths, monuments — all affirmations of life.

In the middle of cloistered New England, Dennis, who prefers the South, intrinsically — feels people here keep too much to themselves. "Their minds become conditioned. They won't get together to fight," like in Chicago — where walking around a windy corner is a lesson in survival. Still — he's remained for nine years.

Over the years he's held six different teaching jobs.

"I liked teaching but I hate schools and the disciplined politics of schools. They lack quality. There's too much government. Too much paperwork. You are required to placate all students who refuse to work.

"We've got one of the only cultures today that has children as pets."

While teaching at Mass. Art he flunked 26 students "and the administration almost had a heart attack." The theory being that if everyone flunks the teacher is not a good teacher."

At one college where he was an artist-in-residence, he was put on three or four committees, "and they begged me to not come to the meetings. They recognized I was not a committee person.

"I am totally intolerant of ignorance, including my own," he said with a guffaw.

Any preconceived notions about what constitutes the artistic life may or may not be true afterall. Dennis has paid his dues — fathered and raised three daughters in a first marriage, having now reached the stage of protective, necessary selfishness. And commisions are beginning to materialize without any electric proddings.

But the bottom lines are always there.

We wonder about the crow.

Mesmerized and charmed, he would give the necessary orders straightaway.

Musings . . .

By John Cutler

☐Why is Canada like Vichysoisse? It's cold, half French and difficult to stir.

☐"Whoever is not called upon to struggle is forgotten by God." — A Spanish Proverb.

☐If a farmer dies, sometimes the cart is before the hearse.

☐I didn't say she had no sex appeal. I simply said when she put her bra on backwards, it fit better.

☐Inflation note: a sign at the candy counter of the Barnstable News Store on Cape Cod: "Penny candy is now 4 cents."

☐Why isn't Expressway traffic radiator to trunk instead of bumper to bumper?

☐How would you feel if your only son told Anita Bryant to mind her own business?

☐You're in trouble if your twin sister forgets your birthday.

☐Drive-in banking was invented so cars could meet their owners.

☐I forget who said it: "Let me make the newspapers, and I care not what is preached in the pulpit or what is enacted in Congress."

☐Tourists at the State House heard a guide say, "These paintings, folks, are of deceased governors, all of whom are now dead."

☐"What's shakin', Chiefy baby?" One hippie talking to another? No, Thurgood Marshall of the U.S. Supreme Court talking to Chief Justice Warren Burger.

☐In Time magazine, we read the phrase, "inaudible silence." We agree with The New Yorker that "It's the only kind of silence that's any good."

☐A newspaper reported: "The Reagan campaign is in charge of Hugh Gregg." This is probably true, but it would have been more felicitous, wordwise, if he had said that "Hugh Gregg is in charge of the Reagan campaign."

☐A liberal has solutions for problems that don't exist.

☐To fail is to succeed if you learn from your mistakes.

☐The only doctors who still make housecalls are coroners.

☐Too few accomplish twice as much as too many.

☐If Patrick Henry thought taxation without representation was bad, he should see it with representation.

☐Washington has been described as one huge fog bank, completely surrounded by legislative fog horns.

☐"Four hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets." — Napoleon.

☐Ability will never catch up with the demand for it.

☐"My country, right or wrong," is like saying, "My mother, drunk or sober." — G.K. Chesterton.

Feola Innocent Of Operating Un...Guilty Of Illegal Weapon Charge

Wareham Judge Dennis Collari sentenced suspended Cohasset Patrolman Randolph A. Feola, Jr. last week after four days of testimony.

A four-woman, two-man jury found Feola guilty of being in possession of an illegal weapon (a double-edged knife) and innocent of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Although the charges brought against Feola were a felony (knife charge), Judge Collari's sentencing was for a misdemeanor, an alternative which can be imposed on persons not previously convicted of a felony. On a second felony charge a judge is required to issue the maximum penality which is a two-and-a-half year sentence in the Plymouth House of Correction.

Selectmen could vote to reinstate Feola at their meeting Wednesday, or take further action. Any further action would require a hearing. And if Feola were fired from the force as a result of any hearing he could appeal that action to Civil Service.

Judge Collari fined Feola $50 for the illegal possession of a dangerous weapon and $10 each for three driving charges arising from the incident last May in Hull; speeding, failing to keep to the right and failing to have a driver's license in his possession.

Over the past 17 months Feola has been suspended from the Cohasset force three times.

Feola, a 10-year member of the Cohasset police department and son of Cohasset Police Chief Randolph Feola, was suspended from the force with

Sentencing Unclear Regarding Firearms Issue

Shortly before the Mariner went to press this week it was discovered that no one, including the defense or the prosecution, knew what Wareham District Court Judge Dennis Collari's sentencing of suspended Cohasset Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. meant with regard to his ability to carry a firearm.

One attorney suggested Judge Collari simply dealt with what he had before him, a felony charge, never giving a thought to whether the sentencing would prohibit Feola from holding a firearms permit. "He simply threw the whole matter back at the selectmen."

A police chief from a nearby town suggested the entire question was moot, as police officers by definition do not need to be licensed to carry firearms in the line of duty. He added there is nothing in the state statute which requires a police officer to have a firearms permit.

Assistant District Attorney John Rogers, prosecutor at Feola's trial last week, said he had already been misquoted by the daily press and

Studds On Energy-Spending

"Anything short of physical violence is in order," popular Congressman, Gerry Studds, told approximately 40 residents during an early morning meeting at the Town Hall last Saturday.

Residents restrained themselves to asking some tough questions about energy and its relationship to fuel, food, housing needs and medical care — all costs which have tripled during these inflationary times.

"President Carter is not operating under the philosophy that the country's whole problem is energy...he feels the problem is the federal deficit," Studds said. He added: "It is the explicit policy of the federal government to increase energy costs by putting a tax on imported oil."

According to Studds: "Blood-letting in the Middle Ages may ahve been based upon more fact than our current economic policy."

Studds feels a large component of the federal deficit is tied to energy, with $5 billion in increased energy costs being absorbed by the Defense Department alone.

He said there has been a six percent increase in non-necessities and a 17 percent price increase in essentials.

In Fall, 1980, Carter will decontrol U.S. crude oil prices — allowing them to rise to the level of imported oil. "I suggest increasing the price of energy is even more inflationary."

When some residents said they felt the government's balancing of the budget might be a start in containing inflation, Studds said: "How? Balancing the budget may have more of a symbolic than a realistic effect. I don't feel federal deficit spending is as closely related to inflation as previously believed."

When a resident offered that the government must pay off its back debts first — saying debt was more a problem than deficit, Studds said he had

School Budget Still Not Approved

By Karin Bartow

Monday night's school committee meeting drew it's largest audience all year, roughly 65 parents and teachers, as it traveled through familiar budget territory in the ninth meeting in three months for that purpose.

At the conclusion of last week's meeting, committee members were presented with a list of "possible" budget cuts from Frank England and Patricia Walsh for study and potential action at the beginning of Monday's meeting. A final budget figure had not been determined because of the list.

It was the anticipation of some possible action on these items and a budget review with the advisory committee at 8 p.m., that brought so many people out to the meeting.

The audience was spirited and, at times, emotional. It registered both their support of department chairmen and some school committee members who approve of the administration's priorities as presented in the $3.7 million budget, and frustration over other committee members' last minute attempts to further reduce the budget, as their alternative to going to the town with a tax cap override budget.

Chairman Jack Langmaid asked the committee for "any motions in regard to the proposed 80-81 budget." Only one, presented by Walsh, was entertained and voted on before the advisory committee sat in. The motion, voted 4-2 with Irene Brown and Diane Kornet opposed, eliminated a proposed salary increase for the alternative school liasion of $950,000. Langmaid pointed out that this vote does not mean that the committee isn't going to review, at a later time, salaries of all unrepresented personnel.

Cohasset's Week

Hull Events Suspended

Monday night, the school committee voted 3-2 (Kornet not present) to implement the recommendation of the Superintendents and high school principals of Cohasset and Hull, that all athletic events be suspended for the balance of this year and for the two years following. This will permit each town, if they so desire, to make arrangements to play with other towns during the suspension.

Maloney In Sharon July 1

Cohasset School Superintendent John Maloney announced to the school committee at Monday's meeting that he will meet with his prospective new employer, the town of Sharon, next Monday to finalize arrangements for his job there as superintendent, due to begin July 1.

Maloney was offered the job last Saturday from a field of more than 40 applicants.

School Committee Chairman, Jack Langmaid, congratulated Dr. Maloney and said, "On behalf of the committee and all school personnel and citizens of Cohasset, we thank you for all you've done for the town. We wish you well in the future and in your new position."

Maloney responded by saying, "I've spent five long years here building programs and working with children, staff and committee. You have an excellent school system. I hope my replacement will continue to maintain it as it is."

Nominees For Academies

Congressman Gerry Studds, D-Mass., announced his nominations for appointment to the three military academies and the Merchant Marine Academy for the 1980 Fall class.

The nominees were interviewed and selected by the Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee — a group of six distinguished community leaders from the 12th Congressional District.

The following Cohasset resident's names have been forwarded by the Congressman without a preferential listing to the academies, where the nominees will compete for final appointments at the academies themselves.

Nominee for the U.S. Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colorado: Michael Thornton, Fairoaks Lane.

Nominees for the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, New York: Craig Langford, Black Horse Lane; James McNeill, Fairoaks Lane; Paul Plante, . Jerusalem Road; Richard Young, Woodland Drive.

Nominees for the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland: James McNeill, Fairoaks Lane; Paul Plante, Jerusalem Road; John Riley, Haystack Lane; Kevin Worsh, Woodland Drive.

Keep Civil Service

Last week the advisory committee reconsidered its former vote on the selectmen's article on removing the police department from Civil Service and came up with the same conclusion — to keep Civil Service.

Against Cycle Article

On the advice of selectmen and the capital budget committee, the advisory committee reconsidered its affirmative recommendation on a $7,000 police motorcycle, voting unanimously to not recommend the article.

Choice Seats For Tall Ships

The Cohasset Sailing Club will offer choice skyview seats for one of the great spectacles of the decade when it takes over the 14th floor lounge and observation deck of the waterfron tSheraton Building, 470 Atlantic Avenue, on Friday, May 30, for viewing the Parade of Sail of the Tall Ships.

Planned as a major event of its fund-raising for complete renewal of its fleet, the Sailing Club's engagement of the ideal viewing location is considered a special coup since it is believed that every waterfront or rooftop restaurant in the city has been booked for almost a year.

The Sailing Club will charge $25 per person for the 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. viewing period and will include a lunch to be served from 12-2. Sailing Club members will have first call on tickets until March 28, after which they will be avilable to the general public on a first come first served basis until the comfortable limit # of about 200 has been reached. Studds never heard economists state that paying off the national debt was important. "There's been very little serious discussion about that."

He added that asking the government to do what families cannot do, would not be fair. "You can't ask most families to immediately pay off their debts or most of us couldn't afford to buy a home."

He feels we must make more housing available; must control health costs; must use energy conservation measures. "We have a surplus of food — we must build up world reserves. We must address the component parts of inflation or people in increasing numbers are going to go under."

School Budget

When Langmaid welcomed the advisory committee to the meeting, he told them "We're looking at a 7.35 per cent budget increase with the promise by Mr. Litchfield (building inspector) that he'll close the Deer Hill School if we don't get a new roof on the south side." School Supt. Maloney reported earlier in the meeting that after the last snowfall and meltdown, there was substantial leaking at the Deer Hill School and a local engineering firm and the building inspector had recommended replacement of that section of roof at a rough estimate of $35,000.

Langmaid informed the advisory committee that up until last week there had been no new positions added to the budget. Adjustments have been made for two part-time cafeteria aides to patrol bathrooms and locker rooms for pot smokers; the Kindergarten full-time aide position was upgraded to half-time teacher; and the reading lab aide position was added to.

The advisory committee asked if the budget would maintain the quality of education and was told by Maloney "We will be able to maintain and improve, yes, as it stand, but if cuts talked about are voted, no."

Several advisory members asked what action had been taken on the list of possible reductions. The explanation from certain school committee members that only one motion had been taken, so far, opened up the differences that divide them and that have made forward movement on a final budget slow.

Mr. England said, "We have a philosophical difference here; some say we should go tell the administration to take a certain percentage out of the budget." He was referring to the increased energy costs of $123,500 that were voted into the budget last week by a vote of 3-2 (he was absent). The committee is bound by statute to approve that expenditure by a two-thirds vote since it overrides the 4 per cent taxcap."

Mrs. Kornet, representing the opposing school of thought, responded, "Some of us don't see $100,000 to cut out and that's where the problem is."

On the whole, with few exceptions, the school committee aligns its votes down the middle on either side of that philosophical difference. There are those who want the Superintendent and administrators to further prioritize (England, Walsh and Gjesteby) and those who accept the Superintendent's budget, basically, as is (Langmaid, Kornet and Brown).

Teacher frustration was aired by Mr. Leary (Chairman of Guidance Department), William Kite (Chairman of English Department), and Mrs. Berman (Music Department).

Mr. Leary told the joint committees that they (department chairmen) face the horns of a dilemma every year when they are asked for recommendations from their departments. "We must be thinking of improving the quality of the services to the children; it is the school committee's job to eliminate (if they see fit)."

Kite responded to Mrs. Walsh's later motion to reduce the English Department by one teacher this way: "This action would sacrifice the general program for those students who most need it. The effect would be that we'd have to start dismantling the programs we've been working on for 10 years, which include remedial skills development, homogeneous groupings with carefully leveled classes; and a successful creative writing program."

The Superintendent re-stated his priorities for the advisory committee, starting with the most important, academic programs, to athletics and student activities, transportation, food services, energy conservation and plant maintenance.

Langmaid stressed that he agrees with the administration "that (in the high school) tracking and homogeneous groupings are good and that smaller classes should be offered to those who need more individual attention."

Advisory committee chairman, Jean Cotton, wanted to know what the school committee would do if at town meeting their budget is turned down and has to be reduced at a recess. She explained that it was for this possibility that her committee had asked for two alternative budgets, one within the 4 per cent taxcap, including energy, and one excluding energy costs.

Maloney responded by saying that "I would recommend the present 4 per cent budget and come back with a special town meeting and ask for additional money for energy costs." His position remains that there are no where near the cuts on the order of the increased energy costs to be found in the school budget.

The horns of the dilemma for the school committee is that half agree and half seem not to. England stated flatly, "I will not vote for the budget as it stands; we haven't taken enough things out."

The advisory committee suggested to the school committee "that the final decision is in the hands of the voters." They feel it would still be helpful to present a budget that spells out the minimum amount to be maintained and the additional amount to improve services.

After the conclusion of their discussions with the advisory committee, the school committee was reminded by Maloney that they still had a public hearing scheduled for Thursday evening and in order to hold one they must have a budget tentatively accepted.

Cuts were then approved on the order of $5,900, decreasing slightly last week's adjusted percentage increase of 7.35 per cent, of which 3.50 per cent is energy related.

The committee voted 6-0 to take the budget as it now stands to the open public hearing Thursday night. This does not mean it has been approved by the required two-thirds majority of the school committee, since it is above the 4 per cent taxcap. Whether or not the committee will be able to do so before the April 12 town meeting is yet to be determined.

The Quotes That Won Applause

Irene Brown: "I would take the budget to the town tonight. We're going to have a new superintendent and I would hate to tie his hands before he, or she, starts the job!"

William Leary: "There has never been a good year (regarding budget improvements approved) and there never will be as far as I'm concerned. We've told you what our priorities are, you need to decide what yours are!"

Jack Langmaid: "If your kid is number one, you don't need it (out-of-state travel for liasion with colleges by Guidance Department), but if he isn't, it's necessary."

THE PAUSE THAT BROKE EVERYBODY UP

Patricia Walsh to Supt. Maloney, "Would you throw up . . . . . your maintenance cut figures on the screen?!" Maloney said, yes, he felt like doing the former, and he'd be glad to do the latter.

Support Appreciated

To the Editor:

First, I wish to congratulate Polly Logan on her re-election as Republican State Committeewoman of the Norfolk-Plymouth District which covers the seven towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Letters

Even though I did not win as far as the popular vote was concerned, I feel I was a winner in many other more personal ways. I had the pleasure and experience of running for my first political office, with its resulting contacts with the media and the public.

I learned a lot about the political pulse of towns, and met many wonderful people at coffees, social functions and other town activities.

There were many people who not only listened to my reasons for campaigning, but also volunteered to work with me on my campaign for the following goals: to stop the errosion of Republicans in our District, promote solidarity of Republicans, enlist candidates for the ballot, and stop Republicans losing by default.

To these many special people who expended so much of their personal time and energies in performing the numerous jobs that must be performed during the various stages of a campaign; and to the media, newspapers, and radio for their cooperation, I say "Thank you."

The result of all these efforts can be seen in the large vote that I received which was commendable when considering the strong long-term Republican Candidate against whom I was running. And to further show my appreciation and committment to all of those who voted for me and my platform for a stronger Republican party at the Grass Roots level, I am offering my services to the elected State Committeewoman and Committeeman to aid in promoting these objectives.

I am most grateful for the many pleasant experiences I had throughout my campaign and for the many new friends I made. And again, THANK YOU, each and everyone of you campaign workers and voters for your many kindnesses and support.

More Girls' Sports Coverage Needed In Mariner

To the Editor:

I hope that with your new sports editor you do a total overhaul on your sports section and its reporting. It's not that Bob Tis' writing is bad (his writing is fantastic!) but his overall coverage is what needs to be altered. For the past two sports seasons, I have seen plenty of coverage of the boys sports, but the girls sports coverage seems to fade into the background.

Although the Girls Varsity Basketball team did not finish their season with a very impressive record, they surely did deserve more than four articles in your newspaper (they played 18 games overall).

The February 28th issue of The Mariner shows that, for whatever reasons, you would rather cover boys athletic events than girls athletic events. The headlines, which were based on the Varsity Boys game read "Skipper Hoopsters End Season on a Sour Note." A newspaper, which has fair and good coverage, would have headlined it's story, "Skipper Hoopsters End Season on a High Note" and would have written about the Varsity Girls Basketball Team.

Didn't the Girls' victory over Duxbury, the team that stopped State Champion Abington's winning streak and finished third in the league, deserve headline coverage over the Boys' defeat?

If you have never been on a losing team, it is a very discouraging experience. It is especially discouraging to feel that a small town newspaper like The Mariner, which published only Cohasset news, is not behind you. It is great to read about your own team in a newspaper; this is something which shouldn't be denied anyone.

Are you aware that girls teams practice as long and as hard as the boys teams, have to make the same mental, physical, and time commitments, and have the same desire to play well for their school?

I was happy to see in last week's publication your article on the softball team. Would this article have appeared if there were not males going out for the team? If there weren't any boys going out for this team, would you have still run an article on the softball team based on their credentials from last year's season? That being that they were second in the league and missed going to the State Tourney by one game.

Although the team was 12-4 last year, again only about five articles were written about its accomplishments.

Must a girls athletic team have male participants in order to have a substantial number of articles written about them?

Sincerely yours,
Jodi Sandblom

Candidates' Right To Run For Public Office Thwarted!

(ED.'S NOTE: Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark received the following letter from Lester Hiltz late last week. He said he has since received a written opinion from the Secretary of State's office which states Dr. Pompeo's recently resigned position from the board of health cannot be put on the annual town election ballot].

To the Editor:

Re: "Guide" from the Secretary of State's Office concerning: "Office Holder Resigns — Too Late to Circulate Nomination Papers to Fill Vacancy," and in particular the fourth (4) sentence which reads as follows:

"If the effective date of the vacancy is too late to allow candidates to learn of the vacancy and circulate nomination papers (less than a week before the deadline for submitting nomination papers to registrars), that office cannot be filled at that election."

The decision not to allow the election process to take place on April 12 town election ballot is arbitrary and unfair for the following reasons:

1. Two candidates did, in fact, learn of the vacancy in time.
2. Two candidates did, in fact, circulate nomination papers in the time allowed. (Between March 7 and 10).
3. Two candidates did, in fact, get more than the required number of voter signatures.
4. Two candidates did, in fact, submit nomination papers to the registrars before the deadline (5 p.m. on March 10).

Therefore in view of these facts, the vacancy on the Cohasset Board of Health should, in fact, be filled by election on (April 12) rather than by appointment.

Furthermore, according to a representative of the Secretary of State's Office (Election Division) the so-called ruling was, in fact, only an opinion or advise to the town officials and not a legally binding decision.

In addition, if, for some reason, the town officials or townspeople were dissatisfied with the candidates, there was sufficient time between March 10 or so, and April 12 election day for a write in campaign.

Also, if the two candidates knew they couldn't run for the vacant seat on the board of health one or the other or both candidates might have run for the seat that is going to be unopposed on the ballot.

Grollman To Lecture In Cohasset

Death. Dying. Many of us find ourselves inadequately prepared when we must deal with these within our own or parents' lives or, sad to say, are uncertain of an emotionally healthful approach when we discuss the subject with our children.

Explaining Death to Children and to Ourselves is the topic of the talk Earl A. Grollman will present on Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. on March 23 in Cohasset at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street.

The public is invited to attend by the First Parish in Cohasset, sponsors of the program.

The lecture is free, and with the discussion period following should last about one and one-half hours. Rabbi Grollman's honest and sensitive approach will interest people of all ages and religious backgrounds.

Dr. Grollman is internationally known for his work concerning the aged, divorce, death and dying. He has authored a dozen books, including the UNESCO award winning Talking About Death, and has appeared on numerous television and radio shows. Boston Magazine recently hailed him as one of the 79 brightest and exciting people of New England.

He is known as a pioneer in family crisis intervention and thanatology. For more than 24 years, Grollman has been Rabbi at Beth El Temple Center, Belmont, Massachusetts and has two doctoral of divinity degrees. Currently he also serves on a number of professional and governmental advisory boards.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported last week that school committee members Walsh and Gjesteby opposed, for a second time, the additions of $141,700 to the budget at the March 10 meeting.

The increased energy costs for fiscal 1980-81 of $123,500 were approved by a vote of 3-2, with Walsh and Gjesteby voting no, for the second time. The other additions to the budget made at the March 10 meeting, amounting to $18,200, were approved by Walsh and Gjesteby.

Looking Back

Next time you are driving along South Main St. towards North Scituate take a glance at the sign opposite J.J. Henry's, marking the old colonial border between the Massaachusetts Bay and the Plymouth Colonies, now the town line separating Cohasset and Scituate.

Some historians claim establishment of that boundary back in the mid-1600s was the genesis of America's struggle for Independence which culminated in the Revolution nearly a century and a half later.

At the time the boundary was set up it is highly improbable that the colonists had the faintest notion as to the consequences of their highly irregular action.

Under the royal patents granted by the reigning King Charles is was understood that any disputes arising between the two settlements would be sent to London for resolution. However, the colonists considered this a time consuming and tedious method. They took it upon themselves to resolve the difficulty and spent considerable time in debate between 1640 and 1657 in coming to an agreement. And for the next two centuries adjusted and amended the agreement from time to time.

The 1640 agreement was signed by Gov. William Bradford and Edward Winslow on behalf of the Plymouth Colony, and by John Endicott and Israell Stoughton of Mass. Bay.

The agreement (with its original spellings) read in part:

"We do hereby agree determine and conclude that the bounds of the limmitts betweene both the said jurisdicions are as followeth vizt From the mouth of the brooke that runneth into Conahassett Marshes (which we call by the name of Bound brooke) with a straight and direct line to the middle of a great pond that lyeth on the right hand of the upper payth or common way that leadeth betweene Weimouth and Plymouthclose to the payth as we go along which was formerly named (and still we desire may be called) Accord Pond lying about five or six miles from Weimouth southerly . . . "

Shortly after Plymouth was settled the Pilgrims began exploring north along the coast. One of their discoveries was the salt marshes which gave the town of Marshfield its name. Further trips took them to Scituate Harbor and beyond where other marshes provided vast quantities of salt hay.

Meanwhile, the Puritans were moving south from Boston. Those who settled in Hingham were soon harvesting the salt marshes along the town's coast.

It was inevitable that sooner or later the settlers should meet and argue as to who had the rights in that gray area between the two colonies.

The vital need for salt hay has long since disappeared, but the boundary remains — more or less — the same as it was established by the colonists. Today it is the boundary between Norfolk and Plymouth counties.

pay after the May 8 incident (tried in the courts last week).

Feola was arrested for speeding down Nantasket Avenue in Hull after 1 a.m. Feola claimed he was attempting to come to the aid of a friend, in a first vehicle. Although the friend testified to being drunk at a pre-trail hearing, the friend (who was also stopped by Hull police) was let go and Feola was booked. The knife was discovered at the booking.

police on July 21 following an accident near the police station. At that time he was charged with drunken driving and driving dangerously. Cohasset selectmen suspended him without pay for five days. On July 31 selectmen suspended him indefinitely without pay until criminal matters were cleared up.

In November of 1979 Judge Collari continued for one year without a finding charges made July 21 against Feola for driving to endanger and driving under the influence of alcohol. On July 21 Feola was involved in a one-car accident on Atlantic Avenue. He was ordered to make restitution for the utility pole he had crashed into. Judge Collari also ordered him to undergo a court-supervised alcoholic rehabilitation program.

In Oct. 1978 Feola was suspended by his father for five days for using faulty judgment involving a car chase by Scituate police.

therefore would not talk to the weekly press. He did not say how he was misquoted.

When asked if he thought Judge Collari's sentencing prohibited Feola from carrying a firearm, Rogers said he didn't know.

Feola's attorney Thomas Hensley said he too was unsure as to what the sentencing of Feola meant regarding his ability to carry a firearm.

"The whole trial might be described as silly. Feola happened to have a hunting knife (on his person) because he had just returned from eight days of camping and hunting.

"I feel he should be reinstated on the force. It was an almost negligible case."

Hensley added he felt the jury's findings and the judge's sentencing backed up his feelings on the matter.

Late Tuesday Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said selectmen and Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, who was out of town at that time, would have to study a copy of the court transcript before coming to any decision regarding Feola's future with the Cohasset Police Department.

☐Marilyn Pope is the children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, but her job encompasses story telling, films presentation and advice in materials purchasing in the elementary schools as well. Mrs. Pope spends about three hours a week in the Osgood School and also visits Deer Hill and Dr. Packard's seventh grade class in the junior high from time to time.

She is enthusiastic and very giving when it comes to her work at the library and in the schools, but she says it's a reciprocal arrangement. "My meeting children in the schools brings them into the library and interests them in literature." Either way you look at it, she cares about the kids.

While the Deer Hill and junior and senior high schools have libraries and full-time librarians, the Osgood doesn't. They have a rotating book cart system, very capably looked after by METCO Aide, Lorene Miller, but it's still a different species from a library.

Next year space will open up at Osgood for a separate library and Mrs. Pope feels "this will be nicer for storytelling and will make it easier for the kids with books centralized."

The teachers value the time she spends with their classes, and Mrs. Pope says, correspondingly, "the teachers have been very supportive of the (Paul Pratt) Librry; they bring classes here for instructional use. Our arrangement wouldn't be possible without their cooperation and the students benefit from this."

☐Andrea Maria Fox, who is a senior at Carroll College in Waukesha, Wisconsin, has been named to the Dean's List for the first semester, which makes hers a perfect record since she's made Dean's List every semester! She is the daughter (and sixth of ten) of Mr. and Mrs. William Fox of Old Coach Road. "Andy" graduated from Cohasset High School and received a track scholarship to Carroll, which is a small and highly regarded academic college. She currently holds a state record in track; the half-mile and mile are her specialities. She plans to enter the education/physical education field upon graduation.

☐Alexandra and Diane Mullen will present a piano concert at the South Shore Conservatory of Music on Saturday, March 22 at 3 p.m. They have both been students at the Conservatory of Jerri Witt for three years and before that, studied with their mother, Mrs. Olive Mullen, who is in her 21st year of teaching.

Alexandra, who is 18 and in her senior year at Cohasset High school, began studying piano at the age of seven. She also plays the violin and flute. Although serious about her music, Alexandra will focus study in college on philosophy. She has been accepted at St. John's in Annapolis, Maryland, which steers its students through a very strident course of study, similar to the great books program. Music will still be an area of study for her and will always be an important part of her life.

Alexandra was the runner-up in the recent Hingham Civic Orchestra Piano Concerto Competition. Both girls have played in several masters classes at the Conservatory. Masters classes are taught by professional teachers outside the area and only the best students are chosen to participate.

Diane is 13 and an eighth grader who's been at the paino for six years.

PRATT'S POPE tells a good story according to Osgood School first graders. (Greg Derr photo)

The girls' parents are Olive and James Mullen and they have two sisters, Elaine, 15, and Celia, 8.

The March 22 concert, which by the way is FREE, will consist of solos and several four-hand compositions from Pozzoli, Kabelevsky, Bach, Shuman and Ravel.

☐Phil Murray, who is credited with master-minding and organizing the Ronald Reagan rally held here in Cohasset just before the primary election, is feeling good about the effort. "We had Reagan in Cohasset and gave him such a good send off, he's won every primary since."

(Around Town does not endorse political candidates!)

☐Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jackson of 9 Woodland Drive have just returned to Cohasset after a vacation sailing in the American and British Virgin Islands. John, Robbie and Jennifer went also. However, the children had no idea they were going — it was one of the best kept secrets in town. In fact, they didn't know they were going until they were on their way to the airport! TV ads do come true.

☐Adding to his long list of service to the Town of Cohasset, Allen deVito has agreed to join the Board of Directors of the Community Center of Cohasset. A five year resident of Cohasset, Allen is a president emeritus of the Cohasset Jaycees. During his term of office he initiated the CPR program and continues to instruct in the program for the Jaycees. Another of his Jaycees pre-occupations is the Haunted House held annually as a town feature. He is the husband of Bonnie deVito, legal secretary for Charles Humphreys, and has two little girls.

☐Winthrop A. Short, President of Knapp King-Size Corp., headquartered in Brockton, has been elected to the Board of Directors of Shawmut Bank of Boston, N.A.

Short, who had previously served as a director of Shawmut First County Bank, N.A., is also a director of American Footwear Industries Association, Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, Ludlow Corporation and Markem Corporation.

He is a trustee of Brockton Hospital, Hurricane Island Outward Bound School, New England Colleges Fund and Princeton University.

A graduate of Princeton University, he received his LL.B from Yale Law School and LL.M from New York University. He is a member of the Massachusetts Bar and New York Bar.

☐In another musical note, two students successfully auditioned for the All-State Music Convention to be held in Leominster March 19-22. James Yeomans was named to the bass section of the All-State Chorus; Christopher Williams was named first alto saxophonist in the All-State Jazz Ensemble.

☐Navy Lt. j.g. Theodore O. Macklin Jr., son of Theodore O. and Marie C. Macklin of 86 Atlantic Ave., has completed the Navy's Basic Underwater Demolition Team Course.

☐Debbie and Bob Martin of South Main Street, are very happy and excited about the arrival of a new nephew to their family.

Two weeks ago Debbie's sister, Maureen and husband Joseph Buckley of Falmouth, Maine, met their new son, Michael Anthony, who, after several fits and starts, finally arrived from Korea. He is "an absolutely gorgeous, happy and very loving three-year-old," his new aunt reports, and is being showered with attention and affection from his new family which also includes Kaitlin, 8, and Josh, 6.

Josh Stevenson got hit in the mouth with a hockey puck and can only eat birthday cake . . . thought his parents might like to know!

☐Chet Ellis (383-0767) will be looking around town and after AROUND TOWN during the next two weeks. Give him a call with your "people" news.

'Cagebirds' Chosen As Alternate Play

(ED.'S NOTE: When the judges announced their final decision at the semi-final Drama Festival held at Cohasset High School on Saturday, they named the Falmouth and Sandwich Drama Clubs winners who will present their plays in the state competition. Cagebirds was chosen as the alternate play in case one of the other groups could not perform.)

By Yoanna Zotos

Is it possible anymore to enter into a competition and still be friends with the other contestants? If you had been present at the semi-final Drama Festival held at Cohasset High School this past weekend, you could answer this question with "Yes!"

Six high schools participated in the program, some travelling as far as 60 miles in order to arrive in Cohasset by 8 a.m. Saturday morning! Despite the early hour, visiting schools were warmly greeted by the Cohasset hosts.

The competition began at 10 a.m. with The Cagebirds produced by Cohasset High School. When asked to comment on the play, Director Ron Emmons remarked, "It's an allegory dealing with behavior patterns that make prisons for us in the world, and that make it possible for us to be manipulated through the reinforcement of those behavior patterns."

The cast consisted of eight girls each with a unique background in drama. Meri Fink, a long-time member of the Drama Workshop, has performed in every single production that the club has put on since her freshman year. For these 12 plays, Meri has earned two all-star cast semi-final awards, two all-state cast awards, and one all-New England cast award.

Lisa O'Toole and Disa Pratt, also veterans of the Drama Workshop, have appeared in six of the productions the workshop has done in the last three years. Both were members of the "Story Theatre" ensemble that was elected to the all-star cast at the semi-final and state levels last year.

Gina Froio, Ellen Hanlon, and Alexandra Mullen appeared for the first time in this year's senior class play The Boyfriend and decided to finish the year with the Drama Workshop. The only juniors in the cast, Susanna Mastrobuono and Gail Smart, made their debuts with Cagebirds, and they have done a wonderful job.

To add to their list of achievements, Meri Fink, Disa Pratt, and Alexandra Mullen were selected for the all-star cast by the judges at Notre Dame Academy during the regional competition. In addition, Lisa O'Toole and Alexandra Mullen were named to the all-star cast at the semi-final competition in Cohasset. Congratulations to all of you, girls!

And what is a play without a backstage crew? Nothing. But thanks to the efforts of Susan Buckley and Leslie Collins, stage managers for Cagebirds, the play really pulled together. And because of Mike Thornton, director of set construction, a new dimension was added to the performance. Special thanks goes to the seven stage crew members who erected the set in a record-breaking time of three minutes!

The next entry in the competition was Mannequin Demise performed by West Bridgewater High School and directed by Judy Stone.

Third on stage was the Sandwich High School Drama Club with its presentation of Adaptation. The only play of its kind in the festival, this comedy portrayed the life of a man through a game show.

After a brief intermission for lunch, the audience gathered in the auditorium to see Then executed by Old Rochester Regional High School.

Falmouth High School, Cohasset's prime competition, was the fifth participant in the festival with its presentation of Interview. The play itself commented on the social situation of this country in the post-Kennedy sixties.

The judges were so impressed by this performance that they selected the entire ensemble of Interview for the all-star cast.

And finally the last entry in the semi-final festival, A Sleep of Prisoners, was produced by Silver Lake Regional High School. This play dealt with four prisoners of war who acted out stories of the Bible in their dreams. Two of those prisoners, Mike Riccardi and Richard LeMoine, were named to the all-star cast for their outstanding performances.

Dull (the Season of)

T. Kasperowicz

How do you tell
When you're in Dull?
The sun won't shine . . .
The leaves won't fall.

Nothing's blooming
There are no bugs . . .
Children leave
Footprints of mud.

The windows are dirty
But who really cares?
There's nothing at all
To see out there.

People look strained
And white. They tire.
And it's too warm
To make a fire.

So you sit and wait
For Dull to pass . . .
For butterflies
And green of grass.

And when it's over
It's gone kapoot
And you're too fat
For your bathing soot

Ballet In Bloom

STARTING YOUNG — Instructor Fern Gladstone gives Kristina Stevens a helping hand in ballet class at Community Center. And does the same for Robin DeVito as other pupils watch. And yet another time for Aaron Katersky.

FLEXIBLE FLYER — Anna Sandell arches like a bridge under Teacher Gladstone's close scrutiny. Right, Jennifer Mazza limbers up and watches the leader at the same time.

GROUP DANCE may lack uniformity but definitely not interest. Nicole Greco gets in some more stretching exercise. And Dean Volungis contemplates what it's all about as he sucks contemplatively, not on his thumb but all his fingers.

By the time you read today's column, I, hopefully, will either be sunning under a palm tree, or huddling next to a space heater, depending on the vagaries of the Florida weather. For now, there's the fun of getting ready for a trip and the crush of things to do. First, a thank you to Ginny Ansbergs for her pleasing letter. She even complimented us on the masthead which adorns our column — a first, I must admit. Ginny writes she is always on the look-out for natural food recipes, those using honey instead of sugar and whole grain flours.

If you have any favorites, please sent them to us at the MARINER and we'll print them for Ginny and others who are careful to improve the quality of their cooking with natural foods. Here is Ginny's Corn Bread recipe and she writes: "This is great served with beans, bean soup, pea or lentil soups. Add a salad or other vegetable and you have a nutritious, hearty, delicious, inexpensive meal."

CORN BREAD

1 c. ground corn meal
1/3 c. soy flour
1/4 c. whole wheat flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1 T nutritional yeast
1 egg
1/2-1 c. milk
3 to 4 T honey
4 T butter

Add liquids to dry mixture and beat until smooth. A very thick and heavy batter. Pour into a well-oiled, glass bread pan and bake at 375 degrees for approximately 40 minutes.

Ginny's letter sent me searching through my cluttered files (I really must do something about them when I get back). Usually when I'm looking for one thing, I find another, but, day of days, here's a recipe from Margie Winn I tucked away for a time such as this. Granola is a delicious way to start the day with milk, yogurt, nuts and dried or fresh fruit. This makes about 12 cups and 1 cup is about 21 to 25 per cent of one's daily protein allowance.

CRUNCHY GRANOLA

1/2 c. vegetable oil
1/2-1 c. honey
1 T vanilla
4 T powdered milk
2 T brewer's yeast
1 c. wheat germ
1¾ c. sesame seeds
1/2-2 C. coconut shreds
1 c. rolled wheat
7 c. rolled oats

In a large pot heat together oil, honey and vanilla until the mixture is very thin. Stir in remaining ingredients in order given, coating each one lightly with honey mixture. Spread thin layers of cereal on baking sheets and toast in a 225 degree oven for approximately 1½ hours.

Shoppers who really care about their family's diet are often seen scrutinizing the labels to find out if the product is unadultered and unprocessed, usually checking on the chemical additives. I read somewhere the three "no-nos" are white flour, white sugar and white bread. The next time you're thinking about New England's traditional Saturday night meal of frankfurts and beans, read the label on the beans. You might just change your menu, for almost always EDTA has been added. This is a chemical which preserves the color in the beans and is linked with kidney disorders. This recipe from Nikki Goldbeck is far more nutritious.

BEAN LOAF

2 c. ground cooked beans [obtained by cooking 1 c. dried beans which makes 3 c. cooked beans, or 2 c. when ground].
1/4 c. fresh bread crumbs, wheat germ, or a combination of the two
1 egg
2 T tomato juice
2 T catsup
1/4 c. chopped onion
1½ tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. dried herbs
1 T oil

Combine ingredients except the oil, pack into an oiled loaf pan or mold onto a greased baking sheet. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 45 minutes. Baste occasionally with the oil.

Mariner Sports

CHS girls' tennis team returning for spring 1980.

Winter Sports? Don't Ask!

There's an old saying which goes something like, "If you don't like the weather in New England, stay for five minutes."

There's another one that goes, "There's a sucker born every minute — you just happened to be comin' along at the right time, friend."

Put these two adages together, and one has the epitome of the sports situation this winter in Merrie Olde New England.

Because if you came this far from anywhere to indulge in such trivialities as snowshoeing, tobogganing or skiing, then, brother, let me sell you a bridge.

Sportlight
By EDDIE FINOCCHIARO

And if you came here from some place like Duluth, Minn., because you heard it was mild and you could run, play tennis and ride horses all winter, then brother, let me sell you the Southeast Expressway. It's cheap.

And as all the Finocchiaro Brothers (the Flyin' Finns, as they are affectionately known in some parts) traipsed to Logan International Airport for the sending-off of brother Vinny to sunny Florida for a week (vacations are so tacky in orangeland), one had to wonder why he would favor Florida for a vacation to lovely New England.

I mean, who in the world would give up sloshing through the mud to shag a kite that took a dive when the wind died down? And who can describe the joy of walking down the street in sunny, 55 degree weather, only to be confronted with one of those sneak attack blizzards.

Now, nobody in his right mind would give that up for windsurfing, sunning, juggling oranges on the beach, the jai-alai fronton, the dog tracks, the Pina Coladas, Hialeah, golf, Disney World and Busch Gardens.

On second thought, one would have to be crazy to stay here. Even though it's tacky in Florida, at least

Skipper Netters Get Ready

By Bob Tis

The girls' tennis team, posting an 11-3 record last year, best of any CHS team, proves to be even stronger this year.

Returning, all with singles experience, will be Lauren O'Connor, Janet England and Kerry Salvador. The first doubles team of Sue Dalrymple and Karen Murphy, who are still sophomores yet have experience, are expected to net key victories this year. Sandy Dalrymple, Leslie Carroll, Mia Graham, Katie Smalcell, Joy Pratt and Chrissy Ralph will all be jockeying for the third singles and second doubles position.

Aided by co-captains O'Connor and Sandy Dalrymple, George Fortin will be back to assume his reins as coach of this fine team in its embryonic stage.

Losing Liz Whelan and Susan Pottenger was a blow to the squad but is by no means insurmountable, and the team seems to be stronger than ever, even without uniforms.

AND THE BOYS?

With the recent climatic turbulence, the action has gone from the court to running in the streets or pumping iron in the gym.

Traditionally, the Skippers have had winning tennis teams, and in past years have continually romped Hull, Abington and Norwell.

The tennis team is coached by Mr. John (N.Y. Marathon) Mika, who stresses conditioning and fundamentals.

The boys' team only suffered one player loss, losing Bob Baird. Co-captains and brothers Ron and Gerry White will provide the 1-2 punch for the Skippers this season and will, in all probability, be first and second singles.

The backbone of last year's team, the doubles teams, will both be returning. This includes the high-spirited JoJo Whelan and Shannon Collins (although Collins is brutally out of shape), and the second doubles team of Peter (Iceman) Drago and his anonymous cohort, who have once again declined to play on the US Davis Cup team to net for the Skippers.

BASEBALL

To put it mildly, coaches Dennis Kuntz and David Infusino are having some splitting headaches.

These guys have 60 players to try out, and will cut the number to 31 by Friday. Too bad the government can't cut inflation in half like that.

Nobody Knows?

Come on, now.

Do the people of Cohasset mean to tell us that nobody knows who was on deck when Bobby Thompson hit his famous home run?

Quit joshing us. You knew all the time it was Willie Mays.

Again, no phone calls, and the first correct answer with the earliest postmark received at the Mariner, 541 Plain St., Marshfield 02050, wins a Mariner T-shirt.

This week's quiz consists of three questions:

1. How many guys does it take to field a rugby team?

2. In 1967, the Red Sox had two outstanding rookies, Mike Andrews and Reggie Smith. The scuttlebut around locker rooms and press boxes in the AL was that both of these guys were strong contenders for rookie of the year. Neither got it. Who did?

3. Who played for the Pats, Celts, Red Sox and Bruins all in one year? (Watch it — use your bean. This one's tricky.)

Let's hope they're still smiling after the '80 tennis tournaments

Sportlight

it's consistently tacky.

Because whatever you like to do with regards to outdoor sports, you got boofed this winter if you waited five minutes.

For instance, when the local weather mavens called for snow last week, about 8-10 inches worth, everybody and his brother pulled the barrel slats out of the attic and waxed them up. And what of the weather?

We got the snow, alright, but we also got the rain, tons of it, turning all the snow to brown slush, nothing but a hindrance and preponderance indistinguishable from dog doo.

So what's out weather suited for?

Snowshoeing? Nah, only if one wishes to look like a total fool.

Skiing? Nah, unless they come out with skis made for grass and rocks.

Tobogganing? Nah, unless you have a dirt bike or golf cart to tow you.

Running? Nah, unless you get running shoes with mud guards and glasses with windshield wipers.

In short, it was tough to really do much of anything as far as winter sports is concerned this year in New England. Pity the poor guy who went out and bought a new pair of skis and boots, anticipating the winter blizzard of '78's reoccurrence. And the guy who spent $500 on an imported ten-speed bike, only to be frozen solid in a sudden cold snap.

But the folks I really feel sorry for are the poor folks who bought season passes for ski areas in the hinterlands, some of which never got the chance to open. There's a paradox here — the area's one mainline for survival is the seasons pass, yet when one pays all those clams for a pass, he expects to get to ski.

I'm glad I'm not involved in that schmeil (actually, I feel sorry for both sides, but what on earth's good does that do?).

And due to the fact that we get cold snaps, warm snaps and inbetween snaps with virtually no notice at all, the best New England outdoor sports this weekend took place indoors — on telly.

And the only guys who came out ahead on the deal this winter were the breweries and ABC. Neither were at the mercy of the environment.

Which reminds me of another adage, the last and final postulate of Murphy's law.

Mother Nature is a pain.

Backup Goalie Shines In Nets

If Phillip Mahoney was a fish out of water this weekend, he didn't let anyone know about it.

The Seahawk Squirt A defenseman was pressed into the nets for the South Shore Conference game against Canton, and in his debut, recorded a shutout in the 4-0 blanking of the green. Supporting services also helped, of course, with Paul Ames, Brian McGovern, Tommy Bopp and Jeff Hartwell providing the goals.

And again, the Seahawks Pee Wee A's escaped the weekend with their undefeated status intact, as they pummeled Randolph, 8-1, and clinched first place in the conference.

Home Towns Havens From The Heavy News

By Lois Martin

What a relief it is to live in snug isolation of hometowns. If we had to face the big news on a first-hand, first-name basis everyday, we'd be nonplussed.

Usually in our community, we're allowed some protection from heavy news, merely called upon to address town meeting news, Cub Scout bake sales and problems with road salt or seaweed.

Now and again, though, it's incumbent upon us to pay attention to some of the more important happenings. True we can't digest all events, but we can nibble on a few.

PATCHES

— The Cincinnati Reds have been warming up in Florida's spring training session by taking part in aerobic dancing. The military drill decor has been displaced by snappy music and a size 7 dance instructor. First time I've seen so many graceful ballplayers with pleasant smiles on their faces.

— Politicians are mind-boggling, aren't they? Gerald Ford went to Washington, D.C. last week, spoke disparagingly at great length about President Carter and then visited him for lunch the next day. I guess they don't take one another's critiques too seriously.

— And I wonder, if we'd known John Anderson's wife was named "KeKe," or "KiKi," (I've seen it both ways) would he have run stronger or weaker in Massachusetts.

— The magnificent Hildegarde was featured in a recent Boston Globe story. She said she keeps trim by discipline. She allows herself one chocolate a day if she believes she's earned it. I'm a lot like Hildegarde, except that I'm more inclined to eat the 365 days worth at one sitting.

— Airline officials are baffled by an affliction called "the red sweat" plaguing flight attendants on the New York to Florida run. I would be happy to take that flight as a test person in a (size 42½ irregular) attendant's suit to expedite research.

— Since the movie "10" surfaced, men have developed the hobby of rating women from one to 10 everywhere from supermarket lines to School Committee meetings. Women rate men who play the rating game in their presence a minus two and a half.

— The Supreme Court last week declared it was unconstitutional, illegal to ask children to pray in schools. Now they should consider if it's legal to ask them not to pray there.

— A woman in Midland, Michigan got $160 worth of groceries free by way of coupons, rebate, freebie and money off. In fact the store owed her more than $2 when she finished. I hear people there were amazed, went to her house to inquire about the success story and stayed for supper.

— The Boy Scouts are getting new uniforms after all these years. But the Memorial Day parades won't be the same if they've covered up the knees of the Scoutmasters. We women have always given them a high rating.

— Marilyn French has a sweet, innocent face but she's got some wild ideas. She's an author, who doesn't live on the South Shore, and she propounds the notion of a feminist planet. That's too much for me. I'm still operating on the separate but equal areas of dominance partnership. He knows what a lug wrench is and I never fail to recognize a saucepan.

— Unfortunately, the founder of the Scarsdale Diet was murdered last week. With all due respect, women who'd been on that diet felt as if they were under suspicion.

— A 28 year old expert on fashions worn by women in business has blurted out an unsettling statistic from her research. She says women journalists are the worst dressed of the pack. Apparently ink isn't flattering.

With that comeuppance, I take leave to get my flannel shirt drycleaned.

Students Critical Of Hull-Cohasset Suspension

By Eddie Finocchiaro

Now that the smoke has cleared, only one question remains. Students want to know why?

Why is athletic competition between Hull and Cohasset suspended?

"I've already sent a letter to the school committee," said sophomore Jack McNeill, who plays hockey, football and golf for the Skippers. "I told them that I feel they're just sweeping the problem under the rug."

The decision McNeill refers to is the decision to stop athletic competition with Hull for a period of two and one-half years as a result of the bus stoning incident this past basketball season.

"The decision was made too quickly," said McNeill, "Why didn't they have student athletes debate the question? There should be some say given to the students."

And what should be done? McNeill has a simple answer.

"Just severely punish them," he said. "Hull's reputation is bad, so of course, everyone blames them, but the actions of a few shouldn't dictate punishment of the many."

Jodi Sandblom also laments the decision.

Wiseberg Variance Taken Under Advisement

Abutters to the Howard Wiseberg property at 460 Jerusalem Road, which was completely demolished in a 1978 fire, were well-represented and vocal at a public hearing held Monday regarding a request for a variance to build a new sewage disposal system.

After an hour and a half hearing, the board of health said in view of the information it had obtained from residents regarding septage problems in the abutting area of the Wiseberg property, it would take the matter under advisement and make a field inspection of the area.

Architects Hidell & Eyster Associates of South Weymouth represented the Wisebergs at the hearing with regard to plans for a new four-bedroom single-family residence to replace the 12-room mansion with attached apartment.

Brian McSweeney of Hingham designed plans for a new disposal system on the site. McSweeney's plans call for a 30 by 40-ft. bed built on new, sandy fill. McSweeney said he found clay in six of the perk holes at the property. "I got down 4-5 ft., maybe more." However, Title V regulations mandate that water must be moved in 30 minutes in permeable soil. The soil is not permeable by definition.

Because the house was totally destroyed, the law requires the old system be brought up to the intent of Title V.

If the Wiseberg home had been burned 45 per cent or less, it could be rebuilt on the same system. The recent, unwritten policy of the board of health is to require any homeowner whose septage system receives more than three complaints a year to update their septage systems.

Several abutters questioned why Wiseberg's should be allowed to rebuild at all, asking what a "manifest hardship" meant to individual health board members.

Acting Chairman Marily Sweeney said she felt a manifest hardship would hypotheticaly be the loss of a home already existing, whether that home was used as commercial or residential property.

Six Police Intermittents Voted

Civil Service, selectmen, and the district attorney's office have been receiving some inquiries as a result of selectmen's appointment of six permanent intermittent police officers last week.

March 19 selectmen appointed six men from a Civil Service listing of 11 candidates — bypassing Francis Chafe (second on the list, a Weymouth resident), Paul Bilodeau and Thomas White (in sixth and seventh place) for what selectmen said was a lack of experience.

The following men were appointed: David Cogill, Daniel Ainslie, Edward Connor, John Small, Richard Yocum and Lawrence Ainslie. They ranked first, third, fourth, fifth, eighth and ninth on the list.

Earlier in the evening, selectmen briefly interviewed Robert Protelulis (10th on the Civil Service list) for the job, saying he had scored 73 in the Civil Service test. Selectmen noted the score was a low one.

Lawrence Ainslie, Selectman Henry Ainslie's nephew, who scored 75.5 on the Civil Service test was interviewed extensively on his auxillary police work experience.

When the Mariner reporter suggested that Selectman Henry Ainslie should leave the room as he might be in conflict of interest of interviewing his own nephew for a job on the police force, Selectman Ainslie said "I have no intention of leaving." Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark and Selectman Rocco Laugelle agreed Ainslie should be present during the interviews.

Later in the evening, after the entire selectmen's agenda had been completed, Selectman Ainslie

Cohasset Expects 1000 Runners Sunday

Cohasset Jaycee Race Director, Roy Fitzsimmons, said this week Jaycees expect over 1,000 runners to participate in Sunday's 6.2 mile Road-Race-By-The-Sea.

In its fourth year, the Cohasset road-race has become a tradition among South Shore runners and others who come from all the New England States.

The 10,000 meter race which is AAU sanctioned was completed in 30 minutes and two seconds by

Stay It Isn't So Central Market

It's not true Joan and Louie Bravo have sold Central Market and are running away to Monte Carlo to open a fruit market, a gift shop, a dress shop, a hat shop. Although Joan thinks it would be fun to own a little shoe shop, she would never leave behind the man who sends her flowers.

Leaning over the fruit counter early Tuesday morning, Louie said, sorely distressed: "I'm so tired — 9,000 people have called our house asking about our having sold the store. Joan got a letter from her sister in Florida who heard we sold the store. Several people have offered both Joan and I jobs!"

While a certain investment group has shown some interest in Central Market in recent months — Louie said he and Joan are interested in staying on Cohasset's Wall Street for a long time to come.

HOWEVER

It is true the Bravo's plan to somehow utilize that funny space between Curtis Compact and Central Market. They will launch the news of their proposed future venture in the Mariner, when the time is ripe.

"Maybe it won't be in two or three weeks, but it will be soon," Louie said.

We don't know what it's all about . . . but we've got the name for it: Funny Space.

Because the house was totally destroyed, the law requires the old system be brought up to the intent of Title V.

If the Wiseberg home had been burned 45 per cent or less, it could be rebuilt on the same system. The recent, unwritten policy of the board of health is to require any homeowner whose septage system receives more than three complaints a year to update their septage systems.

Several abutters questioned why Wiseberg's should be allowed to rebuild at all, asking what a "manifest hardship" meant to individual health board members.

Acting Chairman Marily Sweeney said she felt a manifest hardship would hypotheticaly be the loss of a home already existing, whether that home was used as commercial or residential property.

Six Police Intermittents Voted

Civil Service, selectmen, and the district attorney's office have been receiving some inquiries as a result of selectmen's appointment of six permanent intermittent police officers last week.

March 19 selectmen appointed six men from a Civil Service listing of 11 candidates — bypassing Francis Chafe (second on the list, a Weymouth resident), Paul Bilodeau and Thomas White (in sixth and seventh place) for what selectmen said was a lack of experience.

The following men were appointed: David Cogill, Daniel Ainslie, Edward Connor, John Small, Richard Yocum and Lawrence Ainslie. They ranked first, third, fourth, fifth, eighth and ninth on the list.

Earlier in the evening, selectmen briefly interviewed Robert Protelulis (10th on the Civil Service list) for the job, saying he had scored 73 in the Civil Service test. Selectmen noted the score was a low one.

Lawrence Ainslie, Selectman Henry Ainslie's nephew, who scored 75.5 on the Civil Service test was interviewed extensively on his auxillary police work experience.

When the Mariner reporter suggested that Selectman Henry Ainslie should leave the room as he might be in conflict of interest of interviewing his own nephew for a job on the police force, Selectman Ainslie said "I have no intention of leaving." Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark and Selectman Rocco Laugelle agreed Ainslie should be present during the interviews.

Later in the evening, after the entire selectmen's agenda had been completed, Selectman Ainslie

Cohasset Expects 1000 Runners Sunday

Cohasset Jaycee Race Director, Roy Fitzsimmons, said this week Jaycees expect over 1,000 runners to participate in Sunday's 6.2 mile Road-Race-By-The-Sea.

In its fourth year, the Cohasset road-race has become a tradition among South Shore runners and others who come from all the New England States.

Stay It Isn't So Central Market

It's not true Joan and Louie Bravo have sold Central Market and are running away to Monte Carlo to open a fruit market, a gift shop, a dress shop, a hat shop. Although Joan thinks it would be fun to own a little shoe shop, she would never leave behind the man who sends her flowers.

Leaning over the fruit counter early Tuesday morning, Louie said, sorely distressed: "I'm so tired — 9,000 people have called our house asking about our having sold the store. Joan got a letter from her sister in Florida who heard we sold the store. Several people have offered both Joan and I jobs!"

While a certain investment group has shown some interest in Central Market in recent months — Louie said he and Joan are interested in staying on Cohasset's Wall Street for a long time to come.

HOWEVER

It is true the Bravo's plan to somehow utilize that funny space between Curtis Compact and Central Market. They will launch the news of their proposed future venture in the Mariner, when the time is ripe.

"Maybe it won't be in two or three weeks, but it will be soon," Louie said.

We don't know what it's all about . . . but we've got the name for it: Funny Space.

Cohasset's Week

Health Board

Selectmen were scheduled to interview the following individuals for a one-year term on the board of health at their meeting Tuesday:

Dr. Michael Bliss, Pamela Johansen, Atty. John Ridge and Dr. John Burns.

At a meeting of selectmen last week, Paula Knowles and Lester Hiltz told the board they would not seek appointment to the position recently resigned by Dr. Roger Pompeo. However, both individuals did take out nomination papers to run for the position, until an inquiry to the Secretary of State's office brought forth the information the resigned office should be appointed and not elected and the vacated position was not publicized for a long enough period of time.

Back In Business

As of Feb. 20, James Tyeryar, owner of Cohasset Heights, a demolition dump, was back in business after having been closed down by the state since before Christmas 1979.

According to Tyeryar, the state decided the body of water under contention was perched water and not wetlands. However, Tyeryar is still being asked to correct a drainage problem in the area which he feels the state created.

No, he's not sure how much money he lost during the mandated closed shop.

Warning!

Town officials take note! Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. informed health board members Marilyn Sweeney and Lynne Buckley it was his opinion they should disqualify themselves relative to any hearing entertained in the future regarding horses (or a pony) on the property of Mary Fairman.

The problem arose when the two women made a field inspection of the Fairman property and then publically announced their finding before an official public hearing had been scheduled.

According to Mrs. Sweeney, she and Mrs. Buckley will disqualify themselves on Thaxter's advice. However, both members of the committee are asking Thaxter if one member of the board (yet to be appointed) can legally constitute the board's vote.

Against Fire Art.

The advisory committee voted last week to recommend annual town meeting vote against a $450,000 proposal for a sub fire station on 3A to replace stations on Beechwood Street and North Cohasset.

The project was advertised for bids last week and bids will be opened April 4.

Also voted to not recommend was a transfer of 1.5 acres of school land south of Cohasset Motors for the station. Recommended unaminously was $22,000 for painting, repair, installation of storm windows and vinyl siding for the two satellite stations.

Grand Juror

James Clinton of Parker Avenue was selected to serve as a juror on a special grand jury to be held in April. Clinton is an engineer.

Hearing Continued

A continuation of the hearing on the proposed Pleasant Street Condominiums has been scheduled for Wednesday, April 16 at 43 Elm Street.

At a recent hearing, drainage in the area of the eight two and one half story condominiums planned between Pleasant Street and Smith Place, drainage in the area was a primary concern of abutters.

Applicant for the project is Kenneth Gallagher. Gallagher was represented at the hearing by Wayne Sawchuk.

Strawberry Parfait

Renovations are underway at the Strawberry Parfait Ice Cream Shoppe, owned by Carmine Carlucci, chef at the Greenhouse Restaurant. On the menu for spring are fried foods. The board of health gave its blessing for the renovations and new menu at its Monday meeting.

Basically, the tables in the back will be replaced by a giant kitchen, and a partition and restrooms will be constructed strictly for employees. The sewer commissioners have already approved the plans.

Sodium In H2O

The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has notified the town that an analysis of drinking water samples collected from Cohasset shows a level of 20 mg. The level was obtained from an average of quarterly samples collected from the Cohasset water supply during 1979.

According to DEQE, when sodium levels exceed 15 mg/1 the supply must be sampled quarterly rather than on an annual basis. If the level should exceed 20 mg/1, consumers must be notified of actual and recommended levels of sodium.

DEQE has requested the town to forward reasons for the high sodium levels and ways to correct the situation to DEQE.

Water Commissioner William Montuori said Monday a high level of sodium can be dangerous for individuals on a low-salt diet. The monitoring of sodium levels is part of the Clean Water Act.

Systems Voted

Septic systems accepted by the board of health at its Monday meeting are as follows: Lot 3 on Beechwood Street, owned by A.E. Irwin; Lot 1 on Hull Street owned by Leo Happeny. A decision regarding plot plans for Dr. Roger Pompeo on Forest Avenue will be made early next week.

School Budget Set

After a budget hearing last week the school committee unanimously approved a $3.79 million budget for fiscal 1981.

The increase over this year's budget is 7.45 per cent — and unless Governor Ed King changes the game rules, town meeting will have to override the state's four per cent tax cap with a two-thirds vote.

One Who Has Died Can Not Be A Candidate

On first thought one might think one's self lucky if one's opponent for public office should die before the election. According to the Secretary of State's Office, elections division: "It is generally held that one who has died before an election cannot be a candidate for or elected to office."

The Secretary of State continues:

"When a candidate dies before the election, and it is a widely-known fact, it has been held that the candidate receiving the next largest number of votes wins the election.

"On the other hand; when a candidate's death is not a widely-known fact, the person receiving the next largest number of votes does not win and a vacancy exists.

"The key point seems to be whether or not it is a well-known fact that the candidate is dead. It makes no difference whether the living candidate's name is printed on the ballot, or written-in."

Jacqueline Dormitzer Announces Candidacy

I'd like to announce my candidacy for election to the Cohasset School Committee. I have been a resident of Cohasset for thirteen years and am the mother of two children who are now in high school and have attended the Cohasset schools since kindergarten.

Throughout this time I have been interested in the quality of their education as well as in the quality of their everyday lives at school.

If elected to the school committee, I will stress the obligation of the school to serve the educational needs of students and to put students' interests first. I want to reaffirm the school's commitment to academic excellence and to ensure that school policies are carried out consistently and effectively.

In addition, I will try to establish a framework for evaluating the budget by setting priorities and determining what is necessary or important to the education of our children. I believe I can help the school committee strike a sensible balance between the need for quality education and the need for financial restraint in a time of declining enrollments and rising costs.

Jacqueline Dormitzer

My occupation as a writer and editor of college textbooks has given me a unique insight into the educational needs of students and the judgment necessary to make good decisions on educational matters.

I can also use my skills to improve communication between the school committee and the community by writing articles on major issues and decisions.

I graduated from Wellesley College with honors and majored in French. Recently I co-authored a college geography textbook.

Finally, I feel that school committee members and the administration should cooperate and try to reach a consensus on important issues. My experience in working effectively with others as past president of the Friends of the Cohasset Library and co-director of St. Anthony's Christian Education Program will be helpful in promoting the necessary cooperation and mutual respect.

A series of coffees will be held for me, including an informal coffee on Saturday, March 29 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. in the Cushing Room next to Rockland Trust in Cushing Plaza. Those interested in meeting and speaking with me are welcome to attend.

For further information please call me at 383-9595.

Plan For Axe-ing Civil Service Revealed

Selectmen didn't convince the advisory committee to vote a favorable recommendation on their article which will ask annual town meeting to take Civil Service out of the police deprtment. But they made some strong arguments on the article's behalf, last wee.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark told the advisory board: "We're in a very bad, very costly situation," with regard to Civil Service.

He cited overtime figures in the police department as of January of this year, saying because of a newly-inbstituted Civil Service dictimn, selectmen cannot hire any officer provisionally. Ne officers cannot be hired until the date on which a police training school commences.

Clark admitted many of the town's problems with the police department come about as a result of a combination of the police contract, Civil Service and state mandates combined. But he feels Civil Service is the real culprit of the three.

If the town should vote in favor of the selectmen's article, selectmen said they will in the future publically advertise police positions, require a detailed resume from all candidates and require individuals to have both a physical and psychological examination at their own expense.

Selectment would also include the police chief as a part of the interviewing board.

Any disciplinary action would be taken at a public hearing, with selectmen acting as a first appeals board and second appeals going to the personnel board. "It could all be handled locally," Clark said.

Without Civil Service Clark and Selectman Henry Ainslie feel the town could more quickly respond to police school schedules and selectmen would not have to rely on Civil Service getting them a list of applicants on time.

Ainslie said the Civil Service test for police officers has little to do with police work and has in recent years become more of a psychological examiniation (Police Sgt. John Rhoes confirmed Ainslie's remark in a recent phone interview).

Although selectmen agree any individual has the right to appeal dismissal from the police department to the courts, "Without Civil Service one step would be eliminated. The only thinbg appealable to the courts is a violation of civil rights," ainslie said.

McGee Elected National Delegate

Poor Show

Last week Cohasset Selectmen pounded two more nails into the coffin of their annual town meeting article requesting that Civil Service be removed from the police department.

That March 19 meeting at which the three-member board had the fairly simple, straight-forward function of appointing six intermittent police officers to the force turned into a botched-up travesty of Democracy which violated the State Open Meeting Law and the Conflict of Interest Statute and opened up all kinds of interesting legal challenges.

POINTS

1. Selectman Henry Ainslie (unchallenged incumbent for a fourth term on the board) sat on the board during the interview of his nephew.

2. The board went into an executive session to discuss "personalities" of the 11 candidates for permanent intermittent police officer appointments.

3. The board voted on the men in the closed session.

4. Selectman Ainslie voted on the hiring of his nephew and second cousin in the closed session.

If the personalities of the men needed to be discussed, those individuals whose personalities needed discussing should have been notified 48 hours in advance in writing and should have been invited to the meeting (which could then be open or closed at the individual's request).

We remind selectmen, with or without Civil Service — nepotism is not legal in government. Nor can one call for a closed-door session without cause.

Town officials cannot vote on matters which involve relations or business associates.

The conflict of interest statute does not specify the degree of relationship necessary in order for an official to be in conflict of interest. It is necessary because friends, relatives and associates have a very large claim on our impartial attention.

We think it was a poor show. We also think the town deserves better treatment.

We feel Selectman Ainslie should not have voted on any of the appointments that evening. We also see no reason why the selectmen should not have discussed and voted on those candidates in an open session.

And what was the vote? Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said he voted against the second man on the list because the individual lives in Weymouth. Did he abstain or vote for the men bypassed by the majority vote? Did Selectman Ainslie nominate his relatives for appointment? Or did he second another selectman's vote?

We would have liked to have observed the voting on all candidates. Under the State Open Meeting Law we are legally afforded that right.

Outraged At Wasting Of Wildlife

To the Editor;

I am a student at Simmons and I live in Cohasset. I am writing to the Cohasset Mariner to encourage the media to write on the present seal slaughter. I feel the people of Cohasset and the South Shore should become more aware of the situation; and thus the more people who become involved in the seal rescue, the sooner we can stop the hunt.

While many people are aware of the annual clubbing of baby harp seals in Canada, few Americans are aware that a similar seal slaughter takes place in Alaska's Pribilof Islands each year under the sponsorship of the United States Department of Commerce.

Letters

The U.S. Government in cooperation with the governments of Japan, the Soviet Union and Canada, plans, manages, sponsors and pays for the clubbing of some 26,000 young seals to keep the backs of a few wealthy people and to perpetuate the North Pacific Fur Seal Convention of 1967, which has long since served out its usefulness.

The treaty is a follow-on to a 1911 agreement originally enacted to protect the decimated fur seal herds from the open sea seal massacre carried out for the benefit of nineteenth century Russian fur merchants.

In just a few months, though, this treaty will expire. If we are not successful in heading off the governments' planned actions, the Department of Commerce will try to take the easy way out by renewing the treaty.

Twenty-five thousand seals are killed each year at a cost to the U.S. taxpayers in 1978 of more than 4.6 million dollars. When the seal skins were auctioned off, they brought $684,036, resulting in a loss to the U.S. Treasury of over $3.9 million.

That means each time a seal was clubbed, a taxpayer paid $160. It also cost the seal its life, needlessly. Right now, the decision making process on whether or not to renew the treaty is taking place within the Department of Commerce. All that is needed is for enough concerned people who are outraged at the wasting of our wildlife and tax money to speak up and ask the government officials to ensure that our rich heritage of marine resources and wildlife is protected.

The purpose of this letter is to inform you, the media, the informer of most people, of the critical situation. Please help today. We need your support.

People can write to President Carter and tell him you don't want the North Pacific fur seal convention extended or renegotiated.

Tell him that the slaughter undermines the U.S. position on all conservation issues. Or, people can help by sending a tax-deductible contribution to the Seal Rescue Fund, Center for Environmental Education, 1925 K St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Sincerely,
Barbara Curelli

Stouffer Rebuts Mariner Editorial

To the Editor:

That paper you work for is really something else! Someone sent me a copy of a recent editorial about the Reagan Rally at the High School. It's hard to believe that your paper would think the fact that it was a "great party" (or words to that effect) out-weighed the other facts — that the Murray's abused their authority — or maybe think they are above authority.

I can't understand how a supposedly neutral press, again supposedly, protective of the public's rights, can editorialize so lightheartedly away the facts: they used a public facility without first getting permission, saw nothing wrong in having what looked like official Cohasset highschool uniforms used, used a school bus to transport chairs (on Phil Murray's orders, so I hear) and had Mr. & Mrs. M. transported to the rally in a (public) police vehicle.

Donna McGee had to go before the School Committee to get permission to put up — get this — a BIPARTISAN display of ALL the Presidental candidates, Dem. & Rep. and to justify its place as an educational/civics use within the school building. I know Mrs. M. is highhanded, but how can a newspaper let her get away with doing such things, and applaud the event as a good party? Unbelievable!

(But I guess this is the same paper that compared her to Harry Truman so what else should we expect? Eeek!)

□Two CHS seniors have had their art work selected to be exhibited in the National High School Art Award Exhibit in New York.

Susan Buckley's portfolio of art work and mono-print and Bonnie McClay's large carved-wood sculpture of Medusa were selected for the final competition.

Both Ms. Buckley and Ms. McClay were recently awarded Gold Keys at the exhibition of Scholastic Art Awards in the Mass. Regional Exhibit at the Prudential Center in Boston.

Both girls plan to enter art school in the fall.

Pre-School Screening Requirement

Under the Massachusetts Special Education Law the Cohasset School Department will screen children age three or four whose parents feel may have a learning problem which will effect their future educational program.

The screening includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should contact: Stephen E. Hart, Assistant to the Superintendent for State, Federal and Special Programs, 383-6104.

Children entering Kindergarten in September will undergo a pre-Kindergarten screening as part of the entrance requirement.

Osgood Council To Host Candidates

School Committee candidates, Jack Langmaid, Diana Kornet and Jackie Dormitzer have been invited and have accepted an invitation to attend the monthly meeting of the Joseph Osgood Communications Council to be held on Wednesday, April 2 at 9:30 a.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

Candidate Peter Trask, who was also invited, will be unable to attend because of his job. Any written presentation from him on the issues would be welcomed by the council.

Free Hour Of Hockey Instruction

Norwell/Scituate/Cohasset Seahawks will sponsor a free hour of hockey instruction all four Saturdays in April from 6-7 p.m. at Cohasset Winter Garden.

This program will be held for all boys from ages 7-12 who can skate, are interested in joining the Seahawks or are just learning the game.

Take helmet and skates to the first session at Winter Garden Saturday, April 5 at 6 p.m.

Commentary

Eliminate The CHS English Department!

By Chet Ellis

There seems to be a need for some clear thinking with regards to the school budget. The combined wisdom of the superintendent, the school committee and the advisory committee, apparently is not sufficient to reduce the effects of inflation and escalating energy costs and stay within the governor's four percent tax cap.

Obviously, they have not done their homework. To anyone with any sense at all it should be crystal clear as to what must be done. May I offer some suggestions:

1. Eliminate the English department at the high school. If the kids can't read or write by the end of the eighth grade, they probably never will. Let them become musicians or better yet physical education teachers. The savings should be around $275,000.

2. Close Osgood School and let the responsibility for primary education fall to the parents, or, alternatively, the Community Center. They've got most of the kids until they're five years old, so add another $50 a week and let them stay there until they're nine. Save another $600,000.

3. Fire all the principals and let the office secretaries administer the day to day activities of the schools. They probably do all the work now anyway. Savings would be $185,000.

4. Reorganize the cafeteria. Put in red checkered table cloths and candles and change the price of lunch to one gallon of fuel oil. Require the home economics students to wash dishes and clean up as a substitute for chemistry. Save another $390,000 and be warm.

5. Put cigarette machines in the girls room at the high school. This should easily bring in $100,000 and cut down on nicotine trauma.

6. Require the maintenance crew to have Masters degrees and use them as substitutes. Save another $75,000.

7. Make math an optional mini-course. Everybody claims they're "no good at it anyway," and besides, look what happened to slide rules. Another $250,000 saved.

8. As for sports, eliminate all away games and make a rule that if the team has a losing season, they have to chip in and pay the coach's salary. This should save $65,000 and provide additional motivation.

9. Reschedule the school year from March 1 to November 30. This would substantially reduce the fuel and utilities cost and eliminate "summer school." An easy $150,000 to the good.

10. Last but not least, charge admission to School Committee meetings and hold them at the Music Circus. Another $50,000 will be brought in not counting the take from the refreshment stands.

To conclude, if my suggestions are heeded, the town could realize over $2,140,000 cut from the existing budget. Now if we could just get rid of those books . . .

Rebuttal To Stouffer

In Defense Of The Murrays

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Having an opinion about anything is easy . . . easier than talking on the telephone.

Checking out the facts is more difficult; especially when one would prefer to believe the contrary.

This week we received a letter from former state representative Caroline Stouffer regarding a Cohasset It's Happening. We have no reason to believe either State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray or her husband, Phil, pulled anything over on the unsuspecting public during Ronald Reagan's visit to Cohasset (see Stouffer letter page 4).

We came to that decision through a process called deduction.

Truth consists in some form of correspondence between belief and fact. For example, the two propositions "This is a beech" and "This tree is not a beech" are not coherent because of the law of contradictions.

A. Mrs. Stouffer's allegation that the Murray's utilized a public facility (the gymnasium) without prior permission must be related to several terms:

1. It is unlikely the Murray's would take over any town building for their own use and without permission because they have never acted in this way before.

2. Cohasset School Supt. John Maloney, Business Manager John Raftery and CHS Principal Richard Streeter all told the Cohasset School Committee the Murray's had advance permission to rent the gymnasium for the Reagan Rally.

B. Mrs. Stouffer alleged Mr. Murray commandeered a school bus to transport chairs to the gymnasium.

1. CHS Principal Richard Streeter said Murray borrowed chairs from throughout the town but stressed those chairs were picked up by non-school vehicles.

2. Murray said a CHS van was used to move risers from the auditorium to the gymnasium — but that this was part of the rental agreement.

C. CHS Cheerleaders did wear their official uniforms to the Reagan Rally. However, at the time of the rally the Cohasset School Committee had no policy regarding the wearing of uniforms to political rallies. It has since developed a policy.

1. The Murray's and others invited the cheerleaders to attend the rally.

2. The cheerleaders voted unaminously to attend the rally.

3. They wore their uniforms.

D. State Representative Murray and her husband arrived at the rally in their own car about 12:30 p.m., March 2 and not in a police cruiser, as alleged by Mrs. Stouffer.

1. At the request of a secret service man, Mary Jeanette, Patricia Buckley and a secret service man made a bee-line to Hugo's after the rally in a Cohasset police cruiser in order to help with security clearances.

E. We were not aware the Cohasset School Committee had a bulletin board policy, but nothing would surprise us.

STREET HOCKEY

Many thanks should go to the numerous volunteer coaches who volunteered their time coaching this year's street hockey program. The 1980 program consisted of three divisions of youngsters age 6-12 years. This year over 190 Cohasset boys and girls participated hence, a large number of volunteer parents were required to conduct the program. Special thanks should go to Mr. Jack Langmaid, who was program coordinator again this season.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Many thanks are offered to the adult volunteer coaches for the coed Basketball League. This season over 100 4th, 5th and 5th graders participated in the league which was coordinated by Mr. Larry Shultz. The obvious success of the program was due to the fine leadership of coordinator and coaches. A summer program is being planned.

☐Roger and Jill Crafts, after holding down the center of Ripley Road for the past three years, have moved uptown.

Ensconced at 156 North Main, the Crafts have acquired a magnificent 180 year old, triple walk-in fireplaced Cape Cod, complete with wide board floors, low ceilings and the cozy feeling that goes with knowing that the ghost upstairs, that of old John Pratt (the original owner), will keep a friendly watch over the family.

The WEE SPINNAKER is expanding. After four years of providing delightful handcrafted gifts for infants, children, and adults, from its Elm Street shop, the owners, Judy Keim and Bobby Cox, have decided to expand to two other locations.

In addition to Cohasset, a WEE SPINNAKER will be located in Kennebunkport, Maine (May 15 to Oct. 15) at "The Landing" Hotel and at Quincy Market (June 12 to August 13). Now anyone on a trip to New England that has forgotten his (or her) Teddy Bear, and can't sleep without it, won't have as far to go to buy one. Nite nite Jason.

☐Rumor has it that if the price of silver keeps rising, banks in Cohasset will soon be offering more than banking services. According to our secret source, everyone who is anyone is stashing their sterling silver dinner service in safe deposit boxes to protect it from the second story man. Consequently, it is impossible to have a dinner party without signing out your own silver and transporting it to and from the bank each time.

So, in order to make it convenient for their customers and make a little extra on the side, one bank is considering holding dinner parties right at the bank by cooking the food in the vault and serving it in the boardroom, thereby solving both the problem of inconvience and the interest squeeze at the same time. Now why didn't I think of that?

Stouffer Won't Try To Regain House Seat

Caroline Stouffer, former State Representative from Hingham, has announced that she will not try this year to regain the House seat she lost in 1978. She cited personal circumstances which require that she find fulltime employment and which would preclude any major compaigning for the rest of the year, but she emphasized that she will continue to scrutinize the performance of the current Representative Murray.

"Mrs. Murray's record is not good — in fact, it is quite bad. She has been ineffectual, despite the fact (or maybe because of it) that she tied herself and her policies very closely with those of Governor King. We are seeing bumbling, unimaginative and ineffective government at the top level and at the district level. Our area deserves better, more thoughtful and much more intelligent representation than it has at present."

Stouffer pointed out that there are already at least two Democratic challengers for Mrs. Murray's seat, so there should be some debate of the issues.

"No office holder is automatically entitled to a free ride to reelection, and certainly Mrs. Murray's actions are not always what she claims to support. She should be called to account."

Mrs. Stouffer cited a recent newspaper interview, in which Mrs. Murray alleged that she is concerned about having safeguards for nuclear plants in place, but, Mrs. Stouffer said: "She voted numerous times in '78 and '79 against requiring state regulations for safeguards and against the prohibition of storing spent nuclear fuel (radioactive waste) in Massachusetts.

"This kind of inconsistency is not unusual for her, since her philosophy is one of political expendiency and it is always to easier to say one is for safety than to vote for it, against strong lobbying pressure. But it should be brought to the public's attention every time, so that citizens will understand exactly what she is doing."

Mrs. Stouffer was strongly critical of Mrs. Murray's vote in the last session against allowing municipalitiesflexibility in managing their own budgets.

"Despite her loud and oft-time proclaimed support of the concept of local control, Mrs.. Murray ended up showing little faith in the ability of municipal officials to make their own decisions over local budgets by voting for the 0% cap (which was, luckily, defeated) to cite one example.

"Another was her vote to not allow any increased collective bargaining agreements negotiated prior to July 1, 1979 to be included in the maximum calculation for fiscal '80 spending. By that vote, she made the job of local officials much more difficult and took away a lot of their budgetary flexibility.

"Mrs. Murray's problem is that often she doesn't understand the broad ramifications of the issues legislators have to deal with. Simply having a negative attitude against all spending is just not enough," Mrs. Stouffer said.

Stouffer concluded by promising to keep her options open for a possible campaign in 1982. In the meantime, "I plan to stay as active politically as I can, and to try to help keep the people of this district as informed of issues as I am able to do. Also, I want to continue promoting those ideas which I believe are beneficial to this district, such as expanded transportation, both water and land-based, including intra-town shuttle buses. I.e., "I was delighted to see that South Shore legislators recently backed the idea of studying possibilities for a monorail down Rte. 3, an idea I had supported — and testified for several years ago — for a number of years."

LWV Town Affairs Night April 1

The Good, The Bad, The Ugly Instructors

By Connie Grant

During the past week, an informal survey was conducted at Cohasset High School on what makes a teacher good or bad. Expecting the stereotyped answers of a good teacher being one who gives "A's" while a bad teacher being one who gives "F's," the replies of the students were surprising.

The most common complaint concerning teachers was how some of them take out their bad mood on their pupils by yelling and screaming for no apparent reason. In addition, the "bad" CHS instructor does not explain the material correctly, gives the instructions on how to do a project after it has been finished, and talks for the entire class period on trivial and inane subjects.

Tests were another reason for dissatisfaction among the students. Teachers that do not give enough time for adequate preparation for tests, ones that don't review the readings, and ones who give unfair exams were rated "terrible" by the interviewers.

In addition to the many reasons for disliking the methods of a teacher, students managed to find a few compliments for their instructors. In fact, the list of characteristics of a "good" teacher was compiled more quickly than its corresponding list. A favored teacher was unanimously rated as one who has the ready smile and an enthusiasm which spreads to the students. Certainly, an instructor who acts fairly to all students was also high on the list.

Also, those interviewed included the variation on the ways of conducting a class as being important to the better understanding of the students. It was deemed important for the teacher to listen attentively and answer readily all questions asked.

Also, of utmost consideration in the minds of a group of students was that every teacher should be firm but, at the same time, be willing to bend.

From the results of this survey, some complimentary observations on the pupils at CHS may be made. It seems that the majority of students have resigned themselves to the idea of school and its advantages and disadvantages. Since teen-agers have to go to school they wish to make the best possible use of their time.

Through the poll one can see that students don't like to have teachers that don't impart knowledge, but rather they like instructors who really instruct. In the words of one student, "If we have to spend time in school and have to listen to our teachers, then why not have good teachers so that we can learn. Then our time will not be wasted." It is possible this feeling of wanting to learn that has made CHS so strong in the national academic standings for colleges. Certainly, it's helped.

Ms. Kotiadis

A Welcome Addition To CHS

By John Antoine

To most of the students at Cohasset High School, the Reading Laboratory has been a mystery until the young, cheery, petite woman Ms. Kotiadis began teaching reading. She will be more than happy to set up individualized programs for interested students who need help in reading.

From below average students through students in Advanced Placement courses, she'll help students develop study skills and reading improvement which results in many advantages to all academic classes.

By attending Boston College as an undergraduate to receive a degree in Elementary Education and at Leslie College for a Master's Degree in Reading, Ms. Kotiadis was carefully chosen by the administration as the perfect reading teacher.

Before starting at Cohasset High School in January, Ms. Kotiadis taught a reading program in the Hanover School System. In comparison, she finds Cohasset High more challenging for she can instruct the students needing extra help in reading and also the students who are just developing reading skills.

During her spare time in her Scituate home, Ms. Kotiadis enjoys cooking, needlepoint, sailing, and of course, the wonderful and fascinating world of reading.

Ms. Kotiadis, a very thoughtful person, is pleased by the consideration and friendliness of the administration and faculty. She is also pleased with the respect and cooperation of the students at CHS. "The students in this school are a pleasure to work with and I enjoy working with them."

Each day brings a new and exciting aspect to her teaching for she teaches remedial reading as well as developmental reading. "All of the students balance out to make my day very interesting." For college-bound juniors, the Reading Lab offers assistance in the verbal part of the SAT's. Also, junior high students can seek help on their upcoming competency tests.

"Having a student enjoy and learn from reading is very satisfying to me," explains Ms. Kotiadis.

It is obvious with a person so helpful and sincere that learning new skills with her as a teacher would be an enjoyable experience. As students, we are fortunate to have such a beneficial program as the Reading Lab.

Beware Of

THE FOG

By Christine Barrett

Amid a chorus of gasps and screams of "Don't open that door!", Mr. Carpenter's new movie "The Fog" has moved into the theaters. Throughout this horror movie there exits not a theme of "Who-done-it," but rather "When-will-he-do-it."

It is this terrifying suspense that draws people like a magnet and captivates them to the screen.

The tale unravels in a remote Californian town observing its centennial. The inhabitants have strange guests joining the party. During "Witchy Hour" between 12 and 1 a.m., this alien group of undesirable settlers begin their celebration.

Unfortunately, their type of party song sings to a different tune; the melody of death. Six Californians are to be avenged for the crime of their ancestors, one hundreds years ago!

The key to the movie's popularity is the element of surprise. Constantly, the anxious audience is kept waiting in suspense for the stalker's next move. An indication of the avenger's presence is the lingering echo of a iron hook pounding at the door, and the audience knows that the avenger is seeking his prey.

But when and how will the avenger strike? As the story unfolds, the suspense builds to a climax in the theater. Six different times, tension becomes unbearable. Then, all at once, the stalker leaps at his prey, and the audiences' pent-up fright becomes released in a burst of screams and gasps.

This is the device which keeps the audience closely involved in the plot. It is an experience that allows the viewer to feel a part of the story; when the killer leaps out at the innocent boy, he is not jumping at the boy, but rather at the viewer.

With shivers of fear, the audience lives through this horrible suspense story. The movie is a true ghost story, guaranteed to scare. The mood is set in the opening five minutes and is kept alive throughout the whole movie. The audience learns to associate with the characters; their terror and anxieties become one with the viewer. This merger is a smashing combination which highlights the movie as a success. Assuredly, "The Fog" will join the list of Mr. Carpenter's popular horror movies!

Women Maligned and Defended Back in 1867

By Lois Martin

A couple of years ago I was teasing in this space for verification of a long ago publication called "Godey's Lady's Book and Magazine."

I feared my mind had gone awry in believing such a book ever existed. Fortunately, a friend, through anonymous efforts, not only proved the existence of Godey's but delivered one to me.

It was published in 1867. I've mentioned it here before because it is a constant source of entertainment though I seldom settle down to browse through it. It's a large fat volume, perhaps compiled over a year, I'm not sure. But it has fashion, cooking tips, weights and measures, like how many pounds of castor beans comprise a bushel...and music, "General Curley's March," composed for the piano-forte.

PATCHES

Most of the time I don't avail myself of the leisure required in leafing through Godey's. Last week though, in pursuit of random hogwash with more than a century's heritage in our country, I came upon the topic of "Women and Children in America," under what was called the Editors' Table.

Apparently a celebrated British journal had seen fit to write opinions of American women. Mind you this was 117 years ago. And Godey's had been asked to respond to those opinions. I don't want to quote the whole thing but I can't resist giving some of it verbatim: "Characteristics of Northern Women...No European who travels much or resides long in America ever fails to notice that shyness is not the special characteristic of the majority of the fair sex, especially in the Northern and Western States."

Just what did you mean by that, Buster!

Furthermore, the European impression of us was that we would shrink from no man's gaze, return stare for stare "word for word," or even blow for blow.

The standard of womanhood, described by the British writer chastised our longgone sisters as "Free Lovers, Bloomers, Woman's Rights...lecturers, noisy, brawling, masculine women," who monopolize anything they want to...

Love it. Never did I realize my great-great grandmother had so much pizzazz. All these years I've thought of her as making jam or mending frayed shirt cuffs. The most authoritative notion I had of her was a one time chairwomanship of the Christmas church supper.

Apparently I was wrong. Because one thing that really got the goat of the British journalist was the forward behavior of women in "cars." I decided he meant trains. Anyway, he said our kind of broad took the seats of men without question of conscience. That's a little different from today, when we give ours up with courtly manner.

And I was inspired by "Women in Public Business and Politics: Nothing is more common, for instance, than for women to gain their livelihood by canvassing for books and newspapers, going from office to office, from store to store, and from house to house, soliciting orders. They ply their trade with an audacity and pertinacity which, if they were men, would, in many cases, lead to their forcible expulsion."

If we don't get a retraction on that, he's gonna pay.

But thank good ness Godey's came to the rescue of women, its prime resource of readership. After tolerating, even printing, the European opinion of an "insolent, ignorant, voluble woman" who turned out to be a lecturess, Godey's abiding no further defamation on our character, founding its case on the likes of "Open your eyes and you will see that yellow is not blue."

Godey's said our manhood in honoring "the glory of our countrywomen," assumed a nobler meaning than that in any other nation. And the editor chastised the British of having assumed the term "Lady" for all women when it clearly belonged only to nobility.

Anyway, the ideas of the intelligence, rights and responsibilities of women were alive and well in 1867, defended by Godey's if not invented by it.

Still, so taken aback was I at the heinous suggestion that I and my fellow creatures of the delicate sex were less than retiring, particularly in the company of men, that I seriously considered cancelling my membership at Bob Backus Gym.

Students Critical

"They (Hull) are good competition," said Sandblom. "This came about because of a bunch of non-athletes who had nothing better to do with their time. The athletes shouldn't be penalized. The innocent are suffering for the actions of the guilty."

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton was away at a state AD's meeting on the Cape when the decision was made, and thus had no comment (he claimed he needed time to discuss the matter), But Superintendent of Schools Dr. John Maloney was available for comment.

"It was my recommendation to insure the health of the students. We're hoping the cooling-off period will help," said Maloney.

Maloney stated that there is a very good reason for such a long layover.

"This way," said Maloney, "we can develop a relationship with another community on a home-and-home basis.

"We felt that as responsible administrators, we had to take action before something very drastic could happen. We did this as a last resort."

Maloney discounted talk that the incident was the straw that broke the camel's back.

"Obviously they are not familiar with the buildup and don't know what efforts were made in the past to rectify the problem," said Maloney. "Iad like to believe that the incident is the end of the problem, but I can't risk that."

And Maloney thought that the situation went beyond the students.

"This was not a matter in which the students had any say," said Maloney. "It excellerated to the point that it was now a matter of administrators exercising their responsibility with regards to the health and safety of the students."

Track coach Charlie Davis called the decision a 'like it or lump it' deal.

"I'm just forgetting it (the decision)," said Davis. "I'm ignoring it. To me, it's not even there. Nineteen years I've been coaching track, and we've never had any problem with Hull. They just made the decision and we have to live by it."

Suzi McCool, a cheerleader, was on the bus when the stoning happened. She disagrees with the decision.

"How can I agree?" she asked. "The kids who stoned the bus weren't even students."

"Every athlete at this school would rather keep playing Hull," echoed a somber Richard Evans.

"The decision makes it harder for us to win," said freshman Dan Bowen. "When we deserve to go to the states, we should go. We shouldn't be disqualified by losses given to us by theLeague."

Most of the student athletes feel the same way about the decision. None had any say in it, but it directly affects them. They feel that Maloney, in taking his toughest stand since becoming superintendent (he leaves his job for another post at the end of the school year), has taken interscholastic athletics out of its proper perspective.

And what to do with the offenders? McNeill has a simple answer.

"Just hit them with the book."

Thank You

BLDG Activity Up From Last Year

Building Inspector James Litchfield issued 41 building permits during the months of January and February for work valued at $340,947 — a substantial increase in activity over last year, according to the building department.

Approximately $795 was collected in inspection fees.

Five new dwellings accounted for $267,000 of the valued work, while another $73,947 was the result of residents having installed stoves, being involved in remodeling projects and the like.

Waiting To Buy

With interest rates rising by the week, certain mortgage practices such as the "take-over" or assumable mortgage is nearing extinction.

"Banks are going to more and more take advantage of clauses" that allow them to recall a loan and re-adjust the interest rate up, Ms. Dole said.

Seminar moderator Dale Stilton of Jack Conway Inc. encouraged realtors to start talking about net costs after taxes. That's where the buyer's profit shows, he said.

"No question, the money is there. The buyers are there. It's up to you." Stilton said.

Ward of Commercial Mortgage encouraged realtors to start a write-in campaign to change government policy.

Ward also described the untapped numbers of persons eligible for Veterans' Administration loans, such loans requiring no money down and as high as $100,000. Ward said he had recently written a V.A. loan in Rhode Island for $85,000.

Banks in Rhode Island have pretty well avoided V.A. loans for two years, according to Ward. But today, Ward said a different breed of bureaucrats is more willing to speed applications.

Ward also outlined the government's "235" or graduated mortgage program which allows subsidized rates as low as 4 per cent. Rates increase over the life of the mortgage for this program.

Houses must be built or renovated with H.U.D. prior approval in order to qualify.

Ward noted the range of adjusted annual income is from $15,900 for two persons to $24,900 for a family of eight to qualify for subsidized rates.

Alternate financing suggestions also included Carr's description of Charlestown Savings Bank's "firm or float" mortgage. The "float" rate begins with lower than current interest rates but that rate can fluctuate after a year.

It's a way, Carr suggested, of mortgage customers' enjoying an interest rate decrease or sharing the bank's cost if rates increase. Carr said one of the greatest spurs right now would be a drop in the rates of a few points.

But nobody predicted any drop in the near future. All speakers referred to the increasing interest rate. Carr said he called his office during the break just to be certain the rate was the same as on Friday.

Ms. Dole said she and fellow bankers spend considerable time just answering phone queries on the current interest rate.

Nothing illustrated the tide of the interest rates as well as a cartoon man on a slide screen. The man listened to a telephone voice: "At the tone, the interest rate will be . . . "

So constant is the change in the rate that Carr's Charlestown Savings guarantees the quoted rate on a committment for only 30 days and Ward said Commonwealth Mortgage guarantees the rate for only 60 days.

Realtors complained that there were few situations when papers for real estate can be passed in so short a time.

Empty, Old & New Shops Discussed

Village Shop Talk

By Larry Fone

The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association had its monthly meeting March 6 at the Red Lion Inn. A presentation was made by a South Shore Publisher regarding a summer tourist guide which would provide visitors with information about events, shops, museums and any other activities during July, August and September.

As a group we recommend this promotional piece. The cost is minimal to merchants.

Also discussed were the empty shops in town. The large shop that was the Cohasset News Co. is still empty and is in poor shape — dirty windows and interior. We had hoped the owner or agent would have enough regard for the town and merchants to keep the empty shop tidy.

The Doll Museum & Shop is going out of business and will be vacated soon. We hope some merchant will take over this large shop with an interesting interior.

The village is happy to see the new jewelry shop, owned by the Kuppermans, which will open shortly. They will be specializing in custom jewelry and many other fine quality jewelry items.

Phillip Smith's Creation Interior Shop has been renovated with a new look. Folks who haven't been there in a while should stop in and see what exciting things can be done with paint, wall coverings and fine furniture with the expert guidance of Phillip Smith and Verna, his girl Friday.

Cookworks is still looking for a few more home bakers who want to sell their goodies Friday of each week. There are a few folks who have shown some interest, but at least 12 people are needed. There will be no markup taken, just a surcharge for bags and packaging — however, it is a consignment arrangement.

Don't forget — the Cohasset Historical Society is having another wonderful dinner/lecture meeting (the public is invited, but you must reserve your place). The dinner, at $6, is the best bargain of the year and the speaker will give the story and history of the Thomas Lawson Estate in Scituate, Thursday, March 27.

Also, the Historical Society will have its annual flea market May 24 . . . so while you're cleaning your closets, cellars and attic please bring your cast-a-ways to the Lothrop House on Summer Street. Item pick-up can be arranged by calling Robert Fraser at 383-9038 or Connie Parker at 383-0773.

All proceeds will go to the refurbishing of the Lothrop House, which looks quite proud with its exterior paint job. Some of the interior rooms are mostly done except for wallcoverings, which will be done shortly.

Contrary to "Cohassets' Rumor Factory," Cohasset Central Market has not been sold. This was confirmed by the owners last Friday. These folks are quality, responsible merchants in the village and any news of this type will promptly be made public in the Cohasset Mariner.

Do any of you readers have ideas about what activities you would like to see take place in Cohasset Village, Harbor or Route 3-A shops? Write to me, Larry Fone, at Cookworks, 25 South Main St., Cohasset 02025. This summer we will have two sidewalk sales — one which will coincide with the South Shore Art Association Art Festival, July 4.

Spring is in the air — catch it!

WAITING TO BUY COULD BE COSTLY

By Laura Griffin

In some ways, it was a pep talk; in other ways, a rally as some 350 South Shore realtors attended a seminar Monday on "Financing in Today's Market."

The meeting at Elks Hall, Hanover, was a professional realtors' seminar but even a layman could understand the basic message: mortgage money is available.

Somewhere between bankers' catch-phrases and anagrams, somewhere between the 50 year mortgage dreams, talk of Canadian 'rollover,' Fannie May, 'molasses clauses' and qualifying the buyer, there was that theme: Mortgage money is available — expensive but available. It cost footwork, headwork but money for mortgages is coming from new sources.

Three mortgage lenders addressed local realtors on the upside-down money market and repeated the same theme: "Mortgage money is flowing" not from traditional areas but from new or revived avenues.

The hitch: both realtors and buyers will have to approach the mortgage market with persistence and flexibility. Both banks and realtors are advertising that buyers need the assistance of a realtor to open such doors.

Yes, bankers said, your local bank probably has cut off mortgage supply money, government mortgage aids, old and new, are available as are mortgage banking firms.

This is not the mid-seventies squeeze when money was not available, realtors were reminded.

Among the terms coined for today's approach is "creative financing" which ranged from long-term purchase and sale agreements to graduated interest rates, increased use of Veterans' Administration (V.A.) and Federal Housing Authority (F.H.A.) loans to Charlestown Savings' "Firm or Float" rate mortgages.

Realtors broached the possibility of 40 year mortgages and were told that may be a future gamut. Although this state allows 35 year mortgages, Californians have touched base with the 50 year mortgage.

Right now, realtors were warned to tell their buyers that high interest rates are the stable in the money market. If the interest rates do come down, real estate prices will rise dramatically. Waiting to buy will be costly.

The seminar sponsored by the Plymouth County Board of Realtors was held at the Elks Hall, Hanover. Speakers included vice-presidents of three lending firms: Isabel Dole, also asst. treasurer of Northern Mortgage (Conway); John Ward of Commonwealth Mortgage Company, Inc. and David S. Carr of Charlestown Savings Bank.

Ms. Dole encouraged realtors to work harder at 'qualifying' the buyer. Buyers should be encouraged to consider their resources and their purchase power realistically.

For many buyers, Ms. Dole noted, "He can't buy his dream house now. What he's buying now is the equity that will give him his dream house later."

A sad little cartoon offered by Carr of Charlestown Savings showed a realtor telling a pair he'd found a house for them, "But a squirrel's living in it . . ."

After the seminar, Bob McGuire of Dugan and Sullivan, Plymouth, described this situation as building "sweat equity." McGuire said many of his buyers tackle the fix-up special that needs work. While the basic investment increases, the renovations also increase equity for a dream house.

Ms. Dole noted that her firm has been sufficiently busy with mortgage business to hire two extra people in recent weeks. "People are definitely buying," Ms. Dole noted. "Bankers are busier than ever."

Skippers Getting Ready To Play Ball

By Rob Tis

No one needed Jodi Sandblom to predict interesting sports stories from the Girls' Softball team this year. With only Diane Maloney lost to graduation, this heartbreaker team (it just missed a tournament birth last year, placing second in the league) will be back in full running, stealing, throwing and we hope pitching force.

Starting positions are not set but Andrea Featherston is favored at first base. Jodi Sandblom will star at second; Karen Froio will play short. And while third is too close to judge at present time, Ellen Digirolamo will probably take it. Behind the plate will be co-captain Shelly Townsend.

Fighting for outfield are Heidi Brown, Lance Norris, Mike Thorton, co-captain Gian Froio, Carrol Stover, Jill Rosano and Lindsey Gilmore.

Pitching's a problem — the loss of Maloney, probably the best pitcher in last year's S.S. League, will be a tough deficit. David Turner will try to fill Maloney's shoes as well as Jennifer Carroll and Laurie Sandblom.

Easy prediction: Coach Marilyn Watson said "We should have a strong season — but we'll need to better last year's 12-4 record." Watson feels pitching could be the Skippers' biggest weakness, and while "Inconsistency on the mound will hurt us, if Dave can get the ball over we should be all right."

When asked if boys being on the team could hurt this team, Watson said: "If anything it will help us, because of this new law they can play and if another team refuses to play it forfeits and we win."

Rounding off the 1979 hearthrob team are: Heather Fairchild, who will see action at first, Gia Barressi who will take a few turns at short stop and Sarah Froio who will guard the hot corner on occasion.

Skippers begin their season April 7, at home, against Middleboro. It should be an exciting and funny year.

The Cohasset Nine will be depending heavily on juniors this year.

Junior Bill Kurtz pitched the only two wins of the Skippers' 2-14 record last year and will get the call in tougher games this year.

Juniors Jack Hernan and Andy Shoshan will be

Rivalries Need Proper Perspective

Funny thing about rivalries.

They are good and healthy one minute, and then somebody does something stupid, something mindless, something without thinking, and, boom. The action puts a black mark on all parties concerned.

Kind of like the black cloud hanging over the Cohasset and Hull school committees. Because of the infamous stoning of a Cohasset bus by Hull townies after Hull's basketball team beat arch-rivals, the Skippers, the older folks have given the younger folks a symbolic kick in the butt.

Sportlight
By EDDIE FINOCCHIARO

That kick in the butt came in the form of a decision by the School Committees to suspend athletic competition between the two schools until the fall of 1982.

And because of a stupid, thoughtless action which spurred outrage and a slew of apologies, these decision makers were prompted to throw all logic and reason by the boards.

And those who should have known, the ones in the driver's seats, have taken an action which will probably jeopardize the chances for both schools to get to post-season competition.

You see, the South Shore League, in that the action was taken between two schools, may have to assess losses to both teams for the games they are supposed to play.

This means that if the Cohasset tennis team goes 12-2, which they could in all probability do, considering the fact they are one of the best teams in the state, they would finish the season with a record of 12-4, and not make the state tourney.

And if both Cohasset and Hull finish the season with identical records at the top of the standings, they would be league co-champs — all well and leaned on for relief pitching and chances are Matt Brown may even take the mound.

Sixty ballplayers tried out, but only 31 were selected to make up the varsity and J.V. baseball teams. Varisty ball is coached by Dennis Kuntz; David Infusino will coach J.V.

Matt Brown (third base) who led last year's team in home runs and Cathcer Jim Sullivan have been elected captains of this year's team.

Also returning are first baseman John Ayer and second baseman Fred Espinosa. And outfielders Bruce Maynard, Bob Russel and Paul Plante; backup catcher Bob Donahue.

Thank goodness. Phil Drago has seen the light and will not be running around the golf course (that game is a gesture) this year. In fact, it is highly probable he will be starting at shortstop.

Last year was claimed as a rebuilding year for this team — and rebuild it did. Skippers lost only two ballplayers to graduation: Tom Pipenbrink and Tom Higgins; experience will be in the Skippers' corner as Brown, Sullivan, Ayer, Espinosa, Maynard, Russel and Plante will all resume start positions.

"We'll have to depend on speed, quickness and good fielding," Coach Kuntz said. "Only Brown and a couple of others are capable of hitting the long ball."

Kurtz, Drago and Maynard all should place high in the league in stolen bases. Joe Becker and Paul Buckley, sophomores, will do infield duty.

The season opens April 7 against Middleboro.

A ride on the fabled Aladdin's carpet could hardly be more magical than the two and a half hour trip from Logan to Tampa's plush airport. Grey skies and chill winds are gladly surrendered to white sands and sparkling water. As advertised, there were the coconut trees, the flamingos, the mullets jumping in the bay and lumbering pelicans dive-bombing the silvery, leaping fish. Here, in the tourist's month of March, is gathered the affluent society, Cadillacs in abundance, jam-packed stores, hour-long lines at some of the popular restaurants and "no vacancy" signs lining Gulf Boulevard. Thinking ahead to our return from this "never-never land" I knew when I tasted Mary Saltarelli's pizza that here was an appetizer our readers would appreciate. Judging from the enthusiasm with which the other party guests devoured it, I asked for the recipe which Mary's Sicilian grandmother used to make from the left-over dough when she made bread. You'll notice we can use frozen bread for this

ORIGINAL SICILIAN PIZZA

Topping:
Oregano
Romano cheese
3 medium onions, chopped
1/4 c. olive oil or salad oil
1 loaf frozen bread

Grease jelly roll pan with Crisco. Leave frozen bread in refrigerator overnight, then leave at room temperature for at least one hour. Put bread in pan the long way and work from the middle of pan to stretch dough to fit pan. Allow to rise about one hour. Then saute onion in oil. Sprinkle layer of onion on dough first, then top generously with oregano and cheese. Bake approx. 30 min. at 375 degrees.

Back home, the only hint of spring to be found in our yard had been a few bulbs timidly reaching for the sun. In the Clearwater area, the air was often fragrant with orange blossoms and their citrus fruit was for sale in half bushel net bags for only three dollars. Enormous strawberries, red and juice, sold for three pints for a dollar and a half at roadside stands and tomatoes were enormous, not like in New England. The Donald Kimballs, transplanted Union Street residents, invited us to dinner and outside their white, stucco bungalow was a gardenia bush as tall as I. Had it been in bloom, I would have thought I'd died and gone to heaven, for I love their fragrance above all. Leah's dessert was so good I again asked for the recipe (see how I'm always thinking of you!) and amazingly enough, it had originated in Marshfield, borrowed from Linda Mammone. Here is their recipe for

BLUEBERRY OR APPLE SQUARES

1 c. margarine
2 c. sugar
4 eggs
Cream above ingredients together and add
3 c. flour
2 tsp. vanilla

Grease pan and spread half of batter on bottom. Then put 1 can Comstock blueberries or apples on layer and top with rest of batter. Bake at 350 for 50 min. in a 9 x 12 x 2 pan.

good, until they may possibly have to play each other in a division play-off. Then what can you do?

Fine, you might say, so the teams can't play each other. Hull and Cohasset play over 30 games a year against each other, though. So what does that do to schedules? It leaves holes. Gaping holes.

For instance, without scheduled league games against Hull, the Cohasset hockey team will only have an eight game schedule. Hardly enough to even slap the pads on for.

Great, you say, so let them schedule non-league games to fill the gaps. But how in the world could the tennis team find non-league tilts to fill the gaps this late in the game? That would be like trying to find a pearl in one of the clams casino at the Ground Round.

It's about time, you say? Well, bucko, I'm sorry you feel that way. Because of all the actions taken by the two schools, the painting of scoreboards, what have you, this action was the only one which was potentially dangerous. First offense, in the words of McGarrett.

And because of this first offense, a rivalry will be halted. It just doesn't make sense.

So what's the solution, you ask? Simple. Punish the pants off those concerned. Make sure they don't do it again. Then continue the athletic competition where it left off.

Because this a case which can be directly paralleled to that of declaring war. The big fellers declare it, and the little fellers fight it.

Which brings us to the most painful realization that those at the helm had no idea of the ramifications of such an action before they made their decision — they may just as well have walked into the meeting with seeing-eye kangaroos.

Let's hope the world's leaders have more discretion with nuclear weapon buttons than Cohasset and Hull's decision-makers have with the nay button.

Kessinger first in Jaycee Road Race

By Eddie Finocchiaro

For Scituate's John Kessinger, the 10 kilometer Cohasset race-by-the-sea was an open-and-shut case, er, ah, race.

Kessinger, a Boston College High and John Carroll University grad, broke away from his only serious challenger, Brad Hurst of the Greater Boston Track Club, in the first quarter-mile and cruised to the finish line in a swift 29 minutes, 30.8 seconds to win the fourth chapter of the Cohasset run.

"I really wanted this one," said a tired Kessinger at the finish line in front of Town Hall. "I knew he (Hurst) didn't have it."

Hurst, in training for the BAA Marathon and just coming off a 130-mile week, stayed with Kessinger for 1/4 mile, and made the race look like a two-man affair. But not for long.

Kessinger slowly pulled away from Hurst, making significant gains on the hills of the chilly course, and made it a one-man race by the one mile marker.

When asked about his pace and his goal before the race, Kessinger replied, "I just wanted to push at the beginning. I tried to run hard and maintain pace."

Run hard? Hurst confirmed Kessinger did just that.

"I knew what kind of shape he was in," said Hurst, "and I knew he was going to run hard. I just wanted to stay with him."

And nobody needed to remind Kessinger of his 130-mile week.

"My legs reminded me," said Hurst, smiling through his moustache.

The women's division produced a tie. How, you say? Well, the first two female finishers were sisters, Sarah and Kristen Linsley.

They ran the whole race stride-for-stride, finishing together. And don't think they didn't know the course.

"It was a great day for running," said Kristen. "We run this course all the time."

And the unusual thing about these Haavaahd-educated sisters is that they decided to forgo their sisterly rivalry.

DA agrees Selectmen held illegal meeting

Assistant District Attorney for Norfolk County, Charles Hely, agrees Cohasset Selectmen were in violation of the State Open Meeting Law in several respects during an executive session held March 19.

1. It was illegal to have voted on the candidates for intermittent police officers in executive session.

2. It was illegal to have not notified the individuals whose reputations and characters were discussed in that session to attend the meeting. Notification should have taken place 48 hours in advance of the meeting.

As of this writing, Hely has determined that a "reasonable remedy" will be for selectmen to make public their executive session minutes of March 19. Those minutes have not yet been approved by selectmen.

By law, selectmen are required to make public their executive session minutes at an unspecified time when there is no longer a reason for confidentiality.

However, Hely has not yet determined whether Selectman Henry Ainslie was in conflict of interest in having sat on the board as an appointing authority with respect to the hiring of his nephew and his second cousin. Hely said the Mariner would receive a written opinion regarding the conflict charge at a future date.

If Hely should find Selectman Ainslie was in conflict in voting on relatives, that finding might stipulate that selectmen revote the permanent intermittent police officer list of March 19, with Ainslie abstaining from the session.

Town Meeting 10 a.m. Saturday, April 5

An interesting, but confusing (and possibly time-consuming game will be played at this year's annual town meeting: kick-off time is 10 a.m. Saturday, April 5 at the CHS auditorium.

After Article 4 (salaries and compensation and expenses) a two thirds vote will be required to approve any of the remaining 54 articles, as per the governor's orders on the four per cent tax cap. (After Article 4 voters will have exceeded the cap.)

In addition, a final two thirds vote will be required on the total of those articles voted which exceed the tax cap.

The total budget request for the town is $7,754,565 — which if voted would increase the tax rate by $5 or 10 per cent. The rate would go from $49 per thousand of assessed valuation to $54.

The dollar increase in special articles over last year if they are voted is $220,000. Town officials do not feel the town can stay within the tax cap without reduction of personnel, if special articles are approved.

Cohasset/Hull athletes on probation

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Using spring athletic contests between Cohasset and Hull as a probationary period to discover whether students can stop after-the-game frictions might not serve as a true test of that ability. Tennis, golf, track, baseball are all non-contact sports which don't attract the same kind of crowds.

Disregarding the advice of School Supt. John Maloney, the school committee voted 6-zip, Monday to put spring sports between the two towns on probation, inviting recommendations in June from school principals regarding an extension of the probation.

Throughout Monday's meeting, packed tight with parents, athletes and teachers, Supt. Maloney urged the committee to not rescind its vote and to instead contact the South Shore League with regard to a more creative and less penalizing solution than imposing double forfeits for both schools.

While he said he did not concur with the vote of the league to impose penalities, he stressed: "It was less than two months ago that five of our youngsters were in danger of losing their sight. We did have a serious event. At what point in time do you draw the line?

Two months ago the community expressed outrage over the stoning of a Cohasset School bus in Hull — five cheerleaders were injured.

However, Monday, student council representatives said 455 high school students including the injured had signed a petition which started CHS wishes to play Hull.

Student representatives noted they had stopped a student walkout last Friday, but added they might respond in a different manner if no action was taken. The committee ignored the veiled threat.

Ronald White, senior class president captain of the tennis team said two forfeit losses would cripple the team's change for league standings. "When we play Hull in tennis we're assured of two automatic wins," White said. He noted over the last four years there had been no physical conflicts over a tennis match.

Supt. Maloney warned: "The intervals between events are getting shorter. The stoning happened seven weeks after the previous event."

Frank England said he felt the school committee was passing its problems right on to the South Shore League. He suggested students might help to solve the problems through peer pressure.

Although there had been a threat of a walk-out by Cohasset students last Thursday, Chairman Jack Langmaid noted: "There was no talk of a walkout in Hull on Thursday, but by Friday Hull students were also talking about a walk-out. I feel there is some communication."

John Ayer, senior class vice president, said the Cohasset Student Council will be contacting the Hull council regarding the issue. Fellow student White said after the councils met last year incidents had been temporarily halted. "I feel a need for continued communication."

Cohasset's Week

Conflict amendment

An amendment to the conflict of interest statute is now in effect. The amendment will allow state and county employees to hold elective and appointive municipal offices and to perform the duties of and receive the compensation provided for those municipal offices. However, the amendment will not allow state and county employees to act or vote in their municipal capacities on any matters which are within the purview of the state or county agencies which employ the same, or over which they have official responsibility.

Public hearing

The board of appeals has scheduled two public hearings to be held Tuesday, April 8 at 8 p.m. at the town hall.

Wayne Sawchuk, agent for Kenneth Gallagher, is asking for three special permits for land located on Pleasant Street, Lot C:

—a permit to construct dwellings for more than one family in the downtown business zone.

—A permit to construct buildings, driveways and to install utilities in the floodplain and watershed protection district.

—a permit to allow for a portion of land contained in the parcel which is outside the business district to be used to satisfy the area requirements within the zone.

Richard Farwell is seeking permission to alter a portion of the flood plain area on 389 Beechwood Street by filing and constructing a driveway across the flood plain area to a single family residence.

Withdrawals

The board of appeals has allowed two applicants to withdraw without prejudice plans for construction in the flood plain and watershed protection district:

Salt Winds Development Corporation has withdrawn its application for a special permit for the construction of three dwellings.

A special permit to construct a disposal system on land at 551-559 Jerusalem Road was also withdrawn by Melrose Savings Bank.

Variance granted

The application of Patricia and Edward Siskin for a variance from the side lot line restrictions at property located at 1 Forest Avenue was recently granted by the board of appeals. The existing structure is 14.26 feet from the side lot line rather than the 15 feet required by the zoning by-law.

Late payment bills

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has filed legislation to assist the elderly and others who have found it difficult to keep up with utility payments.

If the legislation is passed, it would allow for a one month extension of the moratorium on utility payments to April 15. The existing law calls for a moratorium on utility payments for certain persons, from Nov. 15 to March 15 for each year.

"Many, many persons were informed this month their utilities would be shut off March 15. The extension to April will bring us into warmer weather. Elderly and less fortunate people can repay the utility companies during the warmer months," Rep. Murray said.

Grid Iron

School committee minds appeared to have been made up long before the Cohasset Grid Iron Club confronted them with details regarding the importance of football training films — an item the committee recently scratched from the budget in the anticipation of being able to use TV (not possible), according to Frank England.

HE WHO WAITS ALSO SERVES...everyday Jerry the dog Kornet waits for Diana and Allison to be released from Osgood School.

The $900 for a photographer and film was quickly voted back into the budget on a 6-0 vote and that same amount will be deleted from the Deer Hill Roof Account ($34,000 after the deletion).

Buddy Howorth, a Grid Iron member, made the opening statements for his club, saying the funds were vital to the football program.

Robert Donahue, president of the Grid Iron Club, said it was important school committee members realize that training films are a need, not a luxury.

He added that while the Grid Iron had picked up a certain portion of training film expenses last year, the club had no intention of paying the tab in the future for any basic cost which it feels should be born by the school committee.

Langmaid wants second term on school board

John Langmaid III of 90 Beechwood St., Chairman of the Cohasset School Committee, announces his candidacy for re-election. He is seeking his second three year term on that board because he feels the community approves of his moderate and responsible approach to the demands and opportunities of this office.

He believes that continuity and stability on the committee, desirable at any time, are essential when a major administrative change is imminent. As Cohasset will be hiring a new Superintendent of Schools for the first time in five years, Jack thinks that his experience, accessibility to both residents and school personnel, and genuine concern for excellence in education will be of value to the town during this period of transition.

During Langmaid's first term, the School Committee has tried to identify and meet the needs of the students while holding down overall spending.

The Committee has charged a citizens group with helping them plan a curriculum for a Health Education program. Some class sizes at the elementary level have been reduced so that pupils with special needs can be more effectively educated within the system and become successful in their careers.

At the same time, as enrollment has declined, staff has been reduced. During this time, the school budget has been increased by 2 per cent, and this year, a requested 7.45 per cent. These very small increases include raises in salary for staff, funding for an active and responsible maintenance program, and paying for supplies and energy at the inflated prices with which we are all too familiar.

Landmaid has fought for money in the budget to pay for energy conservation measures. Those measures taken have already resulted in a 25 per cent reduction in energy consumption throughout the system this past winter as compared with last winter.

Langmaid and his wife Chartis have lived in Cohasset for 12 years and have two children in the school system, one at the Deer Hill and one at the Junior High.

Jack is 45 years old and for 10 years was a salesman, analyst, then manager for an institutional stockbrokerage firm in Boston.

He became disabled with arthritis seven years ago and had to retire. However, Mr. Langmaid has attended all meetings of the School Committee but four (which occurred while he was away on vacation) since his election in 1977.

He has served on numerous subcommittees including all the collective bargaining subcommittees. He will continue to work hard to ensure that the children of Cohasset receive a high quality and relevant education at a cost acceptable to the taxpayers.

Conwell announces candidacy for rep.

Attorney John E. Conwell has announced his candidacy for the House of Representatives from the Third Plymouth District. The district consists of the towns of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset.

A lifelong Democrat, Mr. Conwell is a graduate of Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. Upon his graduation from Georgetown, he entered the United States Army and was stationed at the U.S. Army Language School, Fort Myer, Virginia, where he qualified as an interpreter in French and Italian.

Following his Honorable Discharge from the U.S. Army, Mr. Conwell attended graduate school in Italy. Upon his return to the United States, he joined the Massachusetts State Police. After graduating from the State Police Academy, he was stationed at the Grafton and Framingham barracks.

He was then assigned to the Organized Crime Section of the Criminal Division of the Attorney General's Office where he served as a criminal investigator.

During this period, he attended Suffolk University Law School, graduated in 1977, and passed the Massachusetts Bar Examination in July of the same year.

After a seven year career, Mr. Conwell left the State Police to become an Assistant District Attorney for Plymouth County. He then entered private practice in association with the firm of Bulger and Finnerty.

Born in Boston, Mr. Conwell has had a lifelong association with Hull and in January of 1980, he opened offices for the general practice of law in Hull and Boston.

He is married, a member of the Massachusetts Bar, the Federal Bar, the Plymouth County Bar Association, the Norfolk County Bar Association, the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Attorneys, and the Hull Democratic Town Committee.

Diana Kornet seeks reelection to School Board

Diana Kornet, who was elected to fill a one-year unexpired term on the school committee last year, is seeking re-election for several reasons, she said in a press release early this week.

"First and foremost, I am vitally concerned with providing a good education for our students — and the best way to achieve that goal is to be informed an involved.

Ms. Kornet said the frustration of this past year with regard to frequent three/three stalemates were unproductive, and a waste of time. "It delayed formation of policy and was not conducive to constructive solutions to problems. I feel very strongly there should be an odd number of members on the school committee and I will re-introduce an article to that effect at the next town meeting."

Ms. Kornet received her degree in zoology from Connecticut College and has taken graduate courses in education and Lehigh University. She has three children in the second, third and sixth grades and points out that the present committee members have children about to graduate or in the junior/senior high school.

"Because we have only been residents of Cohasset for four years, I represent no special interest group, not rather am eager to hear the ideas of all citizens."

Flaherty on display at David Sharpe gallery

Works by local artist Philip Flaherty are on display at the David Sharpe Gallery of Cohasset.

A native New Englander Mr. Flaherty was born in Hingham, MA in 1948. Influenced in childhood by the land and seascape painting of his father, himself an accomplished oil and watercolor painter, Flaherty went on to formal studies at the Vesper George School in Boston, and later studied the impressionist school of painting with the noted Boston still life and portrait artist Robert Douglas Hunger.

Notes & Comments

. . . Cohasset and Hull athletes are acting these days like a quarrelsome old married couple. They have been hurling lots of stuff at each other for who knows how long often at the peril of the whole neighborhood.

But just as soon as somebody steps in to restore order, they turn on the interloper and demand to be left alone.

Somebody soon is going to have to concentrate on the things which unite Hull and Cohasset . . . not those things which divide them.

. . . We were sitting in Jack Langmaid's kitchen over the weekend listening to a discussion of school committee policy.

Jack said, in essence, the school committee and a countless number of other school committees had over the years created policy, but it is buried in committee meeting minutes.

Imagine, a moral conscience of a people lost in a file cabinet somewhere.

. . . Town government meetings are personal, ceremonial, and technical and are soon overtaken by events.

Sometimes it is difficult to remember what all those other meetings of 1979 actually accomplished. First some of us were for a new fire station, then we were unsure where to put it, now there's not enough money for it.

Most of us worry ourselves overmuch about the enduring consequences of our errors. But in the end they will be modified or corrected or their teaching ignored. The future and the Attorney General takes care of us.

. . . Questions for the candidates, to be answered privately:

1. The first time you see yourself quoted in any of the three local presses which cover Cohasset will you: A. Write letters to all three editors claiming you were quoted out of context? B. Be overcome with physical and nervous strain? C. Refuse to speak for the rest of your term?

2. How often do you have dinner with your family during the work week?

3. How many other committees are you on? If you're on a lot, why are you on so many?

4. Have you ever heard of the open meeting law? The conflict of interest statute?

5. Will you receive phone calls cheerfully throughout the day and night from: other committee members, irate citizens, the press?

6. Do you believe in the Constitutional assumption that the people know best?

7. What decision have you made in the past two years which had a profound effect upon: your family a friend; a business associate; you.

Thank you, Emily Gleason

By Laura Doherty

When Mrs. Emily Gleason steps down from the library board of trustees next week, a 49 year tradition of service and guidance will come to an end.

Mrs. Gleason said when she was appointed to the board in 1931, her main goal was to help continue the library's standard of excellence. From her first introduction to the library in 1919, she thought it to be "the biggest and the best of all the surrounding towns." Today, Mrs. Gleason feels the standard of excellence has continued in a library which is not only "extremely good" but also "delightful, informal and friendly."

"When I go there, I always feel as though I'm in the house of good friends," she said.

There were two separate boards involved in running the library when Mrs. Gleason first took office. The Directors of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library were primarily involved with the library building, itself. Mrs. Gleason's board, the Trustees of the Free Public Library, choose the books for the library.

The book committee would bring a list of books for each meeting and those approved by trustees would be sent for. Before they were allowed on the shelves, the trustees would read them. Mrs. Gleason remembers one particularly busy trustee who complained he didn't have the time to read all the books required of him.

"I'm a very busy man," he told the board, "but if there are any questionable books, I'd be glad to read them."

The library did exercise censorship at that time and a reserve shelf for such books was kept in a very unusual place. It wasn't until Mrs. Gleason got up the courage to ask, that she learned that it was located in the bathroom.

The board has always liked to be up to the minute on new books, Mrs. Gleason continues. Merit, readability and popularity are all taken into consideration when selecting books. Trustees use the catalog to order books "hot off the press."

Mrs. Gleason has participated in many changes in the library over th years. She headed a search committee which hired current director Richard Hayes. The knowledge andhelpfulness the present staff, according to Mrs. Gleason, help make the library a "cordial, welcoming sort of place which is a source of pleasure as well as information."

In 1975, the Directors of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library gave the building and its contents to the town and dissolved their corporation.

A new wing and major renovations changed the library while Mrs. Gleason was a trustee — the most recent renovation in 1979 achieved a 40 per cent increase in usable space.

Sheila Evans, chairman of the trustees, who has served with Mrs. Gleason for 15 years notes that "She really has been the guiding light and inspiration for the library at a pivotal point during its transitions. Her wisdom and sense of humor have been valuable assets to the board."

Mrs. Gleason feels that the nine member board has worked well together. "There have been differences of opinion," she says, "but no sharp conflict." She points to the board's relationship with other town committees and is especially pleased that residents appreciate their library. "The town has been generous and the trustees appreciate its support and hope that citizens take as much pride in their library as we do."

Recently, a luncheon was held for Mrs. Gleason at which she learned contributions have been made to help the library acquire a dictionary stand with a brass placque honoring her years of service to the library.

Constructive criticism urged

Letters

(ED.'S NOTE: The following letter was written as a public letter to former state representative Caroline Stouffer whose letter regarding a Cohasset Ronald Reagan Rally appeared in last week's edition of the Mariner).

Dear Mrs. Stouffer:

Regarding your destructive letter to the editor of the Mariner: I was thoroughly disgusted in reading your constant criticism of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, who is a very admired and respected individual for her strong leadership in representing Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

It seems to me, Caroline, that you are trying to pull down Mary Jeanette and push yourself up with your ill bred commentary.

This shows weakness on your part and insured unintelligence. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Stouffer, I have yet to read a single positive article of yours.

The gestures you submitted in your letter were nothing but that, gestures.

Contained in your letter were only your views, yet not facts, as proved by a Mariner writer in last week's issue.

I whole-heartedly thank the Mariner for bringing out the facts that proved your gestures farfetched and untrue.

In the future, Mrs. S., I suggest you once in a while write a constructive and complimentary letter or article.

Thank you,

Maloney signs out at CHS

[ED.'S NOTE: The school committee read the following letter from School Supt. John Maloney at its meeting Monday. In spite of the fact Supt. Maloney took some umbrage with un-named committee members, he received a round of applause. Because of a space shortage, we have printed only a portion of Dr. Maloney's letter].

Dear Mr. Langmaid:

After five successful and professionally rewarding years in Cohasset as Superintendent of Schools, it is with mixed emotions that I submit to you my letter of resignation effective at the conclusion of the High School graduation exercises on June 1, 1980.

As you know, I was elected Superintendent of Schools in Sharon and have recently accepted this appointment.

To the citizens and voters of the Town of Cohasset, I give a heartfelt thank you for their fiscal support during the five years of my tenure.

As a result of the community's fine efforts, the academic programs today proudly reflect your willing support. To the parents of the community who faithfully attended the School Committee meetings and supported my efforts to upgrade and improve the quality of education in our town, I wish to express my personal indebtedness.

The students' spirit and their quick acceptance of new ideas have been most refreshing and a source of satisfaction to me as Superintendent. I ask that each and every student set his goals just beyond his reach so that he will forever have something to seek.

I leave knowing that we accomplished much during the past five years but knowing also that we could have accomplished even more had some members of the Committee been able to make the distinction between that which is policy and that which is administration.

Until such time as the School Committee can operate with a clear distinction between policy and administration, this simple flaw in management will cause the school system to remain unsettled. Thus, I encourage citizens to become actively involved and interested in the well being of their school system.

I hope that future members of the Committee will be elected from those citizens who have two important characteristics: an open mind and a love of children.

Respectfully submitted,
John F. Maloney, Ed. D.
Superintendent of Schools

Local inventor solves burglary problem

By Tanna Kasperowicz

There's no doubt that crime has hit the suburbs South of Boston — in particular art and antique-riddled Cohasset By-The-Sea.

National figures show that B & E's are up 15 per cent; Cohasset officials feel the town may be experiencing an even higher percentage rate and foresee the addition of even more men to the police department in the near future.

This week the Cohasset Police Department Report shows 10 false alarms (answered) and two attempted B & E's. We've bold-faced those items in the report this week.

Answering a false alarm is just as costly as answering a real alarm. False alarms withdraw vital manpower from the mainstream and eat up gasoline dollars.

But now there's a practical, almost fool-proof manner in which you can burglar-proof your home, put an end to unnecessary (and frightening) false alarms . . . and enjoy your winter vacation and any time away from home.

Cohasset inventor Donald Massa, 33-year .old president of Massa Products Corporation in Hingham, has invented a new, ultrasonic intrusion alarm which appears to virtually 100 per cent effective home protection at an inflationary-fighting price.

Over the past 30 years inventors have researched the tendency of burglar alarms to inadvertently sound with a change in room temperature or air flow.

"Most people in the alarm business didn't understand acoustics, so they only dealt with the electrical signals produced by the intrusion alarm. Acoustical engineering was needed," Massa said.

"We started off by investigating the sound field, how it was being transmitted, and what the sound wave was doing.

"We found a significant difference between a moving target and air flow changes in a room. In order for us to monitor those differences, we had to use a microcomputer in the system. Several patents are now pending for this new system. Four have been issued," Massa said.

Last summer Massa gave a talk at M.I.T. on the acoustical processing of the Massasonic Microcomputer Burglar Alarm.

"Normally, the engineers and inventors present at a session like that try to crucify you for mistakes. But at that particular meeting, Professor Bruce Lindsay, editor of the Journal of the Acoustical Society of America, stood up and congratulated me for solving the biggest problem in ultra-sonic alarms. He said he had spent the past 30 years at ADT as its chief engineer trying to solve this problem. I wondered at that meeting — where are the TV cameras, the newspapers!"

The unit, modular in design, is being manufactured by Massa Products in Hingham. The average person can set it up easily, because it utilizes no wires. The Master Alarm Unit fills the area to be protected with ultrasonic sound — a frequency or pitch above the range of human hearing. This sound protects every inch of a room — it will even catch an intruder entering through the floor or the ceiling!

The basic unit is designed to ward off the unprofessional thief: the drug or dope addict looking for items he can fence easily. But depending upon one's valuables and degree of paranoia, this wireless system can in fact provide even more sophisticated coverage — still at a reasonable price.

Present costs for having one's home wired for a burglar alarm system is in the vicinity of $2,000, not including a monthly rental charge for hooking into a central alarm station.

The Massasonic Alarm retails for $199.95 plus $64.95 for a Battery Siren Unit (if desired). At this very moment Lincoln Trust Bank is offering the system to customers at $25 off. Last month Massa Products signed up sales representatives across the Eastern seaboard with plans to go national with the product as soon as production is able to keep up with demand.

The main unit can have inputs from other burglar alarms: a panic button, a fire alarm, medical alert and other master units. There is also a relay which can be hooked into an external alarm or a telephone dialer. The $65 Battery Siren Unit will continue to provide service during power outages or if the plug should be pulled.

Persons who have experienced a series of sophisticated burglaries can invest in one Master Unit for the room which would most likely be entered, and hide a second unit in a closet. Even if a burglar managed to destroy the first Master Unit before it could sound, the second hidden unit, would take over, sending off the necessary police and neighborhood signals.

The units are presently being marketed at Lechmere. Jordan Marsh will be carrying them shortly. And in the near future smaller South Shore businesses will be selling the system.

Library candidate

George Haley has announced that he is a candidate for the office of trustee of the Cohasset Free Library. In a prepared statement Haley said:

"As a candidate for this office I feel I can contribute intelligence and common sense in the every day operation of our fine library."

A resident of Cohasset for many years, Haley said he has seen the library grow to be a responsible institution for learning and research which has enriched the young and old.

"If elected, I will continually monitor the efficiency and economy of the library, with the taxpayer's dollar being of paramount consideration at all times.

around town

☐We rock dwellers are reaching the end of our season of travel. The late winter and early spring have taken over as the time to get away.

It used to be the other way around. Remember taking family trips in the summer? Two weeks "on the Cape" or "at the shore" (if you came from N.Y., N.J., or Pa.) or "at our camp" in New Hampshire or Maine.

A really big deal was a trip to Florida in early June when dad had saved up four weeks vacation and enough money to support the whole family away from the nest for a month.

Only rich people travelled in the Winter . . . . .

☐The Barcombs of Jerusalem Road and the Old Colony Tennis Club, have just returned from Cartagena, Columbia (that's a new one) after spending ten days soaking up the equatorial sun (her) and wearing out three tennis rackets (him). Welcome home amigos.

The Bartows: Steve and Karin, of Sohier Street and the Cohasset Mariner have just returned from a bare boat charter with friends in the Windward Islands. That's the Southeast Carribean, for the non-geographist. Starting at St. Lucia, the group sailed South, island hoping until they reached Grenada, the last port on the itinerary. Sounds like a great way to spend a couple of rainy weeks in March. Back to work, Karin!

☐The cheekiest trip so far however, was the one taken by Jack and Betty Crandell of Nichols Rd. in late February extending into middle March. How about a three week bareboat charter in Tonga! . . . Huh?, whereat? It's in the South Pacific, six hundred miles South of Pago-Pago and five hundred miles East of the Fiji Islands. In fact, it's so far away that you practically can't get there from here.

The group: Jack, Betty and a first cousin of Jacks, spent the time sailing among utopian islands with names like NIUATOPUTAPU, TONGATAPU, and NUKUALOFA. Wow!

☐Speaking of the South Pacific, Bill Morgan of Bow Street has been chosen to play Captain Brackett in the upcoming Curtain Call Theatre musical of the same name. Keith Knowles, of Border Street will play Cmdr. Harinson, old Brackett's sidekick. Good luck with Bloody Mary, guys!

☐Priscilla Tebbetts, of Jerusalem Road Drive, has recently been appointed a sales representative with Don Kent Solar, Inc. of Weymouth. Priscilla says that inquiries and sales for both hot water and heating systems are increasing rapidly since the oil price has made solar systems extremely competitive. You're in hot water now, Priscilla!

☐Karen Porter, a junior at U. Mass., Amherst, and daughter of Roger and Jane Porter of Elm Street and Bassings Beach, spent her spring vacation in Daytona Beach, Florida, as (now get this), a promotional representative for Playboy Enterprises. Hmmmmmm . . . see you in the centerfold, Karen.

☐Dave and Sue Terry of Margin Street held their second annual after-race-keg-party on Sunday. After six and one-half miles one develops quite a thirst, doesn't one?

☐Kent S. Webber of 41 Hillside Drive was recently elected to a 3-year term as a director of the National Management Association.

As a director, he will serve in making decisions on policy on the National Management Association Board of Directors.

He will represent the following chapters at the meetings of the NMA Board of Directors: The Quincy Management Association, The Pioneer Management Association in Auburn, Maine, and the Westinghouse-Sturtevant Chapter in Hyde Park, Massachusetts. He will also represent NMA at the New England Council of NMA.

HAIR-RAISING EXPERIENCES can be had at any time of the day at the Osgood School Playground as Holly Ludlow, 10 and Heather Ludlow, 13 prove.

☐Airman Thomas Parziale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. Parziale of 11 Bayberry Lane, has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

Airman Parziale is a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Jo-Ann Fichtner is presently choreographing the Boston College Musical Production of "Damn Yankees" to be presented by the BC Theatre and Drama Dept. on April 17-20th. Tickets are available by calling 969-0100: ask for the Theatre Dept.

Jo-Ann has also been selected as one of seven professional judges from the Boston area to choose the Boston College Eagle Cheerleading Squad for the next fall season. The Cheerleaders are judged on their execution of jumps and stunts, form, projection and dance competition. The judging will take place on March 29th.

Plans are underway for the Beechwood Congregational Church, Church St., Cohasset, to hold its fourth Annual Antique Show and Sale, at the Cohasset Town Hall, on June 6th and 7th.

Once again, you will have the opportunity to see a variety of antiques from dealers near and far.

Seahawk Pee Wee A's bring home the gold

What can be said about the Seahawk Pee Wee A's that hasn't been said already?

They brought home the gold this weekend, winning the Lake Placid Youth Hockey Tournament at the Olympic Village.

But what started out as a breeze for the Pee Wees, ended up being a real knuckle-biter.

They won the first tilt on Thursday, 3-0, over the Warren (Mich.) Sabres, the third best Pee Wee team in Michigan, with Wayne Hollis recording the shutout, Charlie Lersch getting two goals and Jamie Kelly getting the other.

They notched a 3-1 victory over Gloucester (Ont.) on Friday, with Kelly, David Cogliano and Mike Ross getting the tallies. They rolled over Melrose, 5-1, Saturday morning, with Steve Remedis getting two goals.

But in the first round of the championship round robin, they tied Milton, 2-2, on a come from behind goal by Ross. The Seahawks beat this Milton team three times in regular season league competition.

The Seahawks had to come from behind again, with Matthew Glennon scoring the winning goal in a 4-3 win over Comp-u-ware of Michigan in the championship game.

What made the game a knuckle-biter was that the Seahawks got a late penalty and Comp-u-ware pulled their goalie, as Hollis had to make two fantastic back-to-back saves with eight seconds left in the game.

Mark Elbery, who injured his tailbone in the first game, came back to score the Seahawks' first two in the last game.

The Squirts embarrassed the host Lake Placid club, 13-0, in the first game, relying on four goals from Tommy Bopp, two from Jason Szep, two from Jeff Hartwell, and a shutout by Kyle Hublitz.

They were eliminated in the second game, 3-1, by Seekonk, getting a lone goal from Seth Webb.

The Bantams had to work overtime in this tournament.

They won their first game, 2-1, over a humongous Scarborough, Ontario club, in overtime, with Peter Kaslauskas getting the overtime goal.

On Friday, Danny Bowen scored the overtime tally in the 2-1 win over Gloucester, Ontario.

But two goals, one each from Bowen and Rich Evans, were all they could muster in a 3-2 loss to Lake Placid.

Race

"Yes, there is a rivalry there," said Sarah, "but we decided to run together to kind of squelch it."

"About a half hour before the race, we decided not to compete," said Kristen.

"We just decided that we were both going to win," chimed in Sarah with a laugh.

But some of the entrants in the 713-runner field weren't so happy. Drew Southard, of the Marshfield Roadrunners, for example.

"They started the race five minutes early," said Southard, "when I was in the bathroom. I'd have won it. That really makes me mad. I'm going to get my money back."

But most of the runners, including Sharpless Jones of the Runnery, were happy with the run.

"Everyone looks forward to this race," said Sharpless, paying more attention to the vessel of the amber nectar of the gods he was drawing than to the reporter (the runnery brought two kegs down). "It's a real pretty course, right on the sea, and it's a nice way to start the season."

Leo MacDonald of the Jolly Tinkers had a simpler way to explain how he enjoyed the race.

"I survived."

AND THE WINNER[S] — The Linsley sisters, Sarah [left] and Kristen, ran the Cohasset Race-by-the-sea stride for stride and were the first women finishers Sunday. [Derr photo]

No winners in Trivia Quiz

Too tough for you, huh?

Nobody got last week's quiz, so here are the answers:

1. Bert Campaneris (older than Jim Fregosi) and Gaylord Perry (older than Pat Corrales).

2. It was publicly owned through the sale of stock — there were 10 large shareholders who sat on the board of directors, but for the most part, loads of people had little pieces.

3. Julius Erving (who played with coach Billy Cunningham on the ABA New York Nets.)

4. Dawkins, no college; Francis, Oregon (where he roomed with the late distance runner Steve Prefontaine); McGuire, St. John's; Mikan, DePaul (Ray Meyer's first Blue Demon team); Reinfeldt, Wisconsin-Milwaukee (a big distinction, this, after Reinfeldt graduated the school dropped its football program. He'll be the last guy in the NFL from Wis.-Milwaukee).

This week's quiz is especially tough, Gary Gunther. If you answer all the questions right, Gary, a dozen coffee rolls to you on the Mariner. Here goes.

And, this week's quiz:

1. What are all the names and numbers of retired Boston Bruins' jerseys hanging in the rafters of the Boston Garden?

2. In 1970, Robert Gordon Orr broke the NHL mark for most assists by a defenseman. What was the old mark?

3. Ted Williams finished off his career in an astounding way. What did he do in his last time at bat?

No Fret Week

By Lois Martin

This is officially No Worry Week. I'm declaring it because I'm sick to death of going around with my brow furrowed. The President and those men in dark suits have given us no peace. We've been patriotically fretting since last fall.

And it's suddenly swept over me that half the time I'm heaving heavy sighs about the state of the nation, the inflation or energy, I haven't the foggiest idea of what the problem is.

I've taken personal responsibility for cutting back demand from Iranian oil fields. It's been months since I've loitered in a hot tub. My luxuries in personal bathing are one step above being hosed down outside.

PATCHES

And as if it were not enough for us to bear the burden of fuel shortage, they're at us about inflation. Whose fault is it? I've only had a credit card one year. Do I have that much power? Someone was trying to explain to me the concept and origin of inflation. It's a matter of IOU's instead of cash, he said, a lot like pretend or monopoly money only more serious.

How long's it been since we've seen Jimmy with a broad smile. Two weeks ago he was back on the air with his dour expression and a dark gray suit. Lord, how I'd take heart if he'd show up on NBC just once in a bright checked jacket and his hair wafting in a breeze.

But no. He says I'm to cut out my spending without money. And he chides me for my lack of equity. Do you know that's not a word in my vocabulary...Dollars, I say, cash or checks, even... but equity is one of those words contrived to make me worry without making me understand why.

Last week a woman came into the office. She was shaking her head in despair, you know how we do. She'd been up all night worrying because there's no equity. She'd been to D.C.talking with more of those men in the dark suits, the experts who gave her cause to be a nervous wreck.

Then she got more upset when I started to laugh in what was the official launching of my No Worry Week. I told her things weren't going all that well without these new anti-inflation moves; that I didn't believe the medicine would be worse than the disease (since the disease was already 20 per cent someone told me). And I further couldn't remember a time when anyone said things were going well. When didn't people say "Tsk, Tsk;" "What are things coming to?" "Where will it all end?"

I've never carried on an economic conversation without hearing those remarks always from experts.

If there's one exception I might make in not worrying, it's about the choice of experts. Listen to them...they're on every show, somber, confident, decrying all the mess other people have made out of the world. Well, if they knew so much, why didn't they do anything? Did they play a part in voting or getting us here?" How come the experts get credited for unused wisdom while we get blamed for getting the nation into debt. As I say I don't understand it.

I think it's high time I went back to handing over cash for everything. Not that I've been among those charging cars, flights to Red China or catering costs for heads of state. But so many people have toyed with credit that they look up your card number to see if you're in that list of naughty people who are only joking when they write their IOUs.

But I don't want to hear any more inflation panic talk. They can take their liquid, fixed or solid assets and buy themselves a cheery pastel striped jacket for spring, with a boutonniere in the lapel. When I hear about the economy this week, I want to see a big smile on the face of the expert. I want him to say: "Things never looked better; This is the best possible time to start your own business; invest in an island off Maine and sell your button collection.

But economically speaking, I guess I'll have to take an I.O.U. on good news. We've got it coming to us but nobody's got it. I say forget the whole thing. Don't worry. Two months from now they'll have a whole new set of problems to concern us. We'll be going around worrying and then the experts will be happy.

from the kitchen

Though a young man's fancy is rumored to turn to love in the spring, many of our male friends cling doggedly to thought of food. One of these is Pete Blaisdell, who has answered Ginny Ansberg's recent request for more natural foods' recipes with this favorite of his:

WHOLE WHEAT QUICK BREAD

2 c. whole wheat flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
1 egg, beaten
1¾ c. buttermilk [or yogurt]
1/4 c. honey
1/4 c. butter or magarine, melted
1/2 c. chopped walnuts
1/2 c. raisins

Mix together first four ingredients. Combine next four. Add to dry ingredients. Stir just till moistened. Fold in walnuts and raisins. Bake in greased 9x5x3" loaf pan at 350 degrees for 55 to 60 min.

* * * *

The doggie bag routine is open to suspicion these days when the food budget is so costly. Fido doesn't always get the left-overs from his master's restaurant meal, for inflation has made his tasty tidbits something of value.

Some customers want them for a second meal, some taking the butter and rolls, even the sugar. One local waitress recalls a customer who departed, then returned minutes later and threatened to take back his tip if she didn't retrieve the leftovers he had forgotten to request. Gene Kent, Pier 44's able chef, says they will put up anything the customer wants to take home in reusable plastic containers, complete with the Scituate restaurant's logo. Well aware that their servings are more than ample, Gene says they are welcome to ask for doggy bags.

Sometimes at the Daily Ketch, customers for their lavish buffet are reminded that when the sign reads "all you can eat," that means, "on the premises." Chef Sylvia Gentile finds more and more people are asking for doggie bags, even if it's only a morsel. "We don't mind their asking," says Sylvia, "but we know it's not always for the dog. Sometimes they ask for leftover pasta and the homemade loaves of bread served at dinner and if it's really gooey, the food is wrapped in tinfoil before being placed in a lined plastic bag."

The Fairview Hotel has just opened for its 26th season in Brant Rock and Patty Marmai says they would rather the customer took the leftovers than have it go in the garbage. It's no effort for them to put the food in a plastic container and then in a plastic bag, or, as some call it, a "woof-woof."

Not quite satisfied with having made 24 loaves of bread in one week, Margaret Varnerin asked if we knew of a good lemon bread recipe and indeed we do. Jessie Hensel's Lemon Loaf deserves a special corner in her freezer, it's so good. Sometimes I divide the batter and make a few round loaves in scoured, greased coffee cans. Pretty enough for an Easter gift!

LEMON LOAF

1½ c. flour, stir to aerate before measuring
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 c. [s stick] butter
3/4 c. sugar
Grated rind of 1 large lemon [1 T]
2 large eggs
1/2 c. milk
1/2 c. sugar
Juice of 1 large lemon [3 T]

Butter bottom and sides of a 9x5x3" loaf pan. On wax paper thoroughly stir together flour, baking powder and salt. In a medium mixing bowl cream butter, 3/4 c. sugar, lemon rind and beat in eggs, one at a time. Stir in flour mixture, alternately with milk, just until smooth each time. Turn into prepared pan. Bake in a pre-heated 350 degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about one hour. Meanwhile, stir together the 1/2 c. sugar and lemon juice — sugar will not dissolve. Stand baked cake in pan on a wire rack. Slowly spoon sugar-lemon mixture over top of cake. Let stand about 10 min. Top of cake will glisten with sugar crystals. With a small metal spatula loosen cake edges and turn right side up. When cooled, wrap in transparent plastic wrap. Store in tightly covered tin box. Also freezes well.

All you ever wanted to know about fishing and...

By Lindy Blaisdell

Herbert Hoover once said. "Fishing is the chance to wash one's 'sole' with pure air. It brings meekness and inspiration, reduces our egotism, soothes our troubles and shames our wickedness. It is the discipline in the equality of men — for all men are equal before fish."

We will be following the fishing season through the early fall, and I hope each of you will spend at least one day upon or beside the water. Chances are, if you spend one day fishing, the others will follow.

This column will deal with both fresh and salt water fishing, launching ramps and terminal rigs. We'll discuss where and when to go along with what to use. I've been promised the most up-to-date info from Charlie's Tackle in Hanover and The Angler's Den in Plymouth.

We will answer pertinent questions along with reporting notable local catches.

FIRST CAST — Fresh water, all Mass. residents 18-64 must buy a license for $11.25, 15-17 — $6.25, seniors 65-69 — $5.75. They're free for the blind, over 70 and paraplegic. Got a friend visiting? It'll cost him $17.25 for the season, $11.25 for seven days. All licenses are valid from date of issue to Dec. 31.

There is no closed season on fresh water fishing, but there are bag limits and minimum sizes. Here they are:

Black bass — 10" min., 5 per day; Shad — no size, 6 per day; Trout — no size, 6 in ponds, 12 in streams, to Oct. 20 when the limit goes to three, anywhere. Perch, sunfish, shiners, etc., are at the mercy of one's ability.

SECOND CAST — Salt water, no license is required along our coast for sport fishing, but there are a few restrictions. Coho Salmon — 15", 2 per day; Eels — 4"; Stripped bass — 16", from tip to fork in tail.

Everyone's favorite, smelt, are closed down from March 15 to June 15, spawning.

If you are into market fish and want to sell over 100 pounds, you'll need a $5 rod and reel license. An additional $25 license allows one to fish commercially and sell his/her catch.

Boat licenses, though more versatile, are more expensive. For $50, you can sell all the fish your 1 to 59 foot boat can hold; 60-99 feet, $75; 100 feet and over, $100.

Fresh water licenses can be had at your town hall, along with selected sporting goods stores, as salt water licenses (commercial) are available from the Division of Marine Fisheries, 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202.

NIBBLES

Although it's a little early for sweet water fishing, try warming up on flounder almost anywhere and cod at the mouths of most smelt runs (like the Jones River).

Trout should start hitting in Cape ponds very soon.

Until next week, friends, keep your bait fresh and hope for a big one.

ESCAPE would shut door on criminals

The Legislative Committee on the Judiciary this week held a public hearing on legislation filed by the Plymouth County E.S.C.A.P.E. Committee to require an automatic lien against a criminal's property to compensate his victims.

E.S.C.A.P.E. (Eliminate Serious Crimes Against People) filed the legislation to establish a lien against a criminal's property, after conviction, to protect the victim's right to sue for damages.

E.S.C.A.P.E. President William Blake said the legislation is intended to recognize the right of the victim of crime to be compensated personally for the damage and injury he suffers, no matter what penal sanctions may be imposed on the criminal. He noted that while some statutes and procedures do provide for restitution, they allow only for actual damage to property and medical bills.

Joey the egg

By Betsy Andrade
Grade 3

On March 9th I took care of an egg for the day. I called it Joey. I made a face for it and a bed from a box for Joey which had napkins for covers.

My family and I were invited to my grandmother's house for dinner, and Ibrought Joey with me. He took a nap while we had dinner.

After dinner I carried Joey around with me and showed him to everyone.

I still have Joey and it was lots of fun taking care of him for the day.

By Tony Morgan

As usual, Deer Hill and Osgood School students surpassed even our fondest hopes by sending in over 60 entries in the Mariner Easter Contest!

Prizes were awarded Monday morning.

Amazingly, all artwork on this page came from Mrs. Collins' First Grade Class. That's because they followed the rules and didn't make their bunnies any larger than we requested and because the bunnies were so funny.

Judges had originally selected some artwork by students that just wouldn't reproduce and our art director ended up being the final judge afterall. She especially liked the bunny drawn by Alyson James. She said it had a lot of character.

DEER HILL FIRST PRIZES were awarded to Kate McNeill and Kathy Wood (that's Kathy with the saxophone). Both students are in fifth grade.

Wigmore's bucket truck left up in the air

By Tanna Kasperowicz

If you're reading the Mariner Wednesday night (April 9) and aren't at the third session of Annual Town Meeting (CHS auditorium, 7:30 p.m.) you're missing the hot-breaking news as it happens! Tune into WATD for instant relief or headaches.

Monday's session fully expected to clean up the remaining 19 articles on the warrant Wednesday, after leaving Stephen Wigmore's $36,000 bucket truck up in the air with a healthy vote, (126-57), but no quorum. At 11:20 p.m. 190 voters were present in the hall, 10 short of the number needed to take action.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark put voters on notice that selectmen would be asking for reconsideration of Article 20 Wednesday (selectmen's article asking that the police department be taken out of Civil Service) and other articles which were voted in excess of the governor's 4 per cent tax cap.

Chairman of the planning board, Patricia Facey, also put voters on notice that planning articles 27 and 28 would be reconsidered. Article 27 had been defeated on a hand vote by 96-160. Basically it deals with amending the zoning by-law by increasing area regulations on 3A. Article 28 was indefinitely postponed when Town Counsel Blake Thaxter advised voters it wasn't in fact a grandfather's clause, and engineer Edwin Young said in five years time 25 lots would not conform to the zoning by-law if nothing were done to the land.

Peter Laugelle said instead of the town promoting business, it would be defeating business. agreed that the $3,000 plus it might cost in legal fees and plans to go before the board of appeals would be prohibitive.

WILL THEY RECONSIDER TONIGHT? Officer Robert Jackson checks out Selectmen's Civil Service article.

Ms. Facey said the future of 3A was a serious concern of many residents, noting that presently 2,000 sq. ft. less is required for business than for residential property. She said businesses on 3A pay only 4 per cent of the town's tax bill, with larger plaza-type businesses paying substantially more than the many 3A businesses which contribute less than a home-owner.

Selectman Arthur Clark said he was against the article because it would gradually zone the small businessman out of town.

Planner's article 29 passed easily on a vote of 175-25 — it will amend the zoning by-law by offering constructive standards for common driveways serving three or more lots. Presently, this is done by covenants.

An article asking for the area regulations in the Downtown Business District to be increased from "no reg." to 5,000 sq. ft. and from 20 to 50 sq. st. frontage and width passed easily on a vote of 171-21. Ms. Facey noted the State presently requires the 5,000 sq. ft. lot size.

Planners also won their $64,787 topographical mapping of the town be aerial photogrammetrical procedure, more accurate than a good surveyor, according to Edwin Young.

Civil Service debated at all TM sessions

Last Saturday's first session of annual town meeting ended smack in the middle of a heated discussion on the selectmen's article to take Civil Service out of the police department — with no quorum left to vote at 5:05 p.m.

Monday's second session of annual town meeting began with some highlighting of the better remarks made Saturday pro and con the article, by Police Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge and Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark, ending on a split down the middle secret ballot vote of 156-156 (no action).

And voters expected to hear more on the issue at Wednesday's session.

At the first meeting Clark outlined in detail the process which selectmen would follow in hiring, firing and dealing with police issues without Civil Service. Although the advisory committee has recommended against the article, Monday, Clark spoke briefly of it being an economical move which could have impact on the advisory board's recommendation that a public safety committee be formed to study those areas of the budget which encompass the protection of persons and property — the idea that an overall examination may produce a new approach.

Fireman Jim Sharon spoke against the article, saying the plans were not detailed enough. Fireman Ralph Perroncello asked whether selectmen were going to be both judge and jury on police appointments and dismissals. He added he felt if the police department were taken out of Civil Service the Fire Department would be next to go.

Arthur Bilodeau said he felt if Civil Service were thrown out of the department the police department would return to "old politics again, like it was before Civil Service."

Also speaking against the article Saturday was Richard Conley, who said selectmen's motion on the article went on at length about what they would do to dismiss or punish a policeman, "But there's nothing in it to encourage good, young people to be on the police force."

Lieut. Stockbridge told voters the reason Civil Service was initiated by the state was because 'Everytime there was a change in administration in cities and towns police departments were overhauled

Essential spending

At the last two sessions of Annual Town Meeting voters responded willingly to requests for paint, repairs, new boilers and general fix-up articles, making few exceptions.

Their attitude is further reflected in the monthly building application permit log which shows money being spent for maintenance, energy-efficient projects and home repairs rather than the luxury items of yesteryear.

The Town Hall will get $30,000 for repairs, storm

Town Hall study & fire station lose

Gilbert Tower reflected the mood of voters when he said of the article requesting planning funds for the Town Hall renovation:

"I believe it's a mistake to put a lot of money into this old, obsolete town building. Leave it the way it is. It's a useful building, but don't spend any more money on it. This thing keeps coming up and coming up and you can't kill it. The more money we spend the more inflation — we've been called on to go slow.

An article requesting $30,000 for the installation of a new boiler at Town Hall, storm windows and general repairs passed on a voice vote.

When the land article for the proposed new fire station was defeated 99-194, an article for its construction funds was indefinitely postponed. Both Fire Chief Charles Pipenbrink and Lot Bates, chairman of the fire station study committee, attempted to convince voters of the rightness in consolidating present West End and Beechwood Stations in a modern 3A unit as an efficiency move.

VOTE 8-6 p.m. Saturday

Seven of the 17 town government offices up for election this year are being contested. Races will be on the school committee, with incumbents John Langmaid and Diana Kornet being challenged by Peter Trask and Jacqueline Dormitzer.

Incumbent Allen Weisenfluh is being challenged by Brian Wilkin for his seat on the board of assessors. And on the board of library trustees incumbent Barbara Power will try to hold her seat against George Haley, Lucia Woods and Joseph Barresi — there are three openings and four candidates.

Patrick Plante is challenging John Kornet, Jr. for a four-year term on the planning board. On the recreation commission incumbent Richard Ainslie is being challenged by James Gallagher.

Newcomers Nancy Snowdale and Marguerite Libby are both seeking one five-year term on the housing authority.

See responses to the League of Women Voters' questionnaire made by challenged candidates on Page 7 & 16 of the Mariner.

We have handled school committee candidates as a separate article through a combination of LWV interviews, comments made at Town Affairs Night and personal interview.

Cohasset's Week

TM resolution

Whereas Emily B. Gleason has completed 49 years as an outstanding Trustee of the Cohasset Free Public Library, and this year is not seeking reelection,

And whereas she has been an important factor in maintaining and improving the fine character of our town library, as well as guiding it toward its present modern condition,

Be it therefore resolved that we citizens of Cohasset here assembled at this Town Meeting to conduct the business of the Town, do hereby commend and truly thank her for focusing her vision, wisdom and humor on the well-being of Cohasset's library for these many years.

Bliss appointment

Health board members Marilyn Sweeney, Lynn Buckley recommended the appointment, and Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark and Henry Ainslie voted for Dr. Charles Bliss of Summer Street to fill a one year health board vacancy until 1981 town election.

Selectman Rocco Laugeile abstained from the vote.

Bliss is chief of the gastroenterology section of the division of medicine at Boston City Hospital. He replaced Dr. Roger Pompeo, who recently resigned from the board in the second year of a three-year term.

Banning dogs

Moderator David Place always has interesting quips and suggestions for voters throughout town meetings, and this annual was no exception when he advised selectmen should sprinkle in all warrants articles dealing with outlawing ownership of dogs, no drinking after 12 noon . . . in order to get people out and hold the quorum!

Good idea.

Assessments

Alfred Odermatt may have good reason to have voted against an article asking the town to appropriate a sum of $21,600 to revalue the real estate of the town to full value, as required by the state. We'd like to hear from him on this.

Nevertheless, the article passed 141-76. Assessor Warren Pratt said that sum, in addition to the $4,000 already budgeted, would correct every assessment in town to 50 per cent of marketable value and then factor the result and come up with a full value figure. Assessors and appraisers will do the work.

The assessor's consultant said the state has ordered the full valuation in order that property may be classified, afterwhich the town can tax industrial and commercial properties differently from residential properties. "If towns do not comply, an evaluation team from the State will be sent to do the work, with the cost taken off the cherry sheets."

A bargain

Voters dealt quickly with several articles on a special town meeting warrant last Saturday, voting $34,800 to fund deficiencies in town accounts mostly due to increased energy costs. But the meeting's most thrilling moment came when it learned selectmen had made a deal with Eastern Edison to pay half of the $701.69 billing for the disposal area from Jan. 1977-June 1979.

According to Selectman Arthur Clark, "Edison Electric discovered the meter wasn't working, it wanted $701.69 — the $350 is a compromise.

Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton, whose committee supported the compromise, said "We feel this may be a bargain."

TM budgets

Noting a few changes explained by William Signorelli, the first session of annual town meeting voted a $7,042,370 operating budget for general government, with $6,440,404 to be raised by taxation and $601,966 to be obtained by revenues to the town.

It was noted that $6,200,326 is the town's fiscal appropriation limit; $6,891,840 the levy limit (outside the four per cent tax cap), and $3,661,232 is the fiscal limit for school expenditures (the school budget was voted at $3,794,475 excluding energy).

Police and fire collective bargaining agreements were ratified by town meeting at 7.5 per cent — a $68,340 increase. The total increase for the amending of the personnel classification plan was $123,736.

Part time positions also received a 7.5 per cent increase.

Sail Club dinner benefit

A Seafood Gourmet dinner will be served by the Cohasset Sailing Club Hospitality Committee, Saturday, May 10 at St. Stephen's Church.

The proceeds from the dinner will go toward the purchase of new Cape Cod Mercuries, which will replace the present Widgeons.

These boats are used for the youth training program of the club. Tickets are available to members, prospective members, and anyone who is just interested in a night out and a fine meal. The program will include a short film on "The Tall Ships."

Tickets are $15 a person and reservations are necessary. Reservations can be made by sending a check to Cohasset Sailing Club Treasurer, Box 111, Cohasset, Mass. 02025.

Seating is limited so make reservations now. The deadline for the reservations is May 1. Checks should be made payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club Fleet Renewal Fund Dinner. This is tax deductible. Also phone Peter Conway 383-1621 if you have any questions.

John Maloney - dealing with the variables

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Nobody ever thought that John Maloney did not know the deck. But quite frankly, it irritated him to spend hours, weeks, months, wheedling votes out of his independent school committee.

And yes, damn it, attitudes and working conditions and support have always been the reasons a man stays with or leaves a job. Although we've only heard Maloney use the word "damn" once — at a school committee meeting.

Five years ago Maloney was hired by Cohasset to achieve peace and justice within a system that was chaotic, a declining school population, and, to deal with a community that had little and no rapport with the system.

He accomplished all that.

Dealing with all those variables involved a whole lot more than twisting arms and knocking heads together, though those gymnastics help. It involved the mastery of various details, an intuitive understanding of human nature and enough experience to know what arguments will move one man but not another, and precisely when to speak or be quiet.

He did it with diplomacy.

Maloney never thought he alone would find the answers to the school department's problems. He retained (and still does) the old faith that Total Cohasset will find the answers to its problems.

When Maloney first arrived in Cohasset his first job was to release staff from a lot of conflict. And he did this too. "There's a lot of pressure from the community for a teacher to produce. Youngsters are independent, creative. Staff has to create a caring, flexible attitude. Unfortunately, we're not a very relaxed school system," he lamented.

"There are absolutely brilliant, highly successful people who live here. We need to hear more from this group. We need that silent majority here. We need to hear more from this group. We need that silent majority to be advocates . . . to weave their way back into the system."

COMMITTEE

He agreed an even numbered school committee always has the potential to attract a split vote and attitude by its number. While he feels a five-member committee might have served the town and the system better over the past year, he said any committee with healthy attitude in attending to its business as policy-makers, rather than becoming involved in daily operations — can serve just as well, despite its numbers.

"The superintendent's job is the most embattled position in the public sector today. He's expected to be all things at all times — to solve all problems. But he can't control all factors.

"In the middle 60's it was the high school principal, challenged and disrupted by flower children. In the 70's that challenge shifted to the superintendent. With a declining school population there's a larger group of voters who no longer have children in school, who don't wish to fund school programs and who want a cutback in programs.

CHANGE AND CONTINUITY - School Supt. Dr. John Maloney offers residents some good advice before packing up to leave for a new position with the Sharon School Department. (Derr Photo).

Cohasset is result-orientated, Maloney said. "It is intolerant of transgressions of employees. But it is also a community which does have the ability to sustain high quality educational programs at a reasonable cost.

"My goal in Cohasset was to make the school department academically responsible. I've been promoting academic excellence throughout the last five years. But my major concern today is whether the town of Cohasset is still committed to quality education and is willing to fund it."

In analyzing the platforms of candidates for school committees over the past five years Maloney noted he mainly heard campaign slogans such as management efficiency and costs. "In few instances did I hear candidates wanted to do what's best for children."

In this past year there have been deliberate attempts to cut programs including art and music, increase class sizes, in spite of the fact "We have had a very definite plan of reducing staff in proportion of a decline in enrollment without adversely effecting academic programs.

"We've had no major layoff problems. When everything's put out front and staff knows — there are no problems. And that's a magical feat — to have accomplished this feat without rancor.

When Maloney first arrived, and even today, some segments of the community and the school committee operated under the recurring theme there was five per cent fat in the school budget.

"What has amazed most people is that the five per cent of the so-called fat is comprised of academics, athletics, transportation, food services and special education. In fact there isn't five per cent in a contingency — there never was. But the persistent rumor prevails. It's just impossible to root out because people want to believe it. Some opinions don't change in spite of facts."

Maloney has looked on Cohasset as a challenge . . . and in spite of the roadblocks, he feels his administration has been successful. "My prior background was in curriculum, budgets, applying skills and interpersonal communication abilities to energize people — all biggies.

"How would I like to be remembered? I'd like to be remembered as a man who established peace, effected highly respectable academic programs . . . one who tried to bring class, dignity and grace to the community."

He did it.

Maloney will begin his job as Superintendent of the Sharon school system in June.

Toothless Norfolk County

Assistant District Attorney Charles Hely has dealt with State Open Meeting Law charges against selectmen in his fashion . . . perhaps he has a better perspective from which to deal with it than we do from our insecular position in Cohasset.

Nevertheless, it appears the open meeting law lost a tooth or two in the process.

Who hired the Mariner to save the Republic?, you ask. No one. We initiated charges because democratic governments cannot be left to pass judgments on their own acts any more than the CHS Tennis Team can be allowed to call its own score.

Selectmen entered an executive session to discuss "personalities" of at least several candidates for intermittent police office. Their executive session minutes show they discussed qualifications for the job. Why wasn't that done in public?

Hely opines characters and reputations were discussed in that executive session and they rightfully should be discussed there. But in a phone interview two weeks ago he agreed selectmen had violated the statute by having not invited those individuals discussed to be present (with 48 hours written notice).

In his written opinion (this week's Mariner) he doesn't refer to that charge. Is there some reason this part of the open meeting law does not, afterall, apply to Cohasset selectmen?

Selectmen's minutes substantiate our opinion a portion of the executive session should have been in executive session. Hearing about selectmen's vote after the fact does little for us.

Neither did the DA answer our charge that Selectman Henry Ainslie violated a supplementary provision of the conflict of interest law (non-criminal) which states a municipal employee should not vote on an issue which could conceivably be thought to improperly influence him — or arouse the public's suspicion. We are told that other district attorneys and the Attorney General's office have used that statute in the public's defense.

Hely's opinion is preposterous that even if Selectman Ainslie had been in criminal conflict of interest he may have had to vote out of necessity (because Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark had abstained from voting on the first motion).

There is nothing in selectmen's minutes to suggest Selectmen Arthur Clark and Rocco Laugelle (with Ainslie abstaining) could not have reached an equitable agreement on the candidates to be selected.

Hely's quoting of case law does add an interesting perspective to the impending dire situation which will be encountered by the boards of health over the Fairman pony, April 14.

Feels privacy was violated

Letters

To the Editor:

A recent edition of The Mariner carried a letter from me which purported to be a letter to the editor. It was no such thing. It was, in fact, a private communication to a Mariner reporter, a personal note accompanying a press release.

In printing that private note, I believe, the Mariner reporter violated the most basic privacy of an individual, violated the right of an individual to express one's thoughts to another in complete privacy. I hope no Mariner reader will ever feel the kind of deep betrayal and sense of violation I have felt because of this.

I make no apology for the views I expressed in my note. Those views and my opinions were based on information I had at the time, information which was largely second-hand, information I would surely have checked for myself had I any intention of making my thoughts public. I am happy for the public trust that some of that information has been shown to be erroneous. My opinions as to certain editorials still stand.

And yet, I feel the Cohasset readers of The Mariner deserve some sort of explanation and assurance from me that I was not intruding, nor would I ever presume to intrude, into areas of strictly local concern. As someone who does not reside in Cohasset, I have no reason to participate in public debate or to voice un-asked-for opinions about local matters which are being dealt with through proper town channels.

When I am asked, or on district problems where I believe I have acquired some expertise, I will speak out publicly. I will do so with all the forcefulness, candor and intelligence I can muster. And I will do so, unmistakably, by addressing my letter clearly and formally, "To the Editor." There will be no doubt in anyone's mind as to my intention to make my views public.

As for this particular matter, I cannot express strongly enough my outrage and sense of repugnance at what I consider the reprehensible action of the Mariner reporter.

Stouffer asked for nuclear studies

To the Editor:

A letter from Caroline Stouffer accuses Representative Mary Jeannette Murray of not being truthful with respect to her votes on nuclear safety.

I suggest that Ms. Stouffer guard against such excessive respect for truth as to use it only sparingly — as for example in her statement that studies show increasing infant mortality around Three Mile Island or from weapons testing.

There are no valid studies by reputable authorities which could withstand peer review linking infant mortality to nuclear power or weapons testing.

There are only the unsupportable allegations by such as Sternglass, whose statements have been officially refuted by the Pennsylvania Department of Health.

Let Ms. Stouffer publish her list of studies so that I can point out the degree to which the standards of truth are met.

Very truly yours,
R.M. Campbell

Ainslie found not in conflict

To the Editor:

The following is our response to your written complaint that at a Cohasset Selectmen's meeting on March 19, 1980, Selectman Henry Ainslie voted on the appointment of a group of permanent intermittent police officers that included his nephew and his second cousin.

Mr. Ainslie has verified the basic facts and added that he is aware of the relationship but is not personally acquainted with the second cousin.

This office is responsible for enforcing certain criminal conflict of interest sections in G.L. c. 268A. Sections 18, 19 and 20 define criminal violations by municipal employees.

Section 19(a) states that it is a violation for a municipal employee to participate as such in a particular matter in which "his immediate family" has a financial interest. The definition of "immediate family" in G.L. c. 268A is expressly limited by Section 1 to "the employee and his spouse, and their parents, children, brothers and sisters."

It follows that a Selectman's vote on the appointment of a nephew or second cousin is not a violation of the criminal provisions of this act.

A second important factor in this case is that one of the other Selectmen had abstained from the votes in question, and if Selectman Ainslie had abstained the validity of a vote by only one participating member of a three member board would be open to question.

The Supreme Judicial Court has recognized that in some cases in similar circumstances "participation despite disqualification, under a rule of necessity" may be necessary and permissible. Graham v. McGrail, 370 Mass. 133 (1876). The rule of necessity issue need not be resolved in this case because the subjects of the vote were not members of the "immediate family" as defined in the statute.

We express no comment on the Selectman's participation in this vote other than our legal conclusion that G.L. c. 268A, § 19 was not violated.

Sincerely yours,
Charles J. Hely
Assistant District Attorney

Children's illustrator at Paul Pratt library

On April 16, at 3:15 p.m. Friends of the Cohasset Library will sponsor a program for children to celebrate National Library Week. Joan Drescher, author and illustrator of children's books, will present an hour long program for children in the fourth grade or older.

She will discuss how the illustrating is done and what is involved in putting together a book. She will do some illustrating on the spot and will answer questions from the audience.

She is currently teaching a course at Lesley College on writing and illustrating children's books.

Admission to the program will be free, but by ticket only. Tickets may be obtained at the library.

Open meeting violation found to be minor

To the Editor:

At the March 19, 1980, Cohasset Selectmen's Meeting, the Selectmen discussed and voted on selections for permanent intermittent police officers in closed session. The Selectmen have reported to this office the details of the discussions of each candidate. In each case the discussion concerned specific matters of character or reputation, rather than professional competence, and the discussions were thus a proper matter for executive session, G.L. c. 39, § 23B (1).

The votes, however, should have properly been conducted in open session. Selectman Ainslie, one of the participants, has admitted his error in this regard. The Selectmen report that they orally made public the actual voting that night shortly after the executive session. They also report that they have approved and made available to the public written records of the executive session vote. Without approving of the error, it appears to have been a procedural mistake rather than a substantive violation, and the prompt oral and written disclosure of the vote seems to be an adequate remedy in the circumstances. It is expected that more careful attention to the procedural requirements of the Open Meeting Law will be the result of this experience.

Sincerely yours,
Charles J. Hely
Assistant District Attorney

Invasion of the family

(ED.'S NOTE: The following article is one of many testimonies recently given at the Brockton Massachusetts Hearing on Families which will be used to select delegates for the White House Conference on the Family.

The testimonies will be used as recommendations to develop a state and national policy for the diversification of family styles.)

By Nancy O'Toole

All over this country today, a growing number of men and women like myself have had it.

We've had it with soaring taxes. Had it with government waste. Had it with street crime. With runaway welfare. With being told how to raise our own children. And unless I miss my guess, you too are angry and worried.

Today many parents are so busy trying to give their children what they did not have, that they don't have time to give them what they did have.

Why does our government want to get involved with the family? This is an invasion of our privacy, problems by spending more tax dollars, when the best and only solution is teaching morals, abstinence and self control.

Why are we initiating program after program such as the "International Year of the Women," subsidized to the tune of eight million of our tax dollars, to promote Gay Rights and Abortion?

Next was the "International Year of the Child," designed to encourage our children to have their own "Bill of Rights," giving them freedom to contradict what are their parents' morals and religious beliefs.

Now we as taxpayers are asked by the government to re-interpret Websters Dictionary and our English language by redefining the word FAMILY for President Jimmy Carter and the "White House Conference on the Family." Why?

We should stop all this nonsense of spending our hard earned dollars which tax our freedoms away.

The slogan the people of this nation must adapt to halt the errosion of our God-given rights is "The more the government does for you, the less you are going to be able to do for yourself."

Stand up and be counted.

Why does our government figure that they can do things better for us than we can personally do for ourselves?

Why are we passing laws that are an invasion of our freedoms, laws teaching our children to contradict God's 10 commandments?

Government is passing laws that teach our children to use contraceptives, and if caught, the taxpayers will pay for this promiscuity. Government is encouraging this great nation and its people to live like animals in a jungle.

Why is this nation legalizing the murder of millions of unborn infants, and then subsidizing millions of dollars for test tube babies?

minutes show qualifications discussed in closed session

[ED.'S NOTE: The following are the selectmen's executive session minutes of March 19.]

Following a unanimous vote to go into executive session, resumes and notes taken during personal interviews were reviewed on all eleven (11) applicants.

Selectman Ainslie expressed the opinion that members of the auxiliary police force, as a Board sponsored activity, should receive consideration for their training, experience and years of devotec service to the community without pay.

He further stated that they were by far the most qualified and already have obtained at their own expense the required training, consisting of Police Combat and Criminal Justice Training Council programs, to exercise powers of arrest.

He suggested that an equitable basis for selection within criteria set forth in Civil Service Form 16, Part II would be to select the highest ranking veteran, the highest ranking non-veteran, the highest ranking auxiliary police officer, the other two auxiliary police officers in order of experience and finally the only experienced veteran.

Chairman Clark indicated that he had already gone on public record as favoring selection in numerical order regardless of experience, except for the second named whom he considered to be a non-resident.

Mr. Ainslie suggested that in the eyes of civil service all applicants are residents even though the two top persons on the list have since moved to Scituate and Weymouth respectively.

Selectman Laugelle said that he favored preference for veterans and auxiliaries in order of their ranking and moved that the following persons be appointed: Cogill, David C.; Ainslie, Daniel F.; Connor, Edward R.; Small, John H.; Yocum, Richard; and Ainslie, Lawrence D.

Chairman Clark said that his position was unyielding whereupon Mr. Ainslie seconded Mr. Laugelle's motion.

Chairman Clark called for a vote and the motion carried with Messrs. Laugelle and Ainslie voting in favor and Mr. Clark abstaining.

Upon motion by Mr. Ainslie, seconded by Mr. Laugelle, it was unanimously voted to return to open session and announce the results of the vote to the public and press in attendance.

Town Hall

The advisory committee and capital budget committee both recommended against the move, saying they did not feel the quantity or quality of fire services would be improved.

James Lagrotteria, advisory committeeman, stressed to voters his committee would probably not recommend the station even 10 years in the future. Richard Avery of the capital budget said his committee also was willing to get by with less fire protection than to incur an additional expense at the present time.

"In 1980 capital budget itmes will amount to $385,000. In 1981 they will amount to $495,000 — by 1986 items will total $660,000 — and that sum includes articles recommended by capital budget," Avery said.

Pipenbrink's statement that a new pumper truck (standard size) would not fit into the Beechwood Station had no effect on voters, who defeated the article promptly.

Charles Zimmerman said he opposed the new fire station, recommending voters invest funds in fire prevention. Herbert Towle spoke in favor of the article.

Unfortunately, a $22,000 amount proposed to repair the Beechwood and West Corner stations on the outside was defeated on a voice mainly because opponents felt it was not enough money to put even a dent into the deteriorating condition.

"You can gold plate the Beechwood Fire Station — it still won't hold a fire truck," Lot Bates said. Fireman James Fiori asked why no member of the advisory or capital budget committees had visited the fire station sites. "No one has come up there to see where I work." with the new broom. I can't predict what will happen 5-10 years from now when the present men aren't there," he said, adding he sympathized with selectmen and the bureaucracy they had to deal with.

Civil service

"In 25 years only three men have been brought up on charges in the Cohasset Police Department. Two men were discharged, I am sure they will not be brought back into the department. Civil Service does have provisions for getting rid of men, if rules and regulations are followed," Stockbridge added.

He said he felt Civil Service would take the incentive for men to study, go to school, to achieve to be the chief in the department. Also, Stockbridge said when the chief's position was taken out of Civil Service it was a cruel blow to many officers, including himself.

around town

☐Leonard Flaherty of Pleasant Street was awarded first prize for his acrylic painting titled "First Promise of Spring" in a juried show at the Norwell Art Association. Exhibition of the show will continue through the month of April at the Norwell Public Library.

Flaherty is a sixth grade teacher in Scituate and a classical guitarist. Several of his paintings are currently on display at the David Sharpe Gallery on Main Street.

☐Philip Arbury, age 7, recently donated a very special birthday gift of his to the town — an American flag that was first raised at the Capitol.

Philip's father, James Arbury, received the flag from U.S. Senator Donald Riegle, D-Michigan, for whom he works, and gave it to his son for a birthday present. Philip, who had noticed that the flag on the Cohasset Common was tattered and worn out, presented his flag to Selectmen last week.

His gift was gratefully acknowledged by Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark. Thank you, Philip, for your generosity and thoughtfulness.

☐The parishioners of the First Unitarian Church are also looking after our historic common again this spring. They will be taking turns collecting Sunday morning "offerings" of trash and litter from the common, which is already showing signs of spring litter bugging.

Their diligent pick ups throughout the months of April and May did make a difference last year!

Will anyone else's actions make a positive difference??

☐Sarah and Kristen Linsley, the first place finishing pair among the women in last week's Cohasset-By-The-Sea Road Race, ran the course in 35:42 minutes. The sisters are from Cohasset, daughters of John Linsley of Nichols Road, Cohasset High School graduates and seasoned and successful road racers.

Sarah finished first among the women in Cohasset's race the last three years also; took first place just the weekend before last in the Lexington to Cambridge road race; finished 18th in the last Bonnie Bell road race, and that's not bad considering she holds a full-time job and is getting ready to enter law school! She graduated from Harvard in 1979 where she was captain of the women's track and cross country team.

Kristen, currently in her sophomore year at Harvard and, like her sister, a master miler on the track and cross country team, is studying fine arts.

After deciding not to compete with each other in last week's race, they decided to win! What sisterly rivalry doesn't accomplish, sibling determination will!

☐Margaret Lee Stewart of 469 Beechwood St. was honored on March 25 at the fourth annual ceremony sponsored by the Phi Beta Kappa Committee of Suffolk University to recognize its summa cum laude graduates.

Stewart received her bachelor of science degree from Suffolk in June 1979 in the field of sociology. (A summa cum laude designation means that the student has maintained a cumulative grade average of between 3.8 to 4.0).

☐Carl Van Etten of Jerusalem Road has been appointed manager of manufacturing for the Hingham-based Merriman Division of Litton Industrial Products (makers of Lubrite, Powdered metal and textile rings and ring holders). Van Etten, who with his family has lived in Cohasset for four years, was formerly with Franklyn Industries of Stoughton.

☐Laurens MacLure of 183 Sohier St. was recently elected to the Blue Cross Board of Directors. He is the President and Chief Executive Officer of the New England Deaconess Hospital; a trustee of Wheelock College; Corporator of Provident Institute for Savings; and Director of Controlled Risk Insurance Company. He is married and the father of four children.

☐Interior designer Philip H. Smith has been chosen for the fifth year in a row by the Junior League of Boston to decorate a main area in their major fund raising activity, the "Decorators Show House and Garden Tour."

This year's showhouse is located at the I. Tucker Burr estate at 175 Milton Street, Milton and will run from April 28 to May 18.

Mr. Smith, who is a member of the American Society of Interior Designers and owner of Creation Interiors on Depot Street, will do a family room in this year's Showhouse. It will incorporate the energy saving "Count Rumford" fireplace and feature bronzes by Cohasset's prominent animal sculptor, Richardson White.

Mr. Smith advises show-goers to go in the early morning or late evening of the first week and to purchase advance tickets (available at his shop) for $5 each, a $1 saving from the door price. The house will be on tour Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 8:30 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m.

EASTER EGG HUNTERS at Deer Hill School relax after a trying two-minute tramp through the grasses after goodies. L-r it's 4-yr. old Coleen Fitzsimmons, 4-yr. old Katie Brennock and our photographer says 5-yr. old Heather Brennock but the Brennocks look like twins.

☐Ellery Clark, a lifelong summertime native of Cohasset, and the only historian ever to have written three books on the history of one baseball team — the Boston Red Sox — will be honored by a special article in the April 21 issue of Sports Illustrated. His contributions to the scholarly written and oral history of American professional baseball will be recognized in the SI article, authored by staff writer Jim Kaplan.

Professor Clark, a retired U.S. Naval Academy History Professor, is a director of Boston's Northeastern University's World Series Room, trustee of the Boston Museum of Sports, member of both the North American Society for Sport History and the Society for American Baseball Research. He has written Red Sox Forever, Boston Red Sox: 75th Anniversary History, and Red Sox Fever, published last summer. He caught the "fever" in 1924 when he was 14 years old.

He will be active this summer during the 350th anniversary of the City of Boston, particularly in the honors to be accorded the memory of the Boston Athletic Association's 1896 Olympic team, of which his father was a prominent member, and of Boston's baseball champions, dating back to the famous Red Stockings of 1872. He'll be back in Cohasset early in June.

☐Congratulations to Caroline Lord who placed fifth in the 12 and 13 girls' category in the Buddy Werner Ski League Championship Races at Pat's Peak earlier this month.

☐Lisa Kurtz, Eric Hurtig and Philip Trask will play with the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble in Doric Hall at the State House on Wednesday, April 16 from noon to 1 p.m. The program is free and the public is invited! The ensemble plays under the auspices of the New England Conservatory Extension Division and is comprised of 60 outstanding high school musicians who represent schools from across the state.

☐Spencer Langford was recently presented with the Boston-Meehan Agency of Mutual of New York (MONY) Man of the Year award for achievements in sales, professional growth and community involvement.

☐Many thanks to Chet Ellis of Tower Lane and formerly of New Jersey, for ably taking over Around Town while I left town.

WHAT IS GUM DISEASE?
If placque is not removed at least daily, it accumulates and bacteria in the placque produce substances which irritate the gum tissues. Eventually the tissues pull away from the teeth, leaving deep pockets that become filled with bacteria and pus.
Among the warning signs of gum disease are: 1. Bleeding of gums; 2. Persistent bad breath; 3. Soft, swollen or tender gums; 4. Loose teeth; 5. Gums shrinking away from teeth; and 6. Any change in the spaces between teeth or in the way teeth come together.

School committee candidates rap on education

School Committee candidates had an opportunity to expound upon their goals, priorities and qualifications for the office they seek in Saturday's election at last week's League of Women Voters Town Affairs Night and the Osgood Communications Council meeting.

Incumbents Jack Langmaid and Diana Kornet, and challenger Jackie Dormitzer answered questions from small, but interested audiences. Peter Trask, who is also an announced candidate for one of the two three year vacancies, did not respond in person or in writing to either forum.

Jack Langmaid, who is running for his second three year term, feels "continuity and stability of the school committee are desirable at any time, but essential when a major administration change is imminent."He is the current chairman of the committee, was secretary last year and is an active volunteer in the schools.

All candidates agreed that the most important job in the next few months will be the selection of a new superintendent. Langmaid will be looking for an educational leader and an initiator of curriculum who will, hopefully, be acceptable to all factions in town.

He feels there is "no question that Dr. John Maloney is leaving because of the difficulty in working with the present school committee where he has suffered more than his share of difficulties and harrassments." (Maloney has accepted the job of Superintendent of Schools for the town of Sharon, beginning on July 1).

Langmaid adds that Maloney found himself in a system with declining enrollment and fiscal conservatism, and warns that it is going to be difficult to find a qualified superintendent to replace Maloney.

Kornet, the parent of three children in the school system, a former teacher and active school volunteer, says that the "school committee must learn a lesson from the fact that we lost Superintendent Maloney to another town for a change in working conditions." She would like to see the committee put forth positive and helpful attitudes toward a new administrator.

Kornet has been disturbed by the ineffective functioning of the committee due to its six member make-up and plans to insert an article in the next town warrant to change the number from six to five, whether or not she is re-elected. The six member committee, often divided down the middle, has wasted many hours and tied the administrator's hands, Kornet said.

Dormitzer, parent of two school children and a professional writer and editor of college textbooks, wants to see a strong leader chosen as superintendent; one who will be committed to the maintenance of a first-rate teaching staff, and one who will find new teachers who "really like kids." She would like to see the school system be more responsive to the needs of the children.

Langmaid wants to see the school committee spend more time on policy development leaving curriculum and educational ideas to the superintendent and his administrators. He and Kornet agree that student members of the school committee would not have the time or energy necessary to devote to the job, but they welcome their participation at meetings.

Langmaid spoke against the idea of students being involved in executive sessions because most of the administration are not privy to those discussions.

Dormitzer would like to see a boy and girl from the student body sit on the school board because she feels students can give you the "straight story; they're less removed than parents, administrators." However she said they might have to be excluded from executive sessions dealing with sensitive matters.

Langmaid and Kornet both felt the disappointment over the malaise in trying to implement a health education curriculum, but are pleased that steps are now underway towards that end.

Establishment of a comprehensive health education program from grade K through 12 is a high priority of Kornet's. She assures parents that the curriculum will have a much broader spectrum than just sex education, which she adds, is not intended to replace education in the home.

Dormitzer likes the way the proposed health education program is being handled and is in favor of its goals. She feels parent's desires have to be respected and if they don't want their children to be involved, they shouldn't have to be.

The only conspicuous point of disagreement between the candidates occurred when Dormitzer said elementary teachers who have some strengths in the areas of art and music ought to be asked to teach in those areas.

Kornet disagreed strenuously. She said art and music specialists play a very important role and that classroom teachers would be overburdened if they had to fill in these areas. She said any move in that direction would send art and music programs "down the tubes."

Dormitzer said in a phone interview while she supports art and music programs, she would still like to see teachers' areas of strengths utilized more in the future.

'My Sister Eileen' arrives the end of April

Anyone who has ever thought that beautiful women have it easy should be brought to see The Cohasset Dramatic Club's Spring Production of 'My Sister Elieen'! This loveable comedy was written by Joseph Fields and Jerome Choderov, based on the stories of Ruth McKenney.

Directed by John Michael Mallon and produced by Jane A. Marshall, the cast includes Carol Augustyniak as Ruth, Linda O'Donnel as Eileen and featuring: Bob Julian, Thom Carroll, Kerry Crehan, Eddy Fee, Wayne Miessner, Betty Miessner, George Donovan, J. Arnold Nickerson, Roberta Raffa, Peter Tolman, Clover O'Toole, Nan Hamacher, Ron Massa and many, many others.

Originally staged in the forties, this production has been updated to the liberated eighties. It is the story of two sisters who have come to New York to launch their careers. Ruth, the elder sister, is a writer, and although she is a very attractive woman in her own right, lacks confidence in that area, believing that while she got the brains in the family, her sister got the looks. (An easy out!)

As it turns out, Eileen is no more unintelligent than Ruth is unattractive. Eileen does have a tendency though, to be a bit naive in the ways of the city, and takes any man at his word when he offers to help her acting career.

She also seems to be unable to avoid collecting strings of unsolicited admirers when she goes about her innocent travels. Eileen looks up to her more wordly sister, and is sensitive to her insecurities and dismisses all this attention with a shrug.

It is interesting to note, that in updating the play, very few changes were required in the text, (aside from any prices mentioned!) leaving one to reflect that whether it's 1940 or 1980, the basic challenges and dilemmas faced by the young single career woman are much the same now as then: self-confidence, facing discouragements and frustrations, and the eternal abundance of unwanted male attention, and never enough of the right kind!

Performance dates are April 24, 25, 26, 8 p.m., Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are $3 at the door. For information, 383-0490.

Spring's in the air. . . CATCH IT!

windows, insulation. Central Fire and Police Stations on Elm Street will have $6,500 for general repairs and storm windows.

Selectmen will get three badly needed chairs for their office (hopefully the press will get their old chairs) and 200 new chairs will be ordered for the Town Hall auditorium.

Selectman Henry Ainslie rightly noted that the present Town Hall chairs have not only outlived their usefulness, but are dangerous. At almost every play the Cohasset Dramatic Club produces one or two of the audience is folded into the chair — ending up in an embarrasing position on the floor.

Also voted was $5,700 for repairs and renovation of the heating system in the police and fire station, $21,092 for the resurfacing of streets in the town, $15,000 for resurfacing streets with bituminous concrete and $38,000 from stabilization funds for a front-end loader. The last expenditure was recommended by capital budget and the advisory committee.

Seven thousand five hundred dollars will be spent to rehabilitate the walls at Cunningham Bridge — a high tide water washes through the stone.

And $9,000 will be raised through taxation for dredging at Lawrence Wharf. Presently, there is only a 3.8-4.6 ft. depth. Dredging will restore a 6-ft. depth at the wharf.

Also voted was $1,000 by taxation for reinstalling the old police radios in vehicles

Children are the real symbol of Spring

By Lois Martin

He strode into my office with the remnants of tears still making tracks down his cheeks. He was less than two feet tall, dressed in a red jacket. And he had shiny, clean blond hair that formed its own style around his face.

We looked at one another and it was I who began the conversation. I asked him if he'd seen spring yet. His brown eyes immediately assumed an optimistic expression and he pursued the discussion.

PATCHES

His name was Jacob. He vowed he was four years old. I said I didn't believe him. He turned out to be a smart two and a half, whose mother, attending to business in the next room had refused to allow him to dance on the office counter.

That would be enough to depress anyone. But the mention of spring brightened Jacob's day. And he brightened mine.

He has seen a bird, he said, a green one. He settled on the size of a boulder in describing the bird and proceeded to demonstrate how the bird sang. Jacob and I, we were delighted with the description and encouraged by his early, though magnified reports of the swell season's coming.

It was moments after he left that I realized I'd been talking with too many adults. I'd become jaded, innured to the good stuff. So I set out to find truth and light, spring, through the eyes of those who see most clearly, small children.

I stopped by a preschool, just for a moment in a busy day, because we sometimes feel we need to justify spending time learning from children.

Robbie was there. He's four for sure. He's seen flowers, blue ones, and a bird, a blue one, and he's been riding on his bike (blue) with training wheels. And he has a baseball cap that has no business being in town because it's for the Atlanta Braves, with a blue visor. Fortunately, Robbie sometimes reverts to riding his old trike, yellow.

Kristen says she saw a small bird singing in a tree. That's where she also saw skunks but they don't sing, she notes. They merely run up trees. Skunk and squirrels after all are tough to discern from one another for a while.

Trina says plants are up, marigolds. And she's seen leaves coming. Chris, who looks a good deal like the old-fashioned label on a Campbell's soup told me he was going to get real bunnies for Easter. Looking at freckle-faced, mischievous Chris, I had this overwhelming premonition that the bunny was in for a busy Easter. So we discussed the bunnies and how carefully they have to be handled, and his eyes lit up some more.

Thomas (he corrected a friend who called him "Tommy") mentioned grass. Someone else spoke of the sun shining in. In another roomful of these wee people in mini jeans, tiny striped sneakers, and delicate bows and blouses I asked if they'd seen spring yet, and like a grand chorus of flowers that bloom all at once, they smiled and agreed in unison, that they have seen spring.

But better than that. They are spring. They are the field of May violets, the budding leaves, the pasture filled with lively colts, the litter of kittens tumbling over one another in pursuit of a ball of yarn.

They are the rebirth, the Easter of our society, the hope of the harvest. And, like Chris and the bunnies, we must be very very careful how we handle them. Because they are as precious as spring itself.

Tax tips

"Should I keep a copy of my state tax and federal (IRS) returns before I mail them in?" asked a caller to Citizen Information Service.

"By all means," replied CIS' "For two very good reasons. First you should keep all of your own tax records for a minimum of three years. Second, it's possible your return may be lost in transit, in which case you would be required to file another return. So you'd want to be able to copy your original return."

Both state and Federal returns must be filed on or before Tuesday, April 15. Returns filed after midnight on that date may be subject to a penalty unless explicit provision to file a late return has been made.

Many taxpayers already have filed and some received refunds. For those who have not, CIS emphasizes a few points that should prove helpful in preventing common errors:

- All Federal IRS returns, both with tax due and expecting refunds, should be sent to the IRS at 310 Lowell St., Andover, Ma. 05501.
- All state returns where refunds are anticipated should be mailed to: Mass. Income Tax Bureau, P.O. Box 7000, Boston, Ma. 02204.
- If a tax is due, send return (properly signed, dated and with all withholding forms attached) with check or money order payable Commonwealth of Massachusetts to Mass. Income Tax Bureau, P.O. Box 7003, Boston, Ma. 02204.
- If, as a state taxpayer, you claim a credit on your 1979 estimated income tax, mail Form 1 to: Mass. Income Tax Bureau, P.O. Box 7017, Boston, Ma. 02204.

"I want to pay in person," declared one caller. "What shall I do?"

If filing and paying in person, take your completed, signed return with all required forms and check or money order to Bureau of Collections on the third floor (Room 302) of the Saltonstall State Office Building, 100 Cambridge St., Boston, in Government Center or to any of these closest to Norwell.

PSAT's—SAT's—foul or fair??

By Gwen Smith

Uxorious, animadversion, rapacious, fecund. These are just a few of the words found by students who take the college boards, exams such as the PSAT's, SAT's, advanced placement exams, and other admissions tests. Most of these exams are written and controlled by the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, New Jersey.

Ninety million lives have been affected by the data collected by the ETS. Two and one half million students per year take these exams to help determine who gets accepted by the most selective colleges.

This familiar process has recently become controversial. The question is who does well on these exams? is it the brightest kids or is it the most expensively educated kids?

These standardized tests, according to William Angoff, the ETS vice-president, "pick out people because of their individual likelihood to succeed." This statement assumes that intelligence and ability can be measured, and that the best qualified students, as measured by these exams, should go to the best colleges, and later should occupy the top jobs.

The standardized tests, the test-makers emphasize, do not measure innate intelligence, but rather developed ability.

Several groups are attacking the tests on the grounds that they are culturally biased.

"Standardized tests are used from the cradle to the grave, to select, reject, stratify, classify, and sort people, and they are used in ways that keep certain segments of the population from realizing their aspirations.

Most of all, they limit the access of blacks and other minorities to higher education." says Gerda Seele, of the NAACP. Yet the studies indicate that the bias is not so much racial as economic: a direct ratio exists between a student's score and a student's mean family income.

The tests, according to research, measure exposure to upper middle class culture, more specifically the culture of the professional class of the east coast. A score of 500 on the SAT's in a poor Mississippi town might indicate more brains, though a poorer background, than a score of 650 in a suburb of New York. "Tests may measure aptitude of achievement within populations that share backgrounds, but they do not measure accurately across backgrounds," says James Loewen, a sociologist at Catholic University.

Many professors are horrified at the idea of "leveling" the exams. They say that such a change will damage the universities. "If these standards fall nothing else will stand."

The question that faces ETS now is should the tests be changed so that able poor or black children could excel? If the tests are changed so that they are oriented towards a lower-class culture, the scores will be much less significant, since a good score will not necessarily mean that the student is capable of meeting the intellectual demands of a good university.

Epidemic hits CHS seniors

By David McCarthy

Doctors have recently discovered a new epidemic sweeping through CHS. One may observe the symptoms of this disease in a senior's natural habitat, the Senior "Study" Hall. Most members of the twelfth grade have fallen victim to this disease, commonly known as Senioritis. In diagnosing the disease, doctors have identified the symptoms as follows. It seems to affect persons in their final year of high school, especially after the first semester is completed.

The most obvious symptom is the acute aversion to homework. This is especially apparent in students that carry a heavy workload. (But then again, what students don't?)

Excessive time spent in the Senior "Study" Hall and the courtyard is a sure indication of Senioritis. This time spent in the "Study" Hall results in a lack of time spent in classes, especially gym class, where many seniors may not recognize their instructor's face.

One benefit of this disease is extreme class unity, especially on weekend nights down at Sandy Beach, where there are several parking spaces reserved for members of the senior class. Unity of the senior class is also evident in that the class began a countdown to the end of the year beginning on October 1st.

The increase of weekday business at the Donut Tree has been attributed to Senioritis. However, this has not been confirmed by the doctors.

If you recognize any of these symptoms in yourself, doctors say there is no hope: the disease is incurable except for the remedy of a freshman year in college. Doctors also fear that this disease may spread to the class of '81.

(Editorial Note: The author of this article, a senior, is on three-day suspension for cutting classes.)

Poll reveals athletic alternatives

Recently, the Cohasset School Committee voted to ban all sports between Hull and Cohasset. The Lamplight took a student poll and received the following results:

78% of the students polled played at least one season of a sport.

82% of the students polled said that the school committee made the wrong decision when they cancelled Hull-Cohasset sports.

90% of the students polled stated there could have been other alternatives.

Some of the suggestions the students made were:

- the teams could play on a neutral site.
- punish individuals, not both student bodies.
- prohibit fans; permit just parents.
- join another league.
- play games during the weekday, as opposed to weekends.
- add more police.

Many of the students expressed a fear that by cancelling athletic competition, hostilities would only build up. One student said, "It would be better to have the head-knocking confined to the playing field, than have us take out our rivalries during rumbles and senseless fighting."

The majority of the students feared that by avoiding games with Hull there would be no way to win the league championship. Another student said, "By stopping sports with Hull, the school committee is avoiding the problem. The problem is not with the athletes, but with others with too much time on their hands. So why should the athletes be the ones to be punished?"

After learning of the strong student opposition, the school committee reconsidered, and voted to postpone their verdict until the end of the school year. Until then, we (Cohasset) will still be permitted to compete with Hull. By postponing their decision, hasn't the school committee just avoided the careful, well-thought reconsideration of the problem that should have occurred the first time?

Spring has sprung...the grass is riz...

By Caroline Wampole

"Spring has sprung, the grass has riz..." a first grader chants tonelessly, swinging his metal lunchbox in time with his feet. The sky is blue, the thermometer reads forty degrees, and the first crocuses are tentatively unfolding themselves in the weak but warm sun.

It's really spring! Winter is gone and spring is here! No more ominously dark skies or winter winds, no more down parkas or short days. no more sunlamps or Bahama vacations — this is the real thing baby! We're right around the corner from water-skiing, watermelon, and white-water canoeing. From now on we'll be drinking ice water, not skating on it!

Oh, but isn't the feeling of spring just great? Why else would Geoffrey Chaucer so beautifully write: "Whan thatApril with his shores sote..." and why else would e.e. cummings describe spring as "mud-luscious" and "puddle-wonderful" if it were not, indeed, something to be greatly enjoyed?

Perhaps the greatest thing about spring is that it is in direct contrast with winter. Winter is as synonomous with death as spring is with life, and therefore we celebrate spring as a season of rebirth. If spring came after summer or after autumn, it would not have nearly as much impact as it does coming after winter. We could never get through the dreadful New England winters (though this one was pretty mild) without the hopes of the first Red Sox game, the first short-sleeved shirt, and the first popsicle. (And for many, first love).

Of course, along with spring come houseflies and mud and tedious garden chores...not to mention sweaty classrooms and college replies (hopefully, not rejections!) as well as clothes that don't fit after a winter of munching, and summer job hunts...and as the temperature increases, so do tempers, as well as air-conditioning costs...Listen, you better enjoy spring now — it won't be long 'till we're all wishing it was winter again!

Junk food junkies abound at CHS

By Philip Trask

Food from the CHS cafeteria is detested by many who have no real foundation for such prejudiced opinions.

Those students are the ones who pile into cars and go roaring out to a fast food stand during lunch, or wait until 2 p.m. to devour great amounts from the family refrigerator.

Although one may hear of many seemingly feasible reasons to not eat in the cafeteria, the food served there is really rather tasty, very nourishing, and astonishingly economical!

The menu is attacked for various reasons. Most often students focus on the hamburger, calling it many derogatory names such as a patty of mud peeled from the bottom of the janitors' work boots.

Some people are unaware that the hamburger is only offered as an option from the scheduled meal of fish, chicken or any other main course which appears daily. To CHS food-haters, only the hamburgers and cheeseburgers exist day-after-day.

"Hey, look! Hamburger again! Didn't they have 'cheeseburg a la mode' just yesterday?"

"I think so. No, maybe it was 'scrambled hamburg' yesterday. Who cares? Let's head for McDonalds! (or Burger King).

IT'S ALIVE!

This conversation can be heard at the door of the cafeteria nearly every day the hamburger option is offered. Sometimes somebody will comment, "Look! Your burger is still breathing! Quick! Stab it with your fork!"

Ironically, when school food-hating students reach McDonalds they order a Big Mac, the super burger, for about 300 percent the cost of an entire school lunch, which the U.S. Food & Drug Administration guarantees for a healthy diet.

In school, a fruit, vegetable, or salad is included in the meal, which only costs 40 cents. Also with every school lunch, a pint of milk is served — white, low-fat or chocolate.

At McDonalds kids buy carbonated sodas or sugary strawberry shakes. A shake, supposedly made with ice cream, really consists of a sweet syrup mixed with lots of flour. Obviously, the average fast food restaurant is incomparable to the school cafeteria in aspects of economy and nutrition.

STILL MUNCHING

At home the school food-haters don't fare much better, although nutrients are available.

Since no parent is usually home from work yet, the student raids the refrigerator, all the cupboards and the cookie jar, rapidly consuming everything that's sweet. After muching, no appetite remains in the adolescent, therefore he rarely eats nutritious, real food.

Usually the parents never find out, and they continue spending an astronomical amount on groceries. The money they give their son or daughter for a week's meals goes into a weekend party fund, the purchase of new albums, or a single munch at McDonalds.

To be sure, the judgment of food quality at CHS is unfair. Teachers as well as students contribute to the rumors.

After returning from eating the lasagna, one teacher advises his impressionable, young class to notify the health department if he keels over in mid-lecture. He even compares CHS food to dog food as a joke.

Such humor may be misinterpreted by junior high kids, and it also may serve to strengthen the prejudice of older students.

Despite any of the rampart gossip degrading meals in the CHS lunch room, it is generally superior to the "munchies" found at fast-food places, and the price is surely an aid to a family budget with today's inflation.

The wall—a solid success

By Jon Durant

"So ya thought ya might like to go to the show. To feel the warm thrill of confusion, that space cadet glow..."

So begins "The Wall," Pink Floyd's latest masterpiece. Unfortunately, the radio stations have done the one thing they should not have done — overplayed it. Like Knack, this album is definitely contending for Hype of the year. Unlike the Knack, "The Wall" is worth the airplay.

Now back to the idea of the affair. "The Wall" is another Pink Floyd effort without the intensity of previous attempts. In the early 1970's, the Floyd had a hit with the "Dark Side of the Moon." Despite the pressure a musician is under to create another hit, the Floyd survived and the album achieved huge success. (It's still on many charts for top L.P.'s sold).

After freaking out the world with inflated pigs, dogs, and sheep fleated around the stadiums, they finally have reaced their original status (of "Dark Side of the Moon"), and then some. Courtesy of the radio and press, they've become one of the biggest things in rock since Elvis.

Musically, "The Wall" is the Floyd's most varied work, with everything from the disco-ish "Run Like Hell" to the Van Helenish "Young Lust," not to mention the typical Floyd in "Comfortably Numb." Somehow, however, it appears that they've concentrated more on producing a big show from the album then a good musical effort.

With a few exceptions, "The Wall" consists of many mediocre songs and a few great ones, but that's up to the listener. After all, "We don't need no education..."

Notes and Quotes ...

The second annual North-South Invitational Jazz Festival will be held at the Cohasset High School Auditorium on Thursday evening, April 10 starting at 5 p.m. The event is free to the general public.

The competition aspects of the festival will feature the jazz ensembles from Stoneham, Somerville, North Reading, Bridgewater-Raynham, Oliver Ames, Duxbury and Cohasset High Schools. Judges for the event will be George Brambilla of Melrose, Dr. Donald Bastarache of Westfield St. College and Ted Casher of the University of Rhode Island. Citations for outstanding musicianship will be awarded to deserving players by the judges.

The musical highlight of the evening will be the appearance of the "Medium Rare" big band from the New England Conservatory of Music. This unit, led by composer-arranger Pat Hollenbeck, has just returned from a series of mid-western concerts and performances including the Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival, which they won.

They previously had won the event in 1977 and 1978. In addition, they were a featured group at the NAJE National convention at Miami and have made numerous appearances in and around the greater New England area to much critical aclaim.

Refreshments will be sold by members of the Cohasset Band with all proceeds going towards the band's annual Spring trip.

The CHS Debating Team won several awards in the South Shore League Debate Tournament held at Silver Lake Regional High School on Wednesday, March 26. This was the first time Cohasset entered a team in the South Shore Debating League in the past three years.

Junior Philip Dormitzer won two speaker awards. Also, Sophomore Sue Bird won a speaker award. Meanwhile, the Affirmative Team of Seniors, Philip Tye and Debbie Janscics, won a Team Trophy. Other members of the CHS Debating Team who took part in the all-day tournament included: Sophomores Lance Trainor, Patty Walsh, and Diarmiud O'Connell, as well as Freshman Paul Dormitzer.

Mr. Edward F. Sheehan, the Debating Coach, stated, "I was highly pleased with the entire team's performance in the South Shore League Tournament. We were basically a young team and an inexperienced one — however our debaters learn quickly and we all look forward to an even more successful record next year."

The Debating Team extends its sincere appreciation to Mr. Sheehan for invaluable instruction on the fine art of debating.

Among the events coming up...the Rousers are holding an "Almost Anything Goes" variety show on April 11, in the Sullivan Gym, from 7-9. The cost is a mere buck, so we expect to see everyone there — students and teachers alike...The fourth term is now in session, summer vacation is only two and a half months away...A big thanks to Mr. Emmons and all those students who helped out in the State Drama Festival two weeks ago...We saw a few CHS students and teachers in the road race on March 30, including Mr. Narkiewicz, a tired Mr. Emmons...Not to mention our hero Scott Benbow who came in 49th, and Carl Ganderborn and Hannah Clinton who both finished quite well.

Twice in a row

Got you again, huh?

This is the second week in a row that our panel of experts at the Mariner stumped you, our beloved readership.

Last week's answers:

1. 2 - Eddie Shore; 3 - Lionel Hitchman; 4 Bobby Orr; 6 - Dit Clapper; 15 - Milt Schmidt.

2. The old mark was 51.

3. Contrary to popular belief, he didn't spit at the ump. He hit a home run, ran the bases, and popped into the dugout for his last shower as a member of the crimson hose.

This week the quiz is a real puppy. Just for you. And here it is:

1. Name all the places the Pats have called 'homefield' since the birth of the AFL in 1960.

2. Since it's Stanley Cup time, try this one. Who won the first Stanley Cup, who did they beat, and in what year?

3. What NHL team plays in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens?

So-so start

A tennis loss, a baseball tie

By Bob Tis

The Skippers' first tennis match of the year was almost predictable, when you look at the variables.

Cohasset opened up against the league champion Middleboro Sachems, a team so tough that they lost not one singles player from last year.

So, predictably, coach Mica's three singles netters, Gerry White, Bob Tis and Ron White were beat in straight sets by Tony DeCosta and the Letterman Brothers.

That made the score 3-0 but wait, Middleboro lost both doubles teams from last year. The doubles teams of Kevin Crough-Andy Poettinger and Pete Drago-Joe Whelan both won in straight sets, making the final 3-2, Sachems.

BASEBALL

The honeymoon is over for the 1980 Skipper boys of summer, and nobody knows that better than Bill Kurtz.

And even though the Skippers came out with a tie (which is kind of like kissing your sister), Kurtz, with the help of his fastball, fanned eight hitters and only surrendered two hits in a 2-2 decision with Middleboro.

The Sachems scored first, but Cohasset came back with a run by centerfielder Bob Russell, who drew a walk, went to second on a fielder's choice, and chugged home on a double by Paul Plant. First-baseman John Ayer then singled Plant home, and the Skippers retained the lead until an error-filled sixth inning.

We are a nation falling apart.

As everybody runs around going nowhere fast in this hectic workaday world of ours, your average American is going to pot — but it's nothing to call the vice squad about.

Why?

Well, it isn't the pot that's growing in fields in Columbia, it's the pot that's growing around the midsections of America.

Let me tell you of my physical fitness regimen each week:

Monday — go to work (no breakfast), drink mass quantities of coffee and smoke mass quantities of cigarettes. Sit in a chair and type (great for the fingers), eat junk food, maybe drink a beer at the end of the day if it has beenexceptionallytraumatic (make that marginally).

Tuesday — ditto.

Wednesday — ditto.

Thursday — ditto.

Friday — ditto.

Saturday — wake up at noon, first exercise of the day (stretching for aspirins at the top of the medicine chest), find spot on couch, second, third and fourth exercises of the day (knee bends to turn on the tee vee, back bends to find brewski in fridge, chin-ups to find potato chips in overhead counter), mental conditioning (I imagine I'm on location with the American Sportsman, rassling an alligator or landing a large Marlin, or imagine I'm a starting shortstop for the BoSox, anything to psyche up to whatever's on the tube).

Saturday night — shower (too much exercise makes one sweat, you know), left-arm, right-finger dextrosity maneuvers (calling to see who wants to go out), reflex-coordination exercises (driving), stretching (back into the back pocket to pay the waitress for the first round), power-lifting (cans or bottles, take your choice).

Sunday — ditto.

I've been out playing sports, up at Scituate High, playing basketball with Tinhead, John-John the skinhead, Fidelio, Ronnie, Sven, Space, Bill Spear, the whole group.

And I've been out running around Humarock, and playing baseball with Dave Infusino's Cohasset JV baseball team, Richie Evans, Bill Hollis, Torin Sweeney and the whole crowd.

And I've discovered, much to my chagrin, that I am about in as good shape as Dom DeLuise. I can outrun any elephant in any zoo from here to Milwaukee in the hundred, but not by very much.

I'm ashamed of myself for being such a slouch. You should be too, if your training schedule resembles mine.

Get out there. It's easy.

You know that bike that's sitting in the garage collecting dust? Get out and ride it. Take your kids, too. Honest, after the first few hills, you'll even have fun.

Do you have a pair of sneakers gathering mold in the closet? Pull them out — they won't run away from you. Run around the block. Play tennis or golf. Play buckets or softball.

A startling revelation came to me the other day as I was playing basketball with some kids from Scituate High — I'm out of shape. Me, the all-American boy, out of shape.

That realization prompted me to take drastic action before my little 'spare tire' transforms from VW size to tractor-trailer size.

I'm cutting way down on the smokes, laying off the beer, and getting out of doors for a little exercise. No more Saturdays in front of the telly for me.

I'm going to coach in the Braintree Little League. Maybe this will help.

And it might help you, too.

Flounder still errant but small pollack back

By Lindy Blaisdell

Having tried unsuccessfully to secure a meal of flounder in both Quincy Bay Saturday and Duxbury Bay Sunday, we focus on fresh water this week. We managed to jig up a few cod in Hull Gut and saw a few taken off #1 can out of Plymouth-Duxbury bay. Very few flounder being caught. Those small pollock that drove us crazy last fall are back.

Next weekend used to be opening day of the Mass. fresh water season. I plan to be on the Cape Saturday catching trout.

Thousands of fishermen flock to Southeastern Mass. in search of trout, bass, pickerel, and panfish each year. Armed with assorted poles, boots, baits and equipment, these people are — bankers — fishing without a boat. Don't feel handicapped if you are not among the boat brigade. Think how often you have seen boaters casting towards shore, plug around a pier, troll close to a pad line, or simply sit only a cast off shore and fish over the side straight down.

Mass. fishing laws allow you to use two rods rigged with one hook or one plug each. Learn to take advantage of this bonus and try various combinations.

TROUT

Start in spring using a fishfinder rig. Thread your line through a 1/4 oz. slip sinker. Pinch on a small split shot about eight inches above a #8 or #10 short shank hook. Worms used to be the best bait but lately salmon eggs have stepped into first place. Bait up, cast out and let your offering rest on the bottom. Check the bait frequently as crawfish can strip your hook without notice.

With one rod out, try casting to cruising fish using spinners such as Mepps, Abu Reflex etc. Two popular spoons are Al's Goldfish and the E.G.B. Blinker. If your pond contains brook trout, try casting out a worm and slowly bumping it back along the bottom, fishing near deep water.

Early morning is best. Try to select an area where the sun comes up behind you. This will give you an additional hour of prime time.

As May turns into June, get out your fly rod and hit the evening hatches. Start with a Black Gnat, dry, also Hendricksons, Adams and The Hornburg Special are popular. The Gold Ribbed Hares Ear is a good choice for wet fly or nymph fishing.

Repeat spring tactics in the fall. Live baits such as chubs, shiners, or crawfish work up to ice time.

BASS

As the water warms up into the mid 50's, look for smallmouth bass to begin nesting. Concentrate on points and rocky-gravely shoreline with deep water near by. Polaroid glasses will help you spot the nesting areas. Fish-like plugs, plastic worms, streamers, almost anything works if the bass are around. The smaller male are about the nests during the day while the larger female comes around early and late to check things out.

Largemouth prefer warmer water with softer bottoms and weed protection nearby. As with smallmouth, most anything will work during the spawn.

After spawning takes place, try a black pork rind eel on a weedless hook. Bounce it along the bottom or slide it through any available pads or grass. Personally, I think the pork rind eel is the best bait you can use for largemouth bass. With weight you have a deep lure, add a small colorado spinner and you have a sub surface lure or with a fast retrieve a top water lure. Plastic worms are great and don't harden up, they can be fished in the same manner. Late evening and after dark are usually the best times for both species. Surface plugs such as the Injured Minnow, Jitterbug, or Bass Frog are attention getters. Large poppers on a fly rod are deadly, providing you have room to cast .

Small poppers also work wonders on bluegills, but that's another story.

Local ballet stars in Boston cast

Five students of 'The Ballet Workshop' in Marshfield were chosen to perform in Boston Ballet's production of "Sleeping Beauty" in April. The students are: Angela Sterling, 11, Norwell; Heather Kelleher, 11, Norwell; Katie Hanlon, 11, Scituate; Darcy Gordon, 10, Marshfield and Bridget Smith, 13 from Cohasset.

"The Ballet Workshop," under the direction of Catherine Hacking has offered students the privilege of weekly classes with Anamarie Sarazin, principal dancer, and Stephanie Moy, soloist, both from the Boston Ballet.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

A good cook can often be found not in the kitchen, but curled up in her favorite chair, her attention riveted on the pages which tell how life is just a little more special when one takes an interest in the preparation of food. Some books such as "Modern Home Cooking" by Mary Meade, plan the entire meal for you and any bride who can work a can opener can launch her career as a hostess by preparing this

CAN-OPENER CASSEROLE

3 jars [1 lb. each] chicken or turkey with noodles
2 cans [6 oz. each] boned chicken or turkey
1 small can peas [8½ oz.] drained
1 can drained whole kernel corn
1 can [4 oz.] mushroom stems and pieces, drained
1 can [4 oz.] pimentos, chopped
1 can [8 oz.] tomato sauce
1½ c. grated Cheddar cheese
2T chopped onion
2T chopped green pepper
Salt and pepper.

Save out 1/2 c. cheese and put everything else into a 9x12" baking dish. Sprinkle with remaining cheese and bake for an hour at 350 degrees. Serve with salad, rolls, or French bread.

As time goes on and one's interest in cooking (and eating), becomes a little more sophisticated, there are books galore that will help you plan a gourmet meal similar to one a group of five Norwell couples enjoyed on a recent weekend. Hosting the dinner party were Charlene and Jack Sullivan. Guests were Rosemary and Hugh Spurway, Jean and Paul Gamel, Mary and Dan Donnellan and Helen and Henry Woods. After consulting many an Italian cookbook, the menu included an appetizer of broiled green peppers and cheese, Italian cheese and crackers and an antipasto. Their main dish was Scallopine alla Marsala, served with pasta with red sauce and asparagus. Italian bread and several wines preceded Helen's dessert called

NEAPOLITAN EASTER PIE

½ tsp. salt
2T sugar
6T butter
2 eggs
4T cold water

Sift, floor, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in butter. Beat eggs and stir in cold water. Add to flour mixture. Roll out dough for 10" pie. Left-over dough may be used to make lattice top.

Filling:
½ c. long-grain rice, cooked
1 lb. ricotta cheese
1½ c. sugar
3 medium egg yolks, room temperature
2T chopped candied citron
2T chopped, blanched almonds
2T chopped milk chocolate
1T flour to dust citron, nuts and chocolate
¼ c. rum, or 1 tsp. vanilla
2 egg whites, room temperature

Cook rice. Rinse with cold water, set aside. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Put ricotta in large bowl. Beat. Add 1 c. sugar, stir in egg yolks, one at a time. Add citron, nuts and chocolate. In separate bowl, whip two egg whites with ½ c. sugar. Fold into ricotta mixture. Fold in cooked rice. Pour into pie plate, or spring-form pan. Make lattice top. Bake 1 hour and dust with confectioner's sugar when cooled. Serves 10 to 12.

Everybody has to eat and no matter what periodical you pick up, you can usually learn something about food preparation. The Massachusetts Audubon even had something to say on the matter in their latest bulletin, telling us that a frost-free refrigerator uses 36 per cent more energy than a standard model. A pressure cooker cuts cooking time by 2/3. Thawing food saves 1/4 of the cooking energy. When an oven door is opened, 20 per cent of the heat escapes, so don't peek!

Jordan walk-in psychiatric service

The emergency department of the Jordan Hospital is now providing emergency psychiatric services on a walk-in basis.

This specialized service is becoming increasingly common in both urban and community hospital settings. The increased utilization of emergency departments, coupled with psychiatric deinstitutionalization, has contributed to the emergence of this type of service.

Ms. Faas has joined the staff of the emergency department at the Jordan in an attempt to meet the myriad of need of people in crisis. Examples of such crises are: victims of rape or domestic violence, individuals experiencing stress resulting from marital or family conflicts, loss of loved ones, anxiety related to job difficulties, stress stemming from separation and divorce, and virtually any crisis situation reaching proportions beyond the coping capacities of an individual.

For the immediate future, the service will be available weeknights from 5 p.m. to midnight. Additional personnel and hours may be added later as the need arises. However, a backup service exists to cover any of the more serious psychiatric emergencies, on a 24 hours a day, 7 days a week basis.

If you are interested in learning more about this service, or have family or friends in need of such assistance, feel free to contact Ms. Faas at 747-7079, between 5 p.m. and midnight, Monday through Friday.

Candidates respond to LWV questions

PLANNING BOARD
One Position — 4 Year Term
Patrick Plante and John Kornet

1. What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Plante — Graduate — Wentworth Institute, Northeastern University, B.S., Graduate (Masters plus 30 hrs.) Education & Career Ed. Teacher — Cohasset Sr. High 21 years, program includes American Industries, Advanced Woodworking, Building Construction and Engineering Drawing. Along with my teaching profssion, I have been involved with planning developing, remodeling and renovating real estate in several communities on the South Shore area.

Kornet — Although I have no prior Planning Board experience, I am deeply concerned about the future physical appearance of Cohasset. The proposed sewerage project, for example, has the potential of radically altering the growth rate of our town and the coincident site development. If not evaluated, regulated and monitored in a conservative, common sense manner, with particular thought given to the long-range effects, such an event could result in permanent cosmetic and physical deterioration to our town.

My business career in financial planning has been founded on my ability to make decisions only after thorough and fair analysis of a variety of situations. This ability should help me make a worthwhile contribution to the deliberations of the Planning Board.

2. Evaluate the proposed zoning by-law changes — which are most important and which would have the most impact. Why?

Plante — I have not had an opportunity to study the proposed zoning by-law changes, and feel it would be premature for me to make any comments at this time. However, with the new sewer treatment plant soon to be constructed, the next few years will be crucial as to the direction Cohasset will take in its development.

Kornet — I think all the proposed changes are important in that they underline my desire to preserve the physical integrity of this town. In particular, increasing the minimum lot size and the correlative changes in the "H.B." district should help to limit excessive commercial growth.

TRUSTEE OF PUBLIC LIBRARY
Three Positions — 3 Year Term
Incumbent Barbara Power
Joseph Barresi, Challenger
Lucia Woods, Challenger
George Haley, Challenger

1. What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Power — Probably the best qualifying experience I have received to date is the on-job-training as a trustee of several terms. I have and would continue to serve on several sub-committees for the trustees.

Barresi — No special background or experience is necessary to run for library trustee. The only qualities I can offer or that anyone need offer for the office are: town residency, willingness to serve, and an interest in the government of the town and particularly in the library.

Woods — My background includes a fine education, a teaching career, the shared responsibility of raising children, and some significant volunteer opportunities involving organizational roles:

A.B. Bryn Mawr College 1944, M.A. Stanford University 1950. First Grade Teacher 1945-52 in Massachusetts, Colorado and California; chairman of Red Cross Blood Program 1962-66, steering committee for organization of the community gardenclub and its first membership chairman.

Also, steering committee for organization of the Friends of the Cohasset Library and have served as membership chairman and adult activities chairman. On the Parish Committee of the First Parish in Cohasset and served a three-year term as clerk. I am also a volunteer at the library.

Haley — In the course of the year, very few days go by that I do not visit our library. On many of these visits, certain procedures have drawn my attention and I was eager to discuss these with a qualified and friendly employee. I consider this "on the site" education to be invaluable to me, and I feel confident I can serve as a trustee with intelligence, common sense and faithfulness.

2. What improvements or change of focus in service would you work for if elected, keeping in mind inflation and restrictive funds?

Power — Prior to renovating the library, the trustees made a policy decision to strive for improving the quality of the holdings of the library on a no-growth basis. I feel the trustee's task is to continue to hire the kind of staff responsive to the stated policies and goals of the board.

Barresi — I would work to maintain the high standards of library service now provided within the overall financial capacity of the town as delineated by the Advisory Committee and within the legal restraints of the 4 per cent cap. Whether this is an improvement or a change of focus in service is in the eyes of the beholder.

Woods — My feeling is that Cohasset has been extraordinarily lucky in the quality of its public library. It has had wise and forward-looking trustees, and loyal, dedicated staff. In the months and years ahead, the primary concern must be to get full value for every dollar, but this must always have been the goal of trustees in the past or we could not be in the good position that we now are. It would be a privilege for me to be a trustee and an active participant in the affairs of Cohasset's library — one of my favorite institutions.

Haley — If elected to this office, I will review the present policies, practices and procedures first of all. Then I will examine the budget and the supporting documentation. Recommendations, if any, will be reserved until after the above has been completed.

New programs and cost increases will be scrutinized very closely, with the taxpayers money being paramount at all times.

RECREATION COMMISSION
One Position — 5 Year Term
Incumbent Richard Ainslie
James Gallagher, Challenger

1. What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Ainslie — I am presently a member of the recreation commission (I filled an unexpired 3-year term). I enjoy working with children and the public and I love sports and other recreational activities. I have coached a Little League team for six years and I have also coached basketball and street hockey. I am a former member of the Gridiron Club.

Gallagher — While living in New York, 1944-59: Little League, Little League All Star, Cub Scout, Boy Scout, J.V. Soccer, Basketball and Baseball, Junior Life Saving Course, Junior Riflemen's Course.

While living in Mass. 1959-80: Freshmen Basketball and Football, 2 yrs.; Varsity Football, 3 yrs.; Varsity Baseball, Pony League, Babe Ruth League, Cohasset American Legion Ball (record 9-1), 5 yrs. Wintertusic League (3 yrs. All Star), played on Hyannis ball team in State Tournament, played Brockton & Taunton Tournaments, 3 yrs. for Ground Team ball team, 4 yrs. Cohasset Independence Ball Team, 2 yrs. Cohasset Police Ball Team. Indoor Track: 1963 broke 1 lap and 2 lap record before new corners were built.

2. What would be your priorities if elected to the recreation commission?

Ainslie — To attend meetings regularly, to maintain the standards the recreation commission has set for the town. I am willing to listen and represent people's ideas and thoughts at meetings, be a contributing member of the commission and help to coordinate all recreational activities in the town.

Gallagher — I would like to promote new ideas for new programs such as: Kite Day, Blue Fish & Striper Derby, fresh water fishing derby, 'Who Can Grow the Biggest Pumpkin' contest.

Support present programs, its director and other 4 members. Have an open mind and listen to community ideas.

HOUSING AUTHORITY
One Position — 5 Year Term
Nancy Snowdale and Margerite Libby

1. What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Snowdale — Fifteen years of office procedure and contact with the public as a factor in decision making. Now employed as assistant to Town Collector.

Recently completed course given by the University of Massachusetts in clerical management for municipal government.

Volunteer work at station WATD programming a slot on Elder Affairs and update on news for Senior Citizens in 1979.

Recently attended seminar for Home Sharing program in Weymouth.

Libby — After studying the qualifications necessary to become a member of the Housing Authority Board, I feel that the following are most important: dedication, previous experience on administrative boards, common sense, sincerity, time, dealing with people, and experience handling responsibility.

I have all of the above qualifications.

2. How do you feel about the proposed development on Cedar Street? Do you believe Cohasset has a need for any particular type of public-sponsored housing at this time?

Snowdale — I think an in-depth survey should be done on the need for public-sponsored housing.

If the housing on Cedar Street would offer and reach the type of people that are in need of this type of program, I would be open to the idea.

Libby — After reviewing the facts concerning the Cedar Street development, I find that it does not come under the jurisdiction of the Housing Authority.

Inasmuch as I am a member and Officer of some other organizations in town, the need for moderate income housing has been brought to my attention by many members of these organizations, when they heard of my interest in this Board. I believe there could be a need for a future study.

ASSESSOR
One Position — 3 Year Term
Incumbent Allen Weisenfluh
Brian Wilkin, Challenger

1. What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Weisenfluh — Nine years, board of assessors, chairman two years. Principal participant for the board in all appellate tax board cases as well as negotiator of principal cases settled out of court. Instrumental in hiring of the past four professional consultants to the board. Field work including visitation of majority of real estate parcels within the town. Have worked to bring about the decrease in abatement applications for nine consecutive years from approximately 20 per cent to 1 per cent. I am currently working on a system to factor valuations to meet state mandated requirements instead of having the whole town revalued at a substantial cost. My professional experience is and has been in all facets of municipal and corporate finance for the past 20 years.

Wilkin — My background in town government involves six years on the advisory committee, three years as vice chairman and one year as chairman. During my tenure I was able to gain some insight into the workings of the board of assessors. Other town committee experience includes the veterans' memorial committee and the committee to study the future use of town buildings.

I am employed as a vice president of a mutual property insurance company doing business in six states. My duties involve the day to day operations of the company with specific duties in claims supervision, data processing and underwriting. I have a knowledge of construction costs, building values and general market values.

2. What would you do to insure that all assessing is completed before the cherry sheets are received from the state, so that the town's tax rate can be set early enough to avoid having to borrow money?

Weisenfluh — We have developed a new system whereby we establish a cut-off date for assessment updated at approximately the same time the cherry sheet is due. The computer company will receive revised values in time to update their records and get bills out promptly. In the past we have had a combination of various problems which have delayed the mailing. I feel we are currently in a much better position to prevent this problem from recurring.

Wilken — The law says that property should be assessed as of January 1st. The tax bills are to be mailed by June 14th. If the so-called "cherry sheets" are received on time, tax bills can be in the hands of the taxpayers in a timely fashion.

In the past several years, we have been told that the bills have been delayed because the assessors were attempting to pick up all the new valuations available. It would appear that we have been "penny wise" and pound foolish! The town must spend its surplus cash to run the town, lose the income from that money and then turn around only to borrow more funds at a considerable interest cost.

It would be my intention, for those few new properties that had not been thoroughly evaluated, to recommend sending estimated bills and allowing an abatement if necessary. Property inspections would have to be kept current.

Chemical in Cohasset pipes of minimal concern

In a press release Tuesday, Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Cohasset Water Department and Health Agent Kevin O'Brien said they are concerned, but not alarmed that tetracholorethylene (a cancer-producing agent) may be in some a/c pipes in Cohasset.

Both Pratt and O'Brien attended a morning long briefing last week at the Regional Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) Office at Lakeville Hospital.

Pratt said the water department has not purchased any of the a/c pipe for installation in the water system since 1968. "Our records show approximately 3,600 feet of this pipe having been installed by private developers in the early 1970's, the last being in 1972.

"According to DEQE's findings, the most recent installation (2-5 years) in areas of low flow or dead ends show the greater traces of T.C.E."

Pratt said effected areas in Cohasset include Cedar Acres, Lantern Lane and the lower end of Fair Oaks — But Fair Oaks is not a dead-end street."

Pratt said until arrangements are coordinated with DEQE for sampling, the water department will be flushing any suspected areas of the system. "In view of the age of the coated a/c pipe in our system there should be little or no traces of T.C.E. found. Nevertheless, this department is and will remain in contact with DEQE regarding all information available," Pratt said.

The water department has received a few calls about the matter, but Cohasset residents are not panicking, although some Cedar Acres residents say they are doing their own water test, and others may purchase bottled water until such time as a determination of danger is made.

One fatality, two critical injuries over week

People should die in poppy fields, old and withered, used up, done. They should not die as children.

"Talk to them while you can, talk to them while they're young," a police officer pleaded to everyone and no one after the chilling events of last week.

Two days after Michelle Lessner lost her life in a car accident on Beechwood Street, two Scituate youths attacked a CHS student inside the high school after having allegedly harrassing him for the past week. Student Jeff Lyons, 17, escaped unharmed when classmates came to his aid.

Richard Ryan, Jr. of Scituate was treated at South Shore Hospital for a cut. Two other Scituate youths were un-named by Cohasset police officials.

An accident on South Main Street last Saturday sent a young Scituate woman to South Shore Hospital. Her condition is poor. The driver of the vehicle was charged with operating under the influence.

The heros and heroines of last week were the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments, the Jaws of Life, medical experts and attendants at South Shore Hospital . . . and the private individuals who risk their own lives in an attempt to save another.

Last Wednesday town meeting voters said a silent prayer for Michele Lessner and Kathleen Kelly. A standing ovation was given to Robert Noonan of Spring Street, a worker in the tree department.

Noonan, Hulk-like, pulled the crumpled door from the car as Robert Ferreira removed the girl from the flaming vehicle.

Students held memorial services for Michelle over the weekend. Sometime this spring a tree will be dedicated to Michelle. And a poem written by Gail Smart will be engraved on a plaque to be placed on the tree.

In the meantime, every Cohasset parent is threatened. A local doctor who works in the emergency room of South Shore Hospital said: "Every weekend there are 25 mangled bodies under 25 years of age in there."

Some parents say they would like more government controls — controls on driving, drinking, drugs.

A high school junior tells a Mariner reporter: "Lots of kids at CHS are on drugs, they laugh about it."

Kay England found herself in the middle of a robbery being conducted by several Hull youth at a Hingham gas station. The youth had a shot gun.

A poetic Cohasset parent said: "When teenagers straddle a machine to race along the roads, they should be prepared to die when the human or the mechanical machine dies under them. Someone or something should prepare them for this."

Still another parent reflects: "When you are a parent you can no longer consider suicide. Children do that for you."

Students fight losing battle over Tony Hyde

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Music students lost their second bout with the Cohasset School Committee within a three-day period this week.

After almost two hours of audience debate from those opposed to tenure for CHS Music Director Tony Hyde, and those in favor of tenure, a move for reconsideration made by Commiteewoman Patricia Walsh failed 1-4, with Mrs. Walsh voting yes. John Langmaid was absent from the session.

Over the weekend, music students had gathered 182 signatures in support of tenure for Hyde and a group of over 60 persons attended Monday's meeting.

Instructed by its counsel to not discuss the reason for voting to not tenure Hyde, the committee sat silent throughout the dialogue, during which tenure opponents said they didn't feel the Christmas Concert was up to snuff, children had been hounded out of music by Hyde, and a former music student's mother said her son had questioned Hyde's judgment many times.

A former music teacher in the Cohasset elementary school said while she felt Hyde was a fine musician, "I personally feel he leaves a lot to be desired."

Tenure proponents, who ranged from 7th grade to adults, told the school committee exactly the opposite story. Hyde, they said, worked long hours after school and on weekends with both exceptional and average music students.

Tenure proponents made public a letter to the school committee signed by 26 tenure opponents. They said one of the individuals whose parent signed the letter had recently been disciplined by Hyde. In addition, a student said only seven of the signers were parents of music students.

The letter alleged that Hyde had discouraged many students from joining or staying in the band, and that he devoted too much time to jazz.

Ed Durant, a junior, said Hyde had helped him an indeterminate amount. "Next year will mean nothing without him." Durant added that Hyde's musical connections afforded CHS students many opportunities. "He has so much clout in the musical world."

Jacqueline Dormitzer, unsuccessful school committee candidate, said "Music is the only alternative to athletes. I don't feel kids should be demoralized because they are less talented. I feel youngsters should have a place in the music program as an alternative to athletics."

Stephen Reed, 7th Grader, said "Mr. Hyde taught me the baritone. If you get rid of him someone else will come in and they won't know what the hell to do."

All incumbents but one returned

It was a light turn-out for an election year, with only 1,277 of 4,600 plus registered voters going to the polls last Saturday.

Clark Chatterton, who conducted an independent poll throughout election day, said many people he stopped on the street weren't even aware a town election was being conducted.

Election day was also Arthur Clark's birthday, and quite a few litters of kittens were born between Easter Sunday and Town Elections. (The Mariner knows the location of two litters).

All incumbents save one retained their seats in this election. Only incumbent Richard Ainslie lost his seat on the recreation commission to James Gallagher (see complete election chart, Page 3).

On the housing authority, Marguerite Libby took the seat from Nancy Snowdale (672-364); and Patrick Plante edged out John Kornet (570-537) for a seat on the planning board.

Incumbent Barbara Power received the largest number of votes in a challenged race on the board of library trustees. Gerard Stanton received the largest number of votes in an uncontested race for a three-year term as sewer commissioner. And Allen Weisenfluh, incumbent assessor, overwhelmed his opponent by a two to one margin reclaiming his seat easily.

John Langmaid and Diana Kornet returned to their positions on the school committee in spite of some stiff competition from challenger Jacqueline Dormitzer. The Mariner talked to Langmaid shortly after he woke up from a nice nap at South Shore Hospital only to discover that he had (happily) won his election but had slept through dinner. Asked for a victory statement — he said, "I'm starving."

Langmaid had entered the hospital shortly before the election to have a nasty nose bleed taken of. (Your victory party was terrific Jack — too bad none of your good friends would leave it to deliver a hamburger to you).

Selectman Henry Ainslie, unchallenged candidate — returns to a fourth term on that board. Harry Silvia and Laura Doherty both received two write-in votes for selectman. Mrs. Doherty only laughed when called about any future political aspirations as a result of this large unsolicited vote.

Cohasset's Week

$ for shuttle needed

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said early this week that unless $6,200 can be raised over the next two weeks, the senior shuttle bus will be out of business.

Over the years Cohasset Motors has generously allowed the town the use of the bus, but it is no longer able to finance that venture. The town must either buy the bus or return it at the end of two weeks.

Earlier this week the Cohasset Rotary Club voted to conduct a crash fund drive in an attempt to raise the necessary funds. Persons interested in contributing to this endeavor should mail checks to the Rotary Club Senior Shuttle Bus, c/o Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, South Main Street, Cohasset, 02025.

Should the town fail to raise the money, approximately 55-60 senior citizens will be effected. The Social Service League presently has no alternative for getting elderly citizens to appointments, shopping, should the town fail to secure the funds.

England chairman

Frank England was elected chairman of the Cohasset School Committee for the 1980-81 year. John Langmaid was elected vice chairman and Martha Gjesteby was elected secretary.

Teacher tenure

At a meeting of the school committee last Friday night, the following teachers were voted tenure: Cathy Jarvis, Katherine Neale, Margaret Smalzel.

Voted to continue with CHS in their third year were: Maureen Alcott, Joseph Bouchard, Gregory Jones and Alton Flynn and Kathyrn Fox.

Jeffery Wilbanks was voted to continue for a second year. Fourteen additional teachers were recommended for re-employment and all may be rehired after April 15 as positions throughout the system become available. But at present time these non-tenured teachers do not have contracts with the Cohasset system:

Bryan Marks, Dorien Flynn, Elizabeth Cisneros, Jane Corry, Nancy Gilmore, Kurt Rever. Also Carol Lask, Sarah Sprout, Priscilla Johnsen, Ruth Nedrow, Martha Equi, Marea Kotiadis, Laurie Meagher and Clare Brady.

Jazz kids take first place

Jazzy Cohasset

The Cohasset Jazz Ensemble, under the leadership of Tony Hyde, took first place in the Cohasset North-South Invitational II (held in Waltham last year) with Bridgewater-Rayham coming in second and North Reading placing third in the six school competition.

Joh Opferkuch of Bridgewater, a pianist, was named most outstanding musician. Three Cohasset students were given individual citations for their outstanding performances: Steve Daniels, Jon Durant and Chris Williams.

Pressed between town meetings last week, few residents were able to attend the jazz event at the high school, sponsored by the Senior High Music Department.

Some answers regarding Cohasset's pipe problems

Area water officials received six pages of data on water pipes suspected of containing a carcinogenic chemical.

Here are some of the key questions and answers.

What is tetrachloroethylene? An organic chemical slightly soluble in water, relatively non-toxic even when ingested. In high doses far exceeding those found in Mass. water it can cause depression of the nervous system and limited liver and kidney damage. Limited studies leave it unclear if the chemical really is a carcinogen. Recent studies show if water stays in pipes for a few days TCE can be found.

Why wasn't the public made aware until now? A questionnaire went to Water Depts. on March 28 to ascertain how much suspect pipe was used in their communities and in February a test found TCE in Westford. To avoid unnecessary concern before data could be gathered the announcement was held up.

How did TCE get into the pipe? Through a process which mixes it with resin in which it acts as a thinner allowing the mixture to be sprayed on the pipe interior surface.

Will all dead-end pipe where levels are suspect highest be tested? No! The state hasn't the equipment nor manpower but will take spot samples. Local depts. will determine where that kind of pipe was used and identify low-flow situations.

Can home samples be taken? Yes! Private labs can sample a home for about $100.

Should you let taps run to avoid long residency of water in pipes? No! There's a water supply problem and need to conserve. Water Depts. may open fire hydrants at dead ends to alleviate problems.

What about the asbestos in pipes? Asbestositis is the result of breathing particles, not ingestion.

Why wasn't this found earlier? The chemical is not regulated and routinely tested. There is no Federal standard.

Kathleen Kelly still in poor condition

Seventeen year old Kathleen Kelly of Windy Hill remains in poor condition at South Shore Hospital after an accident last week in which her friend, Michelle Lessner, 16, of Forest Avenue, was killed.

Kathleen, the driver of the car, has been charged by Cohasset police with motor vehicle homicide in the death of her companion, speeding and with being a minor transporting alcohol. Police said three unopened bottles were found in the car.

Police at first thought another vehicle might have been involved at the scene of the accident — when the girls failed to negotiate a turn on Beechwood Street. The car was traveling east when it crossed to the wrong side of the road. But in a later investigation, police said no evidence of another vehicle had been found.

School officials said early this week although Kathleen's condition remains poor, a brain scan had shown that no brain damage had ccurred as a result of the accident.

Saturday, April 12, Daniel O'Connell, 32, of Scituate, was charged by Cohasset Police with operating to endanger and operating under the influence in an early morning accident on South Main Street.

Mary Nielson, 19, of Scituate, a passenger in O'Connell's car, remains in poor condition at South Shore Hospital. Another young woman passenger in the car received minor injuries. All three Scituate residents were treated at South Shore Hospital.

Criterior for picking new Supt.

By Chet Ellis

"The grass is always greener," said Alsop, wait-Ade?, or was it Shakespeare? — whomever, and like that we lose another superintendent of schools. After five years on the hot seat, Dr. John is packing up his six-shooter and scholastic tin star and sliding over to the next county to do battle with new outlaws of ignorance. Ergo, our school committee must hire a new super. Or, rather, try to hire one.

To assist the committee, I recently took the role of a roving reporter to gather the opinions of a sample (random of course), of Cohasset's citizenry regarding criteria it might consider important for the selection of a new superintendent. Prior to submission of my findings to the committee, I thought I would share them with that most astute and well informed group in our town, the readers of the Mariner.

Tyler Snit — School Committee member. "I am sincerely sorry to see Dr. Mahoney go. He will be sincerely missed by both the committee and the town of Cohasset. I am sincere when I say that. No kidding, I mean it."

"As to criteria . . . the man we pick must be capable of understanding the broad philosophical aspects of both elementary and higher education. He must have creative insight relative to the socio-political neo-infantilism of the upper middle class. Also, he must have the courage to do what we tell him to do whether he likes it or not. With that he fled into the shadows.

Mrs. C. Arnold Winslow — Atlantic Ave. "Well, of course, Win insists on sending our children away to school, but, perhaps, well, I mean if the Cohasset Schools had a higher percentage of Ivy League placements, we might be willing to make a commitment."

Your advice should be taken cum grand salis, Mrs. Winslow.

Pierre Le Duc — Local artisan and acerbic wit. "You need someone who is incredibly bright, who will be committed to quality education but able to deal with those who define it differently. Also, any candidate must have a very thick skin and be able to recall obscure facts on short notice. Perhaps the committee could find an ex-TV quiz show host or an out-of-office Philadelphia politician.

Mary Francis O'Callahan — junior, CHS. "I think he should have come from a large family. Then he would understand that mass confusion is just another way of showing everything is under control. Also, it would help if he were rich and didn't need the job." Hmmmmm, from the mouth of babes . . .

Elizabeth Looney — Former School Committee member, now a domestic coordinator, So. Main Street. "We've had three men superintendents in the last ten years and not one has stayed! I think it's time we appointed a woman! We all had mothers didn't we? A little chicken soup psychology never hurt anyone. By the way, I hear Bella Abzug is looking for a job."

Bates Lincoln Pratt — Hermit, Beechwood. "Why don't we combine the position of Police Chief and School Superintendent. That way the Mariner would have more than enough to write about for the next 20 years.!"

Notes & Comments

. . . Civil Service proponents won their battle against selectmen last week when town meeting voted against taking the police department out of Civil Service. But proponents' attitudes left much to be desired.

They lined the back of the hall, refusing to take seats with the assembly (although it is true they were never asked to be seated). And when a call for the quorum was made, a larger number of Civil Service proponents rushed out the doors. In spite of the exodus, the quorum held, reconsideration was defeated and the police department will remain in Civil Service for yet another year.

After the meeting many voters said it was difficult for them to restrain themselves from voting against selectmen's article when proponents acted in such a rougish manner.

. . . This week two Scituate and Cohasset youth lie in critical condition in Massachusetts hospitals after having been involved in car accidents in Cohasset. Cohasset's Michelle Lessner lost her life in one of those accidents.

The police report has few amusing incidences these past few weeks . . . the tragedies, thefts and general tone is more like that of a city newspaper. Every parent is threatened.

. . . There is so much talent in the world today, but so little inspiration for it to cling to.

Cohasset Jazz musicians took first place at the Cohasset Jazz Festival last Thursday. The following evening the school committee voted to not give the CHS Music Director tenure or a job next year. As we understand it, he was sacrificed to basic education ethics.

Privately, the school committee's reason for not tenuring Tony Hyde was that the public interest was not being served.

Perhaps it is almost impossible for teachers to not become enamored of those students who excel in that teacher's speciality. But we are not sure the force of the school committee's non-public argument can ever equal the injustice to the many aspiring jazz musicians at CHS.

Tony Hyde had the unqualified recommendation of this building principal and the school superintendent. After four years at CHS — we certainly hope Mr. Hyde had been apprised of any shortcomings through evaluation and had been given the opportunity to become more of a creature of the school committee.

Faith and conviction triumph in free and fair contests.

Late Sunday afternoon we noticed a sad sign in front of 164 Pond Street. It said: Save Our Hyde — School Committee Please Reconsider Monday Night.

A single parent's silver lining

By Wendy Hammond

There is hope and joy in the life of the suburban single parent, in spite of rumors to the contrary. Just one of life's situations that lends credence to the age-old adage "every cloud has a silver lining."

If you woke up one morning and said to yourself . . . "Okay, sweetie, today you bid your husband a permanent farewell, keep your head together, be a super Mommy to your kids, and a substitute Daddy as well, live on half your normal income which wasn't enough to start with, get yourself job, and find yourself a boyfriend," . . . you might as well put your head on the pillow and go back to sleep.

But inch by inch, day by day, two steps forward — one step backward, it's not impossible. Littly by little you venture forth, sometimes with condifence, often scared to death . . . you grow, you change, you cope, you feel comfortable . . . sometimes you even feel happy.

You feel happy when . . .

—You don't have to make the 5 p.m. mad dash to clean up the day's mess.

—Your kids say in amazament, "Hey Mom, Billy's Daddy doesn't live at home either!"

—You find a friend who is in the same boat.

—You watch other mothers leave the beach on a sweltering August day at 4 p.m. to hurry home and make dinner, and you've packed PB&Js and a cooler of lemonade.

—You and kids form a new bond of respect and friendship.

—You've figured out a way to pay $1000 worth of bills with $700.

—Your kids just accept getting dressed from the dryer.

—You find a way to cope with a leaky basement all by yourself.

—Your kids buy you a birthday present, and bring you breakfast in bed . . . and nobody reminded them to do it.

—Your friends fix you up with a blind date, and he turns out to be just as blind as you are.

—You find yourself a job where you can talk to grown-ups part of the day.

—It's Daddy's day to have the kids, and you have a day to yourself.

—You can serve Cheerios and fruit cocktail, and call it supper.

—You apologetically say goodbye to your therapist.

—You finally feel you are your own person.

Mind you, all of this is not to say that a random sampling of Marshfield's divorced mothers would not find at least half of them "in the pits."

Ah yes, the PITS, the overload, the coping, the emotional and financial problems, the logistics of time scheduling, the adjustment to being "suddenly single," the trying to be in two places at one time, THE PRESSURE . . . THE PITS! One nice thing about the pits, there's lots of company there.

Even married mothers can be found in the pits. Some even have their own reserved seats. Most pit dwellers are really nice people . . . good friendships can be formed in the pits. Even in the pits there's the old silver lining. Have you checked the price of silver lately? It's a very valuable commodity. Hang on to it, polish it, and enjoy its beauty.

Students fight

When a parent complained children had dropped out of the music program because of Hyde, Earin Dunn, president of the Cohasset Teacher's Association said, "My son also put his instrument down. But I do not feel it's any fault of the music department."

Dunn added he felt the music department was obviously understaffed. "Looking down the road, I would not like to be the person going to replace Mr. Hyde."

When tenure opponents said Hyde only dealt with gifted students, several music students confessed they were not gifted.

"I'm fourth trumpeter in the jazz band. I'm not as musically talented as the others," Michael Berman said. Regarding the criticism about the dismal Christmas Concert, Berman said: "Sometimes even professional groups get bad criticism. Kids dropping instruments always happens."

David Reynolds also said he was not a gifted musician. Eighth-grader Sarah Trask confessed to being a horror in the music department when in seventh grade, but said Hyde had improved her attitude since then. She also said she was not gifted.

Other students speaking favor of tenure for Hyde were: Yoanna Zotos, Lisa Kurtz, and Alexandra Mullen.

Walking or roving tour of historical Cohasset Harbor

By Peter Barnicle

Visitors all agree that Cohasset Harbor is picturesque and take on faith a Cohasseter's word that "there's a lot of history around here," even though the only evidence they see is the bronze plaque at the Town Landing marking Capt. John Smith's tiff with some local Indians back in 1614.

Noel Ripley, chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission hopes that in the near future something can be done to remedy this deficiency. Ripley and members of the Commission are enthusiastically supporting plans for a "Walking Tour of Cohasset Harbor."

"The tour might even be made by rowboat," Ripley says. "It shouldn't take more than an hour to row from Government Island in to the head of The Cove and then out along the shore as far as the Cohasset Yacht Club."

The sites of most of the 18th and 19th century buildings, shipyards and wharves have been painstakingly researched by Gilbert S. Tower and his map, drawn in 1946, shows the locations with a capsule story of their place in the town's history. Most of the buildings have long since disappeared but their locations are known.

The walking tour was first proposed by the late Francis Hagerty five years ago. For one reason or another no action was taken on the project until this year.

"This will not be an elaborate or expensive project," according to Ripley. "We just want to identify the various sites to give visitors a sense of the history of the harbor."

Present plans call for erection for a four by eight foot reproduction of Gilbert Tower's map of the area with each site marked by a number. Corresponding numbers will be placed on steel columns at the various locations.

"If — and when — we get sufficient funds, it is possible that the information will be made available in a brochure. With a little luck we might find somebody willing to sponsor such a booklet," Ripley said. It has been suggested that a group of the town's businessmen might underwrite the printing costs.

Government Island seems the logical place to start such a tour. The templates used to shape the granite blocks for construction of Minot Light are preserved there. Nearby the lightkeeper's house is still standing at the edge of the small park, and the 115-foot lighthouse is visible off-shore.

On Border Street, the Gulf empties into the harbor. A concrete bridge now spans the Gulf and the churning waters are a challenger to kayakers. Back in 1814 there was no bridge into the placid waters of the Gulf when a British naval vessel threatened to seize and burn the ships.

Cohasset and the Harbor from Survey Rock, Cohasset

THE SWING OF BORDER STREET, with tower wharf, now Hugo's Lighthouse at upper right. From the collection of Edward E. Tower-taken at the turn of the century.

A little further down the street was Deacon Abel Kent's property and on this occasion the militia turned out in force and set up their six pound cannon in the Deacon's orchard. The British, approaching in longboats and seeing all the activity had second thoughts and discreetly withdrew.

The map also notes that near Deacon Kent's property there was a ship's chandlery. The chandlery still stands, but now it is located near the center of town and houses the Historical Society's Maritime Museum.

On the water side of Border Street there was a grist mill, built in 1792, and a number of small boatyards. There is a boatyard on the same location today.

Next is Hugo's Lighthouse which stands on the site of Tower's Wharf, during the 19th century one of the busiest wharves in town. Adjacent to Tower's were Bates' and Lawrence Wharf.

The Old Salt House still remains. It was restored through the generosity of Mrs. William Cox who had it taken apart timber by timber and rebuilt with new materials wherever needed.

At the head of The Cove, where Kimball's-By-The-Sea motel stands, there were more boatyards and shops. One of the buildings housed a blacksmith shop owned by Amos Tilden. History has it that in 1847-49 the iron framework for the first Minot Light was hammered out in the shop. The lighthouse went into operation in 1849 but was blown over by a fierce storm two years later.

The tour would then move along Margin Street to the imposing Cox mansion with its wide spacious lawn. It is difficult to believe, but in the first half of the 19th century this was the site of some of the town's most flourishing boatyards.

In 1850 the 788-ton, three-masted Greenwich was built here. The "Tagus" and the "Hellespont," each carrying three masts, came from these yards. In addition during the fifty years of greatest activity the Cohasset shipbuilders constructed more than a score of schooners and smaller vessels for the town's fishing fleet and the packet trade.

around town

It is always a pleasure to announce Cohasset babies to you:

☐Dawn Faith Massa-Williams arrived on April 5 at Lying-In Hospital, Boston weighing 7 pounds even. Her parents are Donna Williams and Donald Massa of Atlantic Avenue; she's their first! Grandparents are Georgiana and Frank Massa, and Jean Williams all of Cohasset and Robert Williams of Washington, D.C.

☐John and Nancy Kinchla have also added a little girl baby to their family, Allison Marie, five days old on Monday (born April 9) and weighing a sturdy 8 lbs. 9 ozs. Her big brothers, John, 5, and Brendon, 3 1/2, are already "in love" with her, as are her grandparents, Nina and Kendall Kiely of Quincy and Paul and Marjorie Kinchla of Newton. Mrs. Whelan of Watertown is a great grandmother.

If there are any other new arrivals that we haven't heard about, please give a call so we can "announce" your baby to your Cohasset neighbors.

☐Happy 72nd birthday (six dozen he says) to Arthur Clark! It's hard to believe the report from the Log & Line that he needed help blowing out a candle on his birthday cupcake last Saturday (he was born on election day, too) so we'll extinguish it as a rumor. Many happy returns, Arthur!

☐Mr. and Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr. celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday, April 5 at the Lothrop House on Summer Street with close to 200 family and friends.

Mrs. Constance Parker, President of the Cohasset Historical Society, has led the drive to acquire, rennovate and refurbish the 1823 Federal building for the Society's headquarters. She was prohibited from entering the house all last week as friends completed the decoration of the downstairs rooms in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Parker's anniversary party.

The Parkers were married on April 5, 1930 (the day before Easter that year, too) in the home of Mrs. Parker's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. August F.B. Petersen, at 48 Sohier Street. The Petersens also celebrated a 50th wedding anniversary, on October 4, 1949!

The Parker's three daughters and son staged the catered affair at the Lothrop House which included drinks and a dinner buffet. They are: Mr. and Mrs. Frederic H. Wood, Jr. of Pleasant Street, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R.D. Fox, 2nd of Winthrop, Maine (formerly of New Jersey), Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hennessey of Springfield, Virginia and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Parker of Cohasset. Many of their ten grandchildren also came to the party: Mark and Fred Woods (who bartended), Kimberly and Sally Hennessey, Stacey Fox, and her fiance, Kelly Buzzel, also from Maine, Mr. Glen and Mrs. Robin (Fox) Dakin and their son, Joel, 2, a great grandchild!

In addition, Mrs. Parker's two sisters, Mrs. Warren H. Child, Jr. of Tenants Harbor, Maine and her husband, and Mrs. Marjorie Moebius of Duxbury, and Mrs. Parker's brother, Mr. A. Frederick Petersen were present.

The individuals in charge of the Lothrop House decorations, Tinker MacLean, Charlotte Frost and Philip Smith, coordinated the finishing touches during the week before the party. Nancy Clapp donated the stenciling of two rooms, the dining room (the original kitchen now known as the Francis W. Hagerty Room) and a small borning room/study; I. Clifford Blossom did the wallpapering in the front hall and front living room; and Robert Fraser (curator and live-in caretaker of Lothrop House) did the painting, which completed the sprucing up of the downstairs with the front library and adjoining office. All of the downstairs floors have been repaired, replaced where necessary and refinished.

Standing one-hundred percent behind Mrs. Parker's historical activities is her husband, Mr. E. Lawrence Parker. He is retired from the real estate and insurance business with Petersen Realtors. He was also very active with the Sportsmen's Club of Cohasset and is a life member of the National Rifle Association. He was in charge of the Rifle Club here and taught boys and girls rifle safety and the safe handling of firearms. He was instrumental in having the rifle range put into what is now the Joseph Osgood School and received a commendation for his work in rifle safety from Field and Stream magazine.

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will soon begin landscaping the grounds. They will start in the front yard where Jimmy Rosano plans to lend a hand putting large granite blocks into place; they will form a wall and a lawn will be filled and graded from there up to the house.

The restoration of this lovely house is far from complete, but the handsome downstairs' rooms are a promise of things to come. Mrs. Parker, who has been joined in her efforts to centralize historical activities in one adequately-sized building by many society enthusiasts and friends, has also had town-wide support for the project.

In spite of the present shortage of funds, Mrs. Parker is confident and determined that full restoration will be completed. The Lothrop House was a most fitting location for the celebration of the Parker's 50th anniversary party!

☐Sandra Hamlin was sworn in last Friday as a municipal court judge by Governor Edward King, who nominated her for the $42,500 a year job. Mrs. Hamlin, 35, has been an assistant district attorney for Suffolk County since 1974. She is a graduate of Vassar College; she received an M.S. degree from the London School of Economics and a Juris Doctor degree from Suffolk University Law School. She succeeds Judge A. Frank Foster who retired this year.

☐Two Elm Street neighbors, students at the University of Rhode Island, have been named to the Dean's List there for the fall semester:

Hamilton Tewksbury II of 81 Elm St., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Tewksbury, is in his sophomore year and plans to go into marine biology. He has been achieving a high academic standard (3.0 grade point average during freshman and sophomore years) right along. He is a Cohasset High School graduate.

Katherine L. McArthur of 37 Elm St., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl McArthur, a senior, is majoring in dental hygiene health. She has been a Dean's List student since transferring to the University of Rhode Island in her junior year after graduating from the Forsyth School of Dental Hygiene in Boston. She is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and is a member of the National Dental Hygiene Honor Society.

☐Christine Parker was one of several women who were recently awarded certificates as home health aides from the Massachusetts Council of Homemakers-Home Health Aide Services, Inc. for 300 hours service.

☐Dana Prescott has been appointed director of continuing education at the Rhode Island School of Design. A graduate of Skidmore and Rosary Colleges, she has had her own paintings and prints displayed at the Palazzo Strozzi in Florence, Italy, Liberty Bank and Trust Company, Boston and the Staircase Gallery, Hingham.

Annual Town Meeting briefs. . .

DODGE TRUCK

The third session of town meeting voted to raise $21,000 by taxation for a new Dodge truck with four-wheel drive for the fire department.

HEAT & SMOKE

Residents have one year to conform with articles voted at town meeting requiring heat and smoke detectors in certain apartment houses, hotels, boarding or lodging houses and family hotels not presently regulated by the state. In addition, all buildings or structures occupied in whole or in part for residential purposes will require alarm systems. Fire Chief Charles Pipenbrink told voters: "We're trying to close up some of the gaps that exist in the state law. Under a new low to go into effect January 1, 1982, sellers will have to provide smoke detectors before a sale can be completed. While homes not for sale will be in someone's hands a long time without smoke detectors.

EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

An article to create a new position of executive secretary to the board of selectmen will take effect July 1, 1981. Selectmen can appointment to the position following annual town meeting next year, at which time funds will be voted for the position. An amendment to the motion offered by Sheila Evans, chairman of the library trustees, was defeated. Ms. Evans' amendment asked the power of the executive secretary be confined to town departments and not elected departments.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter spoke against Evans' amendment saying: "I don't feel town government should have any untouchables."

FACILITIES COMMITTEE

It was unanimously NO to the article which would have created a facilities committee to be appointed each time recommendations on any specific facility to be constructed.

NO POLICE MOTORCYCLE

Although Police Sgt. John Rhodes III said it was as quiet as a little sewing machine, voters said no on a voice to the police department's request for a federally-funded motorcycle. The advisory board and capital budget committee were also against the acquisition.

TOWN BLDG. SOLD

As of last Wednesday, the Independence Building on South Main Street is owned by the historical society which has been paying for renovations and maintenance of the building over the years. The town has the right of revertor in the deed.

LIMITS INCREASED

Voters were unanimous in their decision to increase the town's appropriation limit to $6,653,775.46 and to increase the levy limit by not more than $400,000 so that the levy limit will not be more than $7,291,840. A two thirds vote was needed to override the governor's 4 per cent tax cap. The town is now 8 per cent above the 4 per cent tax cap, having exceeded it by $389,651.

RECONSIDERATION FAILS

A planning board article requesting an increase of the lot size on 3-A failed again, when a move for reconsideration of the article failed.

Do you ever wonder where the joke you were giggling at the other night began? Or where your favorite recipe originated? Or who decrees that long skirts are out and suits in, now that we all have a closetful of long skirts? There must be a very mysterious someone, somewhere manipulating us and that someone is now proclaiming that pancakes are "in." Beef Wellington, Quiche Lorraine, fondues and paellas are no longer in vogue and even though our mouths may water at the sight of these dishes on the menu, to order them would surely date us. Any cookbook (or Aunt Jemima) will tell us how to make pancakes, but for a Sunday morning breakfast treat, in or out, my daughter-in-law Katy's French Toast, is fashionable any time to me.

1/2 c. flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 c. milk
1 egg

Beat egg. Add milk. Add to the flour, baking powder and salt. Dip bread slices in mixture and cook on griddle until golden brown.

There are some who are made of sturdier stuff and refuse to bow to change. Old Yankees who stick to their frankfurts and beans on Saturdays, fish chowder on cold winter nights, have their eye on what's available in the cupboard or freezer and worry little about modish taste sensations. New Englanders produce meals that tend to be plain and simple and there were never any complaints when Katy's husband was a little boy and I served

AMERICAN CHOP SUEY

1/2 pkg. egg noodles
Salted boiling water
2 c. canned tomatoes
1/4 pd. American cheese
1 large onion, diced
1/4 c. oil
3/4 pd. lean ground beef
1 stalk celery, diced
Salt and pepper

Cook noodles in salted boiling water until tender, then drain and return to kettle. Add tomatoes and chopped cheese and heat until cheese is melted, stirring. Cook onion in oil until slightly brown and tender. Add meat and stir until browned. Add celery. Add to noodle mixture and season to taste. Serves 4 to 6.

When rollcall is taken each morning in school, the pupils respond to names that have changed since their grandmother's were called upon. In the 20's, the boys were usually named Robert, John, Richard, George, Donald, or Joseph. By the early 50's the following were "in": John, Robert, James, Michael, David, Thomas and Mark. But in the mid-70's birth announcements were apt to read Michael, Jason, Matthew, Brian, John, Christopher, Daniel or David. Today Jason is thought to be No. 1, with Todd, Duane, Scott and Brad — one-syllable names — the most popular. Girl's names 50 years agowere Mary, Barbara, Ruth, Helen, Elizabeth and Jean, but by 1975 the baby girls were most often Jennifer or Amy, Sarah, Michelle, Kelly and Elizabeth. The top name today? "Michelle." Helen was a name popular half a century ago, but Helen Colameco says this dessert has been passed around a[mong] her friends for not quite that long.

RUM CAKE

2 pkgs. Stella Doro Anisetts Toast
2 pkg. vanilla pudding, large
1 pkg. chocolate pudding, large

Cook puddings according to directions for pie. Add 1 tsp. rum extract to each package of pudding. Dip each cookie quickly in milk. Let drain on paper towels before putting on bottom on 9x13 pan. Pour pudding over top of cookies, with chocolate on top. Let cool. After cooling, spread large bowl of cool whip over top. Decorate with chopped nuts, or halved cherries. Serves 8 or 10.

Angler's Corner

By LINDY BLAISDELL

The Herring are coming! The Herring are coming!

A sure sign of spring, Herring (proper name Alewife; alias Sawbelly, Mooneye, Kayak, River Herring) are back. The name Alewife is said to have come from Indian word Aloofe, which means bony fish.

Alewife spend the winter at sea, returning to the river of their birth when they're two years old to spawn. They hold up at the mouth of their birthplace-stream until the water warms up to about 40 degrees, then swim up river to find suitable spawning grounds, usually still water.

Young Alewives hatch 3-7 days from when the female deposits the 60,000-100,000 eggs, and remain in fresh water environs throughout the summer. The young drop down the river to the ocean in the fall as 2-4" little tweakers.

It is believed that adults stop feeding when they enter the spawning grounds, to insure that the youngsters have plenty of food (they generally eat plankton and small organisms of the like). I've caught many Alewives while shrimping for trout and several while fishing for its cousin, the Shad, in the North and South Rivers. They strike out of instinct rather than hunger.

Adult Alewives reach 12-14" in length and a pound in weight, and can be used for everything from fertilizer to table fare. At times, the waters were so full of Alewives that there was little or no concern for their conservation.

Squanto first taught the pilgrims to catch the Alewife in 1621, and in 1709, laws appeared to halt the obstruction of their spawning methods. In 1718, Cape Codders barred the use of Alewife as fertilizer (fish corn) and in 1741 laws were passed to ban the extinction of the little fish.

Colonists were beginning to notice a general decline in Alewives by 1850, due to the increase in grist mills, lumber mills and dams.

In the mid 1900's, fish ladders were built, stream improvement devices brought into focus, and public awareness began to bring the Herring runs back. By the '50's, Herring was in demand for its value as pet food and lobster bait. The runs had been revived, but not to full potential.

A varied overseas interest came and went, because demand was greater than supply. The runs diminished once again, and now we're left with a fraction of what used to be.

The Alewife is still popular to striper fishermen as bait, but most of the commercial catch is ground into fish meal.

Such a sad ending for such a traditional fish.

MY WEEKEND

Once again, I was blessed with lots of luck while trout fishing.

All bad, that is.

My son, Woody, who once again proved to be a good student in the art of angle, beat me by limiting out while I got skunked. One of his trout, a hearty two-pounder, gave us some jitters as it tried to maneuver into the pussy willow bushes at pondside.

Fishing in general was slow, but trout were caught throughout the Cape. We saw a nice stringer of Smallmouth (five two-pounders) from Long Pond in Harwich, and a nice 15" brookie from Lovell's Pond.

I finally managed to get some respect from Woody by pulling in some nice white and yellow Perch, my favorite eating fish.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Attach a marshmellow to your baited hook while fishing a weedy-bottomed pond. The marshmellow will float your bait where fish can see it.

But although Marshmallows are great for roasting, they dissolve in the drink. Check them often.

Teen invasion coming

One hundred and forty-four teenagers from Europe, Asia, South America and Australia will be arriving in New England this summer as participants in the Youth for Understanding high school exchange program. These students speak English, are fully insured, have their own spending money, and are eager to "become" American teenagers for a year. They will live with host families and attend local high schools after receiving orientation at home and in this country. Youth for Understanding is presently seeking qualified homes in this area for the young people.

Anyone interested in hosting a student or learning more about YFU should call the regional office (collect) in Boston at (617) 276-1141.

No message rule...a blessing in disguise?

At least one large office has started a practice that might catch on. Personnel there are "not allowed to take messages."

Isn't that provocative? What a difference the no messages mandate would make to our refrigerator doors, let alone in our lives. There'd be no notes left about the leak that developed in the cellar when you weren't home; no one would pass along a message from relatives who are expecting to be picked up at Logan at midnight.

There'd be no need to return a call 'cause you'd never have heard about it in the first place. We would save a lot of paper (or backs of envelopes) by not leaving notes for kids about the time and place of Saturday's ball practice. Not to mention the innumerable lists of young people who are waiting for a return call on the telephone, the main artery in their lives.

PATCHES

But you know what I like best about the idea? It isn't the message part. What appeals to me is not being allowed to do something. Remember when we could get out of doing a lot by saying, "My mother won't let me . . . " I miss that.

In the olden days you could avoid things by saying that. No one ever questioned it . . . for two reasons: everyone else depended on that as an excuse to get out of something and mothers have refused permission since time began, especially for unreasonable reasons. So the excuse has gone without challenge.

That would come in handy today to get us out of some doings we'd just as soon avoid. It was a protective device. It helped save face, avoid embarrassment and even kept us out of trouble now and then.

I wish my mother had kept her foot down. I yearn to be able to say, "My mother won't let me:

—take the dog to the vet . . . because you can get deformed lugging golden retrievers around.

—work on the income tax or the insurance policies.

—go to the dentist unless it's a social visit (my dentist is nice enough but he has this thing about filling cavities).

—get the car inspected because that really makes me nervous.

—stay up late.

—jog, play tennis or otherwise embarrass myself on public highways and recreational spots.

—go inside the Registry of Motor Vehicles, especially if it's to accompany a youth in a driver's exam . . .

—eat skimpy, delicate meals; growing busy people need a lot of good nourishment at least three times a day.

Actually young mothers are quick to use their children as excuses. We learn how to do that when we're barely out of the delivery room. Small children won't let us:

—be chairman of the refreshment committee.

—be the three-day a week driver for the town-wide carpool.

—attend day long lecture series as representatives for the church, dealing with the problems of early retirement.

But the last time I used the excuse that I had to go home and tend to the little ones, some savvy smartmouth pointed out that two of the babies were in college and the other one was on a weekend camping trip.

Softball won two tough games last week

By Bob Tis

As usual, all is not quiet on the softball front.

The South Shore league Umpires voted Monday not to ump any Cohasset games, because pitcher David Turner is pitching from 40 feet. That's too dangerous, claim the umps, but the MIAA had ruled earlier in the year the boys had to play girls' softball rules if on the team.

Some fiasco.

In the meantime, the team salvaged two wins, beating Middleboro, 5-4, and East Bridgewater in a real pitchers' duel, 12-10.

The undisputed star of the first game was Lindsey Gilmore, who hit a grand salami in the first inning. Captain Jodi (Shades) Sandblom knocked in the winning run also in the first.

Turner, worried about his performance in the first two tilts, sees adequate room for improvement.

And though the softball team was impressive, the baseball team suffered two tough losses this week, losing to East Bridgewater, 6-3, and to Norwell, 7-3.

Coach Kuntz, after the game, put his finger on the problem.

"We need more clutch hitting," said Kuntz. "We're hurt by the walks and the errors. We could have won both of those games."

In the Bridgewater game Friday, Jack Hernan had to leave the mound after his fielders fell asleep and provided three errors. After 5 2/3 innings, Hernan walked off the mound with the score 6-1. Not one of the Vikings runs were earned.

TRACK

The girls cruised to an easy victory in the first meet with Hull, 79-39, grabbing nine first places.

Mary Jo Mahoney took the mile, Hannah Clinton the two-mile, Erin O'Brine the 440 and long jump, Karen Eckberg the 100, Lorraine Carroll the 220, India Turner the hurdles, Steffanie Keane the high jump, Dianne Gunville, Mahoney, O'Brien and Mary Ellen Marer in the mile relay.

The boys, however, had no such luck, losing an 83-62 toughie to Hull, but had some interesting observations about competing with Hull at neutral sight, Norwell.

"We just did our events and had a good time," said miler-high jumper Mike Ellis. "Nothing was said about the (bus stoning) incident and nobody felt intimidated by anyone else."

There were some shining lights, such as firsts by Phillip Tye in the 220 and 100; Bill Taylor in the discus, Bill Duffy in the high jump and Scott Benbow in the two-mile.

TENNIS

Both tennis teams were victorious last week, the boys beating Norwell, 4-1, and the girls beating East Bridgewater 4-1.

Singles players Laurie O'Connor and Janet England, along with doubles teams Karen Murphy-Sue Dalrymple and Joy Pratt-Mia Graham, all won in straight sets, as freshman Chrissy Ralph lost a heartbreaker in three sets.

The boys got straight set wins from Gerry Whie and Bob Tis, along with doubles teams Pete Drago-Joe Whelan and Kevin Crough-Shannon (Joe Cool) Collins.

Boosters night

The Cohasset Hockey Boosters Club held their annual awards dinner recently at the Bridgwaye Inn in Marshfield. Those players receiving awards were: Gary Ormiston, Most Improved Player; Dominic Campedelli, Best Defensive Player; Douglas Dillon, Norman Delaney Memorial Award; Donald O'Neill, Barney Robinson Memorial Award; and both Dominic Campedelli and Douglas Dillon for Most Improved Player Award.

Those seniors on the team who received watches were: John Ayer, Matt Brown, Doug Dillon, Joe McCullough, Jay McNeill, David O'Connell, Doug Yeager and Rick Young.

Clinton qualifies for Aruba Sunfish race

Hannah Clinton of Parker Avenue has qualified to compete in the Eleventh Sunfish World Championship, to be held April 26 through May 4 in the Dutch island of Aruba in the Caribbean.

Clinton qualified for the international sailing event by placing second out of 110 sailors in the 1979 Sunfish North American Championship last August in Springfield, Il.

A student at Cohasset High School, Clinton has been racing Sunfish since 1975 and actively sailing for 15 years. In addition to her participation in many local regattas, she placed 13th in the North American Junior Sunfish Championship in 1978 and won the Women's Division of the Chatham Chowder Cup for the past three years.

Latest decisions from South Shore League!

The South Shore League Tuesday decided that boys pitching on girls' softball teams will have to pitch from 46 feet, six feet farther than girl pitchers.

This decision came in the wake of Monday's vote by the league umpires to refuse to officiate Cohasset games because of their pitcher, David Turner.

"The umps thought that 40 feet was too close for a boy to pitch from, and that it was dangerous," said Clark Chatterton, Cohasset High School Athletic Director.

Originally, Cohasset got the nod from the MIAA in a verbal ruling, which stated that boys on girls' softball teams were to conform to girls' rules. That all changed, though, when Middleboro placed their game with the Skippers under protest for that same reason even before the first pitch was thrown.

In other action, the League tabled Cohasset's request to drop out of the league in football until further notice. The League has formed a committee to study the feasability of splitting into two divisions, larger schools and smaller schools.

Chatterton sees this alternative as a boon to the Skippers' grid program.

"This may turn out to be a real healthy situation," said Chatterton, "because then we wouldn't have to leave the league."

The Skippers have made a proposal to withdraw from the league after last year's prolific run of luck - all bad.

Alas. . .no winner again this week

Again?

We at the Mariner are beginning to think that there are no sports nuts in this town. Come on, now!

We've got a bunch of tee-shirts we're waiting to give away. Now, let's get on the stick!

Last week's answers:

1. Old Braves' Field, Fenway Park, Harvard Stadium, BC's Alumni Stadium, Shaefer Stadium and Municipal Stadium in Tuscaloosa, Ala., when the Pats' schedule interfered with the Red Sox' World Series drive.

2. In 1894, the Montreal AAA's beat the Ottawa Capitals, 3-1, to win the first Stanley Cup.

3. The Toronto Maple Leafs, of course.

This week's quiz:

1. What members of the 1970 Stanley Cup Champion Boston Bruins are presently on the 1980 Bruins?

2. How much did it cost Jake Rupert to buy Babe Ruth's Boston Red Sox contract from Harry Frazee in 1919?

3. Who invented hockey's goalie mask?

SHOOTING THE RAPIDS, these whitewater kayakers take Mill River for all it's worth.

Cedar Acres to petition for asbestos tests

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Asbestos is a new twist to the week-old tetrachloroethylene (a cancer-producing agent) pipe story.

Residents of Cedar Acres Lane say they will submit this week a petition to water commissioners asking that the vinyl-coated pipes on the street be tested at three Cedar Acres Lane locations for both the above chemical and asbestos — which may have been freed if the piping material has declined with age, or if the acid rain of the region had penetrated it.

Spokesmen for the group, who were still circulating the petition Monday, said it was unknown how many others in the Lane would join in the petition for testing.

But Helen Fries, an elementary school teacher, said petitioners are asking for a test of water faucets at least three locations on the Lane, in addition to a test for asbestos.

Still other residents questioned the wisdom of the water department in flushing the hydrants before testing. Although Ms. Fries flushing of the pipes would probably have no effect on testing at the locations petitioners have specified.

Petitioners are asking that the tests be accomplished by May 1 and wish the results of the double testing to be made public to residents within the week the results are received.

Laura Doherty, another resident of the lane, said asbestos had been discovered in the water of another own in the state using the same vinyl-coated piping.

EPA FACTS

Asbestos in recent years has been linked with .sbestosis — a progressive restrictive pulmonary ibrosis associated with the inhalation of asbestos fibers, and is a classic occupational disease.

However, according to an Environmental Protection Agency guidance document, asbestos fibers find entry into the body by both inhalation and ingestion. "The retained mineral fibers are found in tissues throughout the lifetime of the host, even long after cessation of exposure. Such asbestos fibers found in human tissues are generally undetected by optical microscopy, and require an electron microscope.

"Fibers may migrate to other organs following retention in the lung. Asbestosis and certain malignancies are related to exposure to fibers of the asbestos minerals."

The EPA manual continues "Malignancies related to the inhalation and possible ingestion of asbestos fibers include carcinomas of the lung, mesotheliomas of the pleura and peritoneum. and neoplasms of other sites.

"Asbestos-related malignancies exhibit latency periods of 20-40 years and may follow exposures of much less duration and magnitude as seen with asbestosis."

At least three residents of Cedar Acres Lane are saying, without qualification, they wish the pipes on the Lane to be replaced.

Other areas in the town which use the vinyl-coated pipes are: Lantern Lane and the lower end of Fair Oaks.

Vandals hit Cohasset village

Warm spring weekends, particularly Fridays, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., is when they strike. Robbery doesn't seem to be the motivation. Being in a festive mood, these young people appear only to get delight from knocking over flower boxes, ringing doorbells, tearing the town's trash containers off the polls, vandalizing cars, breaking a couple of windows.

Once in a while they rob a liquor store.

And, for the most part, they are our kids. Many of them are. They aren't all kids.

No one sees the acts committed, but they are being reported. The dark is not a completely safe time anymore.

Last Friday night vandals moved quickly through the town, overturning flower boxes, destroying merchants' signs . . . and the next morning the highway department was called to clean up the debris.

The Cohasset Village and Merchants Association planned to meet Tuesday night to further discuss the problems of vandals in the village area. There's been talk about offering rewards for information leading to the arrest or conviction of offenders.

Police Sgt. John Rhodes said the department started cracking down on kids by quickly thinning out crowd situations everywhere, tagging or requesting non-resident cars to leave Sandy Beach, arresting or summoning youth for public drinking, enforcing the minor in process of transporting liquor.

"Other towns are attempting to put teeth into their town bylaws bymakingthe breaking a bylaw an arrestable offense," Rhodes said. He said the Cohasset department, three men short, has been dealing with the situation by selective enforcement. "That means instead of sending officers out on general patrol, we're putting more effort into groups."

Rhodes admitted it's a hassle. "Over the last 10-12 years there have been only two officers who will work on prom night. One or two officers are on detail at the main after-prom party, but other parties spring up throughout the town."

My Sister Eileen visits the 80's

On April 29, 1950 The Cohasset Dramatic Club presented one of its greatest successes in its 59 year history. The play was My Sister Eileen. So massive were the crowds, standing and sitting in the aisles that the director, Paul Blackmur received stern warnings concerning the capacity of the town hall!

This week almost 30 years to the day later, Cohasset hopes to repeat this artistic and financial success as it revives My Sister Eileen.

Director John Mallon of Scituate, says that Paul Blackmur, who serves as consultant for this production, has proved an invaluable help with his advice and many amusing anedcotes from his 1950 production. In fact, Mallon says, "It was partly Paul's strong urging that went into my decision to set the play in the 80's rather than its original 40's.

"It doesn't matter when you set it," said Mr. Blackmur, "young women striking out on their own have the same troubles now as they did then; take my word for it!" Taking this wisdom and experience under consideration, Mr. Mallon found that indeed very few changes were needed to update the play.

So, it is a fond look at these trials and tribulations that provide the backdrop for this delightful comedy; as the Cohasset Dramatic Club looks forward to maintaining its rich sense of quality, tradition, and continuity.

Produced by Jane A. Marshall of Cohasset, and directed by John Michael Mallon, the cast includes Carol Augustyniak and Linda O'Donnell, both of Duxbury as Ruth and Eileen Sherwood, Bob Julian of Cohasset as Mr. Appopolous, Thom Carroll of Norwood as the Wreck, Kerry Crehan of Cohasset as Helen, George Donovan of Hull as Chic, J. Arnold Nickerson of Cohasset as Baker, Robert Raffa of Cohasset as Violet, and Eddy Fee of Hingham as Frank.

Other cast members include: Ron Massa, Peter Tolman, Clover O'Toole, Timothy Carroll, Nan Hamacher, Joe McCarthy, Carter Hill, Wayne & Betty Miessner, Chip Figueiredo, Jack Antoine, and Jim Kelleher. Sets by Wayne Miessner, Stage manager Barbra Love . . . April 24, 25 and 28, Cohasset Town Hall, 8 p.m. Tickets $3 at the door. For information call 383-0490.

Kathleen Kelly's class says goodby

"On the day of her baptism, Kathleen put on Christ . . . on the day of his coming may she be bathed in his glory . . ."

Tuesday morning a funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church for the second young Cohasset woman within two weeks who died of injuries suffered from an automobile accident.

Kathleen Kelly's friends say she was tall, with long brown hair and a lithe figure the envy of her classmates. She was born in Boston and lived in Quincy until her family moved to Cohasset three years ago. She attended Sacred Heart School in North Quincy and was in the junior class at Cohasset High School.

Tuesday's service was lovely. The church was filled with flowers and Kathleen's young classmates. A reading taken from the book of wisdom warned the youngsters that while we are all reluctant to let go of life, life lets go of us.

Kathleen's companion, Michelle Lessner, 16, died at the hospital shortly after the two women crashed into a tree on Beechwood Street two weeks ago.

Another young woman, Mary Nielson of Scituate, also died last week several days after a car in which she was a passenger crashed on So. Main Street.

Teacher Grievance

Kearin Dunn, president of the Cohasset Teachers' Association, said this week teachers are grieving the recent firing of CHS Music Director Anthony (Tony) Hyde.

Over the past four years Hyde has led CHS jazz musicians on to many victorious competitions. Last week 182 student petitioners requested that the school committee reinstate Hyde to his position and offer him tenure. Parents offered another petition to the school committee in support of Hyde.

The school committee has not stated publically why Hyde was fired. However, students made public at last week's meeting a letter to the school committee signed by 25 residents which stated Hyde had discouraged many students from joining or staying in the band and had in addition devoted too much time to jazz.

No, no, never

On a vote of 2-0 with Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark abstaining because he said his wife wouldn't allow him to go out with women after 6 p.m. at night, selectmen voted to not invite Mariner Reporter Tanna Kasperowicz to the Norfolk County Selectmen's Association dinner on Monday, April 28.

Ms. Kasperowicz had especially wished to go as Charles Hely, Assistant Norfolk County District Attorney, will be speaking on Preventive Medicine for Conflict of Interest Ulcers.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said inviting Ms. Kasperowicz to such a meeting would be like "Taking a fox into a hen house."

In the meantime, Ms. Kasperowicz told the Mariner while her very own selectmen refused to escort her to the meeting, Hull selectmen said they would be delighted to have her as their guest.

School Supt. criterion

No, the school committee did not particularly care for Mariner Columnist Chet Ellis' suggestion that the town combine the position of school supt. and police chief. But the committee is very interested in hearing about your priorities, and what you feel the qualifications for the position should be.

Send your ideas, in writing, to Chairman of the Cohasset School Committee, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, 02025 BY WEDNESDAY, MAY 7.

May 12 is the cutoff date the committee has established for receiving applications for the position.

Horses, cows, swine

An overflowing mob is expected to be present at the board of health's meeting Monday, April 28 at 8:30 p.m. (43 Elm Street) to discuss rules and regulations on horses, cows, goats, swine and poultry.

The public is invited to attend and to offer pertinent suggestions in person — or leave your suggestions in writing at the office by Friday noon, April 25.

A Cohasset Riddles

Selectmen recently approved a change of manager of the retail package store beer and wine license of the former Food of All Nations shop on Route 3A from Barbara Rhind to Raymond Riddle of Scituate.

The transaction involves the sale of stock in the corporation to Riddle and the board's permission to pledge the stock to Rockland Trust Co., which is financing the transaction.

The new owner will operate as Riddle's Food Mart at Jonathan Livingston Seagull shopping complex. It will operate as a compact store with a retail delicatessen and bakery. The deli will not operate as a restaurant.

Stores hours will be from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily when it reopens in a few weeks. Riddle operates Riddle's Convenience Mart in Hingham, Thornton's Store in Sand Hills (Scituate) and Riddle's in North Scituate.

Daggett chairman

The newly elected board of sewer commissioners met briefly last Thursday, Chairman Janet Daggett said this week. Gerard Stanton was elected clerk and the meeting basically consisted of a updating from Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt. The next meeting of the commissioners will be Tuesday, April 29.

Log ceremony

At a recent ceremony at the Log & Line, at which Ann and Roger Pompeo were presented with a citation from the Mass. House of Representatives for the energies which they contributed to the success of the 13th Winter Olympics — State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray almost killed herself.

It was to be a surprise, and the Pompeos were late, as usual. In the meantime, Mary Jeanette came close to jetting through the picture glass window at the Log in order to save her grandchild from catching a finger in the door.

The grandchild was saved, Mary Jeanette didn't go through the window . . . and the Pompeo's were delighted with their citation.

Pompeo (Dr. Roger) was a physician for the Cross Country Ski Teams at Lake Placid. It is still unknown how Ann contributed to the success of the Winter Olympics.

Lucky May jurors

At a recent meeting of selectmen, the following lucky names were pulled to attend the Dedham Court Criminal Session in May: Nancy Politio, Earla Espito, Cathleen England and Quinton Laue.

Government Is.

"I'm not going to make it look like a palace, I'm just trying to keep it from falling into the harbor," Noel Ripley told selectmen at a recent meeting.

He was referring to the Government Island storage building, which needs repairs desperately. For $2,000 and help from the South Shore Vocational Tech students, Ripley said he could provide new windows, sheet rock, floor joists, and a new sill. Presently, the building is open to the wind.

Ripley, chairman of the historical commission, said he wanted to put the building in proper order before a visit from the National Registry which wishes to put the First Parish Church, Government Island and Minot's Light on its list. Being on the list, Ripley, said, could attract restoration funds for the town.

Condo hearing

A hearing has been scheduled at 8 p.m., May 21 by the planning board to review a site plan for condominiums on Pleasant Street.

In addition, Norfolk Conveyor Company will also have a site plan hearing for an addition to its building on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at 7:45 p.m., May 21.

Shuttle bus

Ten percent ($890) of the $6,200 needed for the town to buy the senior shuttle bus has been obtained from generous local organizations . . . but the Cohasset Rotary Club has a long way and only four days to meet the May 1 deadline for raising the funds.

Over the years the owners of Cohasset Motors have generously allowed the town the use of the bus, but right now the company is between owners, and can not at present time finance that venture.

Persons or organizations interested in contributing to this endeavor should mail checks to the Rotary Club Senior Shuttle Bus, c/o Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, South Main Street, Cohasset 02025.

Beach St. Burglar sentenced

On April 14 a jury of 12 men and women found Thomas Cass, 33, of Brockton guilty of having burglarized home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hubbard of Beach Street on October 27, 1977.

Dedham Court Judge John Irwin sentenced Cass to 12-20 years at the Massachusetts Criminal Institution in Walpole. With good behavior, Cass could be parolled in eight years. A warrant is outstanding for 25-year old Robert Walsh of Braintree, who assisted Cass in the burglarizing of the Hubbard home.

On October, 1977, Cass and Walsh entered the Hubbard home wearing masks and carrying a gun. The men tied up Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard and blindfolded them, while they took mopeds, oriental rugs and other valuables.

Police Sgt. John Rhodes said this week that many of the Hubbard's possessions have been returned.

At the trial, Sgt. Rhodes and Sgt. Richard Barrow were assisted in the presecution by Assistant District Attorney Robert Banks and the following men, also from the District Attorney's office: State Trooper Francis O'Brien and Detective Lieutenant Robert Masuret.

Correction

Families who wish to act as hosts for foreign exchange students should call 267-1141 — not 276-1141, as was reported last week.

TM police detail fuss

In local press circles it got star headlines, but nothing much happened last week when selectmen called Police Chief Randolph Feola in regarding town meeting detail on April 9.

Although the chief agreed that "someone should have been there (on traffic duty) until the last gun was fired," and nobody was. . . the issue behind the scenes appeared to be the conduct of certain police officers at town meeting.

The Mariner has since talked over the situation with that certain police officer who said the reason there was an exodus when a call for the quorum was made was to call for additional voters to vote against selectmen's article which would have pulled the police department out of Civil Service.

Chief Feola pointed out that only two officers went outside during the quorum call. "One was on duty, one was off. There were only two policemen in that group that walked out."

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said: "When the call for the quorum was made, one off-duty policeman told the group to leave."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle rebutted Clark, saying: "That's a privilege anybody has." Selectman Henry Ainslie agreed with Laugelle.

"They could have brought that town meeting to a grinding halt," Clark said.

Feola said he didn't know about that.

"The hell you don't," Clark said, visibly agitated.

"I didn't know about anyone trying to disrupt a meeting," Feola countered.

What I learned at the 6th grade Science Fair

By Tanna Kasperowicz

First of all I immediately learned I should have gone up last Thursday afternoon (as Mrs. Gilmore advised) to see the projects because the Thursday night open house was packed with parents, teachers, friends, food and should have started an hour earlier and ended an hour later.

What a crowd!

Linda O'Loughlin's Cibo Italiano Da Casa Linda project was very impressive and I'm amazed the judges didn't fall for it hook, line and sinker. Not only did Linda make ravioli, she also made her own pasta, a feat I have never dared attempt. She also gave out tasty samples and recipes to passerbys. You got a first from me, Linda!

John Koch's inside of a baseball was also impressive. I always wondered what was inside of them. String and stuff, huh?

If Leah Burkand's bees were displayed in a downtown gift shop she'd sell every one. I also particularly liked Larry Ash's making root beer project because it brought back memories of The Night The Root Beer Blew at my family's home in the 50's. We thought the Russians had attacked.

Being food-oriented, I thought Kevin Quilty's "The Making of a Peter Paul Candy Bar" was mouth-watering. I learned all about before and after enrobing. And I really do believe Jamie Cameron does know all about stocks. From Jamie's project I went on to learn about flowers from Jacqueline Fahey. Having always detested Geraniums, I was glad to learn the name denotes folly and stupidity.

From Suzanne Tehranian I learned sundials can be used either in sunlight or moonlight. And Molly Hochkeppel told me "Ghosts usually dress in the clothes of the people of that particular country." Noel Ripley built a super solar furnace and had it working right there in the Deer Hill gym with the aid of a water pik. I had wondered what he wanted a water pik for last week.

ONE-ARMED PROJECT-MAKER PATRICK SHEERIN, 12, shows off his hockey display at the 6th Grade Science Fair at deer Hill School last week.
